In the common pleas court here Monday morning, Judge C. B. Waller heard the suit of Burnett Demmber vs Samuel Elkin of Colchester over a cow that the defendant sold to the plaintiff in July. It is claimed that the seller guaranteed the animal to be sound and that the cow was bought for $95. ACADEMY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION RE-ELECTS GROSVENOR ELY PRESIDENT

Grosvenor Ely was reelected president of the Alumni Association of the Norwich Free Academy at the association's annual meeting Monday evening in Slater hall. Preceding the business meeting which had an attendance of about 350, there was a reception with music by the Academy orchestra, Frederick L. Cranston, leader. The selections given by the orchestra were, Under Orders, Le Secret and Carmen Sylvia.

President Ely called the business meeting to order about 8.30 o'clock. The report of the secretary, Lee Roy Robbins, was heard and accepted. In the absence of the treasurer, Raymond V. Congdon, his report was read by the assistant treasurer, Bruce Rogers. Edmund W. Perkins, chairman of the memorial committee, spoke briefly of the memorial to the graduates of the Norwich Free Academy who made the supreme sacrifice on the field during the World war. The committee has had the memorial tablet placed in the vestibule, to the right of the main entrance at the academy building. Later in the evening the tablet was unveiled and was inspected by those present at the meeting.

The proposed change in the constitution and by-laws of the association regarding membership and dues came up for discussion The plan, as suggested by the president, would make all graduates, teachers and ex-teachers of the N. F. A., members of the association with voluntary annual dues of fifty cents or a dollar. It is felt that this plan would tend to increase the association membership.

The plan of voluntary dues was tried out this year and resulted in a $135 increase in the association's receipts. After some discussion the matter was referred to the executive committee for further investigation, report and recommendations.

Henry A. Tirrell, principal of the academy and chairman of the nominating committee presented the following list of nominations for officers for the ensuing year:

President: Grosvenor Ely; vice president, W. Tyler Olcott; secretary, Lee Roy Robbins; treasurer, Raymond V. Congdon; assistant treasurer, Bruce Rogers; members of the executive committee for four years, Miss Alma Brown and F. Russell Smith.

BREAKS WRIST AND SUFFERS INTERNAL INJURIES

Herbert F. Burdick of 84 River avenue, foreman for Contractor P. F. Sweeney, had his wrist broken and suffered internal injuries late Monday afternoon in a fall from a girder on a new building for the United Metal Manufacturing company at Thamesville.

The accident happened close to quitting time. Burdick was on the roof, about 25 feet from the ground, and was swinging across from one girder to another when he apparently lost his grip and fell to the ground.

Other workmen at once picked him up and brought him in an automobile to Mr. Sweeneys shop on Chestnut street, from which Mr. Sweeney rushed him to the Backus hospital. Foreman Burdick was suffering intensely and was unable to stand upon his feet. The broken bone in his wrist was protruding through the flesh and it was thought his back was broken.

However, this was not confirmed at the hospital late Monday night, when it was stated that the full extent of his injuries could not be determined yet.

TUBERCULOSIS INCREASING AMONG YOUNG GIRLS

While admitting that there has been lately a marked decline in the number of cases of consumption in adult life and in early childhood, Doctor Cole B. Gibson, superintendent of the Meriden State Tuberculosis Sanatorium contended at the meeting held there Monday morning of the medical staffs of the state sanatoria that there has not only been no recent decline but on the contrary a distinct rise in the number of cases of the disease among the adolescent boys and girls and especially among adolescent girls. The assembled medical officers of the state sanatoria joined in a lively discussion of the probable cause of this strange finding, the reasons for which they could not agree upon, but several of the experts decided to initiate immediate research work on the subject and to report at some future meeting of the commission the coming fall.

Doctor William Carroll, assistant at the Meriden Sanatorium, exhibited and discussed cases of doubtful diagnosis in which he has been assisted by what he called the D'Espine sign.

Doctor Stephen J. Maher, chairman of the State Tuberculosis Commission, discussed the new cures of tuberculosis that have been reported from various places in Europe and America and showed their relationship to what he called the "Non-Orthodox View of the Tubercle Bacillus."

Among those present at the meeting were Wallace S. Allis and Arthur R. Kimball of Norwich and Waterbury, respectively, members of the State Tuberculosis Commission and Directors Bradstreet and F. N. Otis of Meriden.

DESCENDANTS OF FOUNDERS ELECTED THEIR OFFICERS

President, E. A. Tracy; vice president, B. P. Bishop; secretary, Gilbert S. Raymond; treasurer, Mrs. Hezekiah Perkins; registrar, Mrs. E. E. Rogers; chairman of the publicity committee, Mrs. Elizabeth Brewster Davis.

Many new members were admitted, some from different parts of the country. A number of these members joined because of the interest aroused by the reunion of the Huntington family in Norwich last autumn.

During the past year many of the signs marking the historic homes and places about town have been repainted and this work will be continued during the coming year. The society is much interested in the care of the old cemetery at Norwich Town where are the graves of the original settlers and also that of Gov. Huntington, who was a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Our idea of a lucky man is one who never had occasion to change his opinion of himself.

TIFFANY ENVELOPE MACHINE FROM LESTER-WASLEY CO.

Little do local people realize that when they send to Tiffany & Co. in New York for wedding invitations, announcements and envelopes that these same envelopes which bear the Tiffany mark were made on machines built by Lester & Wasley Co. Inc., of Norwich. But such is the case and this firm has just completed a new type of envelope machine which will be shipped this week to the Tiffany company. This machine is one of the newest type and makes envelopes for the engraved wedding invitations and announcements.

The machine is of intricate design and folds, embosses and puts on the mucilage in one operation. The machine is so constructed that by the simple changing of four bolts three sizes of envelopes can be made at the rate of 120 per minute. The machine counts the envelopes and when they come off the conveyor they are ready for use. The Lester & Wasley Co. makes several different models of this machine fitted for various sizes of envelopes.

PIANO PLAYER HALTED BY CRAMP IN FINGERS

Buenos Aires, June 18.—Cramps in his fingers today prevented Cesar Oscar Sacchi, an Argentine younth, from creating a new world's record for continuous piano playing. He cased his efforts after 33 hours, 15 minutes at the keyboard, with the record of 33 hours, as reported from the United States, seemingly within his grasp.

Sacchi blames his failure on "too many tangoes," as this form of syncopation, he says, necessitates a greater strain on the fingers than simple fox trots. He was in the midst of his 325th tango when forced to quit. He took three minutes rest each twelve hours and his only nourishment was milk and coffee.

USE "CANNED HEAT" AS SUBSTITUTE FOR LIQUOR

New York, June 18—"Canned heat," a substitute for hard liquor used in Colorado, is more potent than "bowery smoke" or any other concoction seen in the east, chief of police Grady of Pueblo, Colo., said today. He recently attended the convention of police chiefs at Buffalo and today sat on the bench in magistrate's court.

Canned heat, he said, is solidified alcohol, sold for heating women's curling irons. It is eaten with a spoon and has a strong kick.

An Unfailing Way To Banish Hairs

(Beauty Notes)

Ugly hairy growths can be removed in the privacy of your own home if you get a small original package of delatone and mix into a paste enough of the powder and water to cover the hairy surface. This should be left on the skin about 3 minutes, then removed and the skin washed and every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm or inconvenience can result from this treatment, but be sure you buy real delatone.

LONG ISLAND HAS BECOME PROHIBITION BATTLEGROUND

Enforcement Authorities Startled by Tales of Hostilities and Corruption of Officials—Pitched Battle Between Eight Deputy Sheriffs and 50 or 60 Rum Runners and New York Gunmen, in Which the Deputies Were Driven to Cover—Contending Factions of Bootleggers Skirmished for Two Days for Possession of 1,000 Sacks of Whiskey—Three Deputy Sheriffs Under Suspicion—Officers Have Begun a Campaign to Mop Up the Island.

New York, June 19.—(By the A. P.)—Federal prohibition enforcement authorities, electrified by two of the wildest bootlegging stories that have yet reached their ears, tonight began plotting a campaign to mop up Long Island which, it was disclosed, has been adopted as the newest scene of operations of runners plying to and from the offshore rum fleet.

The wildest of the stories, almost incredible to the ears of the authorities, although vouched for by Sheriff Amza Biggs of Suffolk county, involved a pitched battle between eight deputy sheriffs and some 50 or 60 rum runners and New York gunmen, in which the deputies finally were driven to cover, while armed patrols conveyed a fleet of trucks with nearly 600 cases of liquor to New York. The encounter took place at Greenport.

The other story, vouched for by the police, was the story of a battle at Baldwin between two contending factions of bootleggers for possession of 1,000 sacks of whiskey from the rum fleet, in which the police, acting as armed mediators, captured the liquor and four men.

Two Days of Skirmishing

The fight at Greenport last night, according to Sheriff Biggs, was the culmination of two days of skirmishing, which started when a vessel of unknown identity slipped into Greenport early Sunday morning and unloaded her liquid cargo into waiting trucks.

The sheriff, advised of the landing—but too late to get men on the spot—sent his deputies out to find some traces of it. It remained for Sidney Smith, a citizen, however, to discover the cache, and he paid for it by the loss of an ear, which was shot off as he stood before the house in which it had been stored. A warrant charging Captain Fred Davis, a fisherman, with the shooting has been issued.

Smith, who lives near Captain Davis' home, heard suspicious sounds Sunday afternoon, and set out to do a bit of sleuthing. As he neared the house, a woman opened the door, emitted a scream, and banged it shut again. A moment later the door was thrown open again and a man whom Smith identified as Captain Davis, struck him with a shotgun.

Smith notified Sheriff Riggs and the latter rushed four deputies to the house. Lying in the grass, they observed several men loading cases on a truck. They ran down the road, ambushed themselves and halted the truck as it came by.

They arrested Ernest Martin of Westbury, the driver, and John Monahan and Joseph Kolbacher who accompanied him, and seized the truck containing 60 cases of liquor.

Ten Gunmen From New York

Word of the seizure quickly reached the whiskey runners' garrison and, as the sheriff learned later, a hurry call was telephone to New York for reinforcements. Ten gunmen arrived that evening on a Long Island train and were whisked from the station to Captain Davis' house in a big touring car.

Meanwhile, the sheriff had sent his available force of eight men out with orders to capture the stronghold. They advanced about dusk, but were quickly driven to cover by a volley from the house.

When they advanced again, shortly before midnight, they found the beleaguered rum runners had thrown out outposts, and there were several lively exchange of shots, the deputies again taking cover.

A half hour later, a big touring car roared down the road toward the house. Two of the deputies attempted to halt it but it passed them at high speed and as it flashed by, the deputies got a glimpse of glinting gun barrels, and grim faced men. This car also pulled up at the Davis house and soon a counter attack was begun, which sent the deputies scurrying from the neighborhood.

Then the rum runners loaded their stock into trucks and, using touring cars for convoys, escorted the caravan at breakneck speed toward New York. Deputies who tried to head off one truck with their automobile, were crowded out by a convoy car which almost sent them into the ditch, while lewalled pistols and shotguns warned them it was advisable to abandon thoughts of capture.

The three prisoners taken yesterday were arraigned before Justice Burnside at Riverhead this morning. Martin was held in $1,000 bail on a charge of violating the Sullivan anti-pistol law, while the other two were sent to Brooklyn to face federal authorities on charges of violating the Volstead act.

Found Arms and Liquor In Car

A short time after the arraignment, a car drove up to the Riverhead jail and William Martin and Clarence Coomba, the latter a widely known aviator hopped out, offering to provide bail for Ernest Martin, a brother of one of the visitors. While they were in the jail a deputy searched their car and found in it four shotguns, several automatics and a quantity of liquor. The pair were arrested on charges of violating the Sullivan law.

While these developments were being recorded at Greenport, the police of Baldwin early this morning were called out by a reported attempt to burglarize the home of Edward W. Pruden. Shots were being exchanged as they arrived, and a few minutes later several men darted out and disappeared in the woods. The police rushed the house and captured Pruden, John Tiellow and Frank Jones, the former admitting ownership of the house. He denied ownership of the 1,000 sacks of liquor found in the cellar, however. A short time later, Adrian Klein put in an appearance, and was arrested when, according to the police, he admitted ownership of the liquor.

Two men got away, the captives said. They declared these men were whiskey bandits who were attempting to force them to load the liquor on trucks just as the police arrived.

All four were brought to Brooklyn for arraignment before a United States commissioner on charges of violating the Volstead act.

Overrun With Rum Runners

Sheriff Biggs told the Associated Press tonight that Long Island, particularly the tip of it, was literally overrun with bootleggers and rum runners. The business has increased amazingly since the repeal of the Mullan-Gage state prohibition enforcement law, he said. He pointed out that he was powerless to get search warrants without making a trip to New York, where the nearest United States commissioners are located, and said he was having a hard time keeping anything like a semblance of law enforcement going in his territory.

"I have my force out night after night trying to enforce the law," he said, "but the limited number of men I have at my disposal and the handicap we are under since the state law was repealed make it almost impossible for me to do anything. This county is surrounded on three sides by water, and the runners use one port after another, usually keeping one jump ahead of the sheriff."

Sheriff Riggs said that rum ships had laid off Montauk Point almost continuously for the past five months, but that the number had increased and their activities multiplied many fold in the last few weeks.

Deputy Sheriffs Implicated

That the rum runners do not limit their efforts to "get through" to gunplay, however, was indicated in reports from Mineola, Long Island today, which said that three deputy sheriffs were facing grand jury action on charges of complicity in rum running.

The trio—Charles W. Hanson, Lafferts Williamson and Arnold Youngen, were dismissed yesterday "for the good of the service," and District Attorney Weeks announced impending grand jury action today. He would present evidence to that body Friday, he said, indicating that the three were in a conspiracy with rum runners to purchase a waterfront house in which they would store and offer "protection to supplies brought in from the rum fleet."

Counsel for Hanson today announced his determination to appeal to Governor Smith for appointment of a special attorney general to investigate charges and counter charges of great rum running conspiracies that were loosed by the dismissal of the three men.

TROTZKY ADDRESSES RUSSIAN CONGRESS OF METAL WORKERS

Moscow, June 19 (By the A. P.)—An attack on England, hints of a Russo-French reapproachment and a plea for "more metal in our national character" marked an address by Leon Trotzky, soviet war minister today before the all-Russian Congress of Metal Workers.

"If an ultimatum is presented to us," he exclaimed, referring to the recent British notes, "let us create a detachment of airplanes. If a coup d'etat occurs in Bulgaria, let us build another detachment of airplanes, and if there is a coup d'etat in Persia, build more planes.

"The iron in our will must be transferred to the iron wings of airplanes; then we can say, looking high above at our squadrons, 'This is the coup d'etat in Persia'—and so on. If we transform the criminalities of the bourgeoisie into airplanes, then perhaps we shall be able some time to bring an end to their criminalities."

M. Trotzky said England and Italy had, according to information at hand, assisted in the coup d'etat in Bulgaria, and the British had aided in the nationalist overthrow in Persia.

Meiklejohn Ousted as President of Amherst

His Educational Policies Were Too Liberal for Alumni and Faculty Members

Amherst, Mass., June 19.—Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn resigned today as president of Amherst college after he had received formal notice from the trustees that they and a majority of the faculty considered it inadvisable for him to continue as the administrative head of the institution.

In his letter of resignation Dr. Meiklejohn declined to accept the judgment of the trustees as to the wisdom of the step. He said he was convinced that the situation was such that his withdrawal would be harmful rather than helpful, but in view of a certain lack of support he felt compelled to sever his connection with the college. He declined the board's invitation that he continue in the chair of logic and metaphysics.

The resignation is to take effect in June, 1924, and meanwhile according to the resolution passed by the board, Dr. Meiklejohn will be granted leave of absence for one year. The announcement by George A. Plimpton, chairman of the trustees, came this afternoon at the conclusion of the annual meeting of the board which lasted several hours. This meeting followed a long conference last night of a committee of the trustees with Dr. Meiklejohn regarding his educational policies which many of the alumni and faculty members have come to regard as too liberal in tendency to coincide with the traditions of the college.

The statement of the trustees was as follows:

"Mr. George A. Plimpton announced that President Meiklejohn has resigned as president of Amherst college and as professor in the college and that his resignation has been accepted.

"Mr. Plimpton at the same time made public the following letters between President Meiklejohn and himself, and the resolution of the board passed this day:

"June 19, 1923.

"Dear President Meiklejohn: I am very sorry to advise you that in the opinion of the board of trustees it is inadvisable that you continue as the administrative head of the college, and that a majority of the faculty believe it to be in the best interests of the college that you relinquish the administrative duties.

"The board desires you to continue in the service of the college in your present professorship of logic and metaphysics. I express my strong personal wish and I think the wishes of my associates when I say that I hope you may see your way to remain with us as a member of the faculty.

"The board as you know, meets tomorrow, and upon the receipt of your reply will wish to take appropriate action.

"Respectfully yours,

"GEORGE PLIMPTON,
"President of the board."

"In reply to this letter under date of today, Dr. Meiklejohn wrote:

"Dear Mr. Plimpton:

"In response to your letter of June 19, may I say very frankly that I do not accept the judgment which you give us to the wisdom of my withdrawing from the position of administration head of the college. I am convinced that the situation is such that my withdrawal will be harmful rather than helpful.

"The lack of support of which you speak of is, however, so serious that I feel compelled to tender my resignation as president of the college. Much as I appreciate the invitation to continue my services as professor of logic and meaphysics, it seems impossible for me to accept.

"Sincerely your,
"ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN."

FRENCH MAY DISTRIBUTE FOOD IN THE RUHR

Essen, June 19.—(By The A. P.)—The food situation in the Ruhr reached such a serious phase today because of transportation difficulties that the French military authorities let it be known if it became any worse the forces of occupation would undertake to haul German food cars from the frontier to central distribution points.

The situation confronting the Germans, who have refused to co-operate with the French, has been rendered more difficult by lack of motor trucks and gasoline. If the Germans are unable to distribute food by private railroads and automobiles, it is understood the French will haul food cars from one point to another over the militarized railway lines.

WIDESPREAD DEVASTATION BY THE ERUPTION OF MT. ETNA

A Lava Bed 800 Yards Wide and Nearly 30 Feet Deep is Advancing 40 Yards an Hour on the Town of Linguaglossa—For Miles Around the Atmosphere is Suffocating With Volcanic Smoke—Special Unit of the Red Cross, With All Supplies, Has Been Sent to Care for the Homeless Wanderers and Provide Shelter for Them—King Victor Emanuel Leaves Rome to Direct the Work of Rescue—Premier Mussolini is Proceeding to the Scene.

Catania, Italy, June 19.—(By the A. P.)—The great lava torrent from Mt. Etna, bearing in its flow great masses of earth and volcanic stone, is advancing inexorably and has already reached the houses in the outskirts of the town of Linguaglossa. Green fields, orange groves and vineyards have been swallowed up, and for miles around the atmosphere is suffocating with volcanic smoke and a rain of black smoke and ashes which is covering the lovely countryside like a pall.

Several of the smaller houses in Linguaglossa have been shaken down by the frequent earth shocks, and the once smiling little town is directly in the line of the lava and is doubtless doomed to destruction.

The molten stream is traveling about forty yards an hour, and, unless some Kmiracle happens, Linguaglossa will go under during the night. Confronting it is a lava bed 800 yards wide and nearly 30 feet deep.

Smaller torrents of lava, diverted from the central stream, threaten the villages of Randazzo and Bronte, from which so many tourists make the ascent of Etna, Francavilla, Castiglione, Giardini and Fiume Freddo.

Inhabitants Abandoning Homes

The work of clearing the threatened towns is being carried out with admirable organization, Discipline is necessary to induce the terrified inhabitants to abandon their beloved homes, but their removal is carried out with sympathy and kindness. Airplanes are being used for the first time to watch the progress of the eruption and special signalling stations have been established at various strategical points, giving confindence to the people in the fact that they are being protected. Special units of the Red Cross with all supplies have been despatched to care for the homeless wanderers and provide food and shelter for them.

A new stream of lava on the western side of Etna menaces the Giarre junction on the Etna railway. According to leading volcanologists six new craters have opened, only two of which, however, are of the first importance. In these can clearly be seen the lava in frightful turmoil being ejected in irregular spurts and vast clouds of fumes and ashes, forming two streams of liquid death, one of which is rolling down on Linguaglossa, the other moving toward Sciaro pass, but threatening no inhabited points, though causing immense damage to the vineyards and nut plantations which constituted the wealth of the countryside.

Service Invoking Mercy

A solemn service invoking mercy was held in the ancient beech forest at Castiglione. Owing to the shade of the trees and the darkness caused by the ashes, the light was too feeble for the reading of the gospel, and torches were utilized. The nearness of the stream of lava was such that before the end of the service the edge of the forest caught fire; the air was so hot and vitiated by sulphurous fumes that breathing was difficult, and some of the people were so alarmed at the danger that they started to depart, at which the old priest officiating rebuked them and lengthened the service by adding prayer for the faint-hearted.

King to Direct Rescue Work

The news that King Victor Emmanuel is starting immediately for the scene of the disaster to direct the work of rescue has given much cheer to the people. All convents and other ecclesiastical buildings have been turned into huge shelters for the refugees, who crowd them. The monks throughout the area are helping in the salvage and giving spiritual and material help to the stricken.

The fury of Etna has not abated; the country has been laid waste and presents a desolate spectacle. The lava has spread almost to the sea at one point, between Messina and Taormina, and intervening villages have been obliterated.

After a short cessation last night the flow of lava started again in full strength this morning from several new fissures, one of which is nearly two miles around.

Most of the population of Giarre have moved down to the seaside town of Riposto and the remainder are ready to leave at a signal from the watchers outside the town. The glow of the eruption is visible from Naples, 200 miles away, while from Palermo, 86 miles distance, the flames can be seen shooting into the air.

Mussolini Proceeding to Catania.

Rome, June 19.—Premier Mussolini will proceed to Catania, after his return from his Piacenza visit, according to the Giornale D'Italia.

Former Premier Orlando will also proceed immediately to the Mount Etna area.

STONES SUBSTITUTED FOR EXPORT SHIPMENTS

New Haven, June 19.—International export robberies of some extent are said to have been substantiated today when the local customs office delivered to a local firm a bonded box containing rocks. This box came from Callao, Peru, by request. In this box was a brick partly covered with mortar, one cobble stone taken from a street, and a piece of stone from a building.

Two Connecticut firms—The Kolynos company of New Haven, the J. B. Williams Company of Glastonbury—shipping their product to South America and the Orient, have been receiving word that the cases on arrival contained stones. A long inquiry developed the fact that substitutions of stones for goods occurred during transit, and labels made for goods offered for sale in foreign countries were found upon merchandise offered for sale in New York city. The Kolynos company ordered its Peruvian agent to return a box under bond and this box bond was delivered by the customs department today.

COMMONS VOTES RETENTION OF THE DUTY ON SUGAR

London, June 19.—The house of commons today rejected a liberal amendment to the finance bill calling for a reduction in the duty on sugar. The vote was 371 to 181.

The house of commons on Monday rejected by a vote of 257 to 153 a labor amendment to the finance bill proposing the abolition of the duty on sugar. Herbert H. Asquith had previously urged a substantial reduction in the duty, saying he did not believe the country was so completely at the mercy of the New York speculators that the whole of such a reduction would go into their pockets. Sir William Joynson-Hicks, financial secretary of the treasury, cited an official statement of the American government relative to sugar, made last February. He said it would be inadvisable to do anything now that would increase the consumption of sugar, which would be only playing into the hands of "the American ring."

PRIVATE HEARING GIVEN CHINESE AT ELLIS ISLAND

New York, June 19.—The fifteen battle-scarred Chinese, who drifted into Quarantine June 10 on the small schooner Mary Beatrice, with a tale of a pitched battle at sea in which five Chinese and four of the crew were killed, were given a private hearing at Ellis Island by immigration officials today to determine their status under the exclusion act. The findings of the special board of inquiry will be transmitted to Secretary of Labo Davis, will review the case and render a decision. The question of criminal charges resulting from the sea battle was not bonaidered, a deputy in charge declared.

Shortly after the special board of inquiry had convened, the Chinese bureau of immigration service held a private hearing, also at Ellis Island, at which it was definitely decided to deport the fifteen Chinese to China. Cuban officials refused to allow them to be returned to the Cuban port from which they departed in the Mary Beatrice.

WILLIMANTIC THREAD MAKERS HAVE AGREED TO ARBITRATE

Willimantic, June 19.—The intervention of Gen. Robert M. McWade, conciliator and arbitrator for the U. S. Labor Board tonight averted a threatened strike of approximately 600 operators employed by the local plant of the American Thread Company.

The operators had announced that they would go on strike tomorrow unless the company restored the "allowances and averages," in the wages which were abolished some time ago. The company refused to make any concessions and a meeting of the operators was held tonight to plan further action.

Thomas F. McMahon, of Providence, R. I., president of the International Textile Workers of America, and Gen. McWade attended the meeting and addressed the men.

Gen. McWade advised them not to strike but to arbitrate their grievances with the company in the hope of a compromise. He said that the United States Labor Board would take the matter up with the American Thread Company and would present the case to them. His suggestion was accepted and strike plans were abandoned for the time being.

NORWICH BULLETIN
26 Church Street Telephone 1000

Joseph Gagne and Miss Blanche Cadorette were married Tuesday morning at eight o'clock in St. Mary's church by Rev. J. J. Papillon. Rev. Father Papillon also sang the nuptial high mass. The bridal couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Holland. St. Cecelia's choir, with Mrs. Joseph F. Gaudreau at the organ, rendered special music during the ceremony and mass.

The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of canton crepe with a hat to match and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Holland wore brown velour. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Coulombe at 1057 Main street and many relatives and friends were present.

Later in the forenoon Mr. and Mrs. Gagne departed on their honeymoon trip and upon their return they will make their home at 32 Lebanon Avenue. Mr. Gagne is employed by Williams A. Dezenbo florist and Mrs. Gagne had been employed at the plant of the Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing Company.

About the same time that this city is faced with the great problem of parking its automobiles, certain industrious residents are being deprived of a parking place for themselves. The deprivation comes with the tearing down of the old stone wall which had adorned the south side of Main street opposite Walnut street for a good many years. In turn, the wall has been adorned perpetually by the above mentioned gentlemen, who now grieve in the advent of a new theatre building which is causing the removal of the wall. The city "sitters" will not have to resort to the old habit of standing on the street corner and as this is objectionable in many ways, and tiresome besides, it has become more evident that Willimantic is much in need of a public park situated in nearby location.

A pitched battle in an open pasture on the Columbia town state highway Tuesday, was the cause of much excitement in that place and attracted the attention of a number of passing autoists. The whole trouble arose over a jumping cow owned by Solomon Schachnowits, proprietor of the Hop River village store and the ensuing battle was between the owner of the cow, his brother Louis versus Nick Nameck on the opposing side. The fight was in the latter's lot and resulted in a bad beating for the latter.

When spectators finally succeeded in having the parties agree to an armistice, a cry for justice was made and the men were driven to this city to tell their troubles to the police.

When the triangle fighters entered the police station here, Nameck had a firm grip on Solomon's shirt which was then on the verge of departing from its owner's back. Judging from appearances, Acting Chief Allan McArthur took it for granted that Nameck was a constable and a great deal of explanation was divulged before matters were cleared up.

As the miniature side of "Verdun" was out of the jurisdiction of the local department and there were no constables in Columbia, a call was sent to Stafford Springs for a state policeman and Officer Fred T. Caron soon appeared and after placing the trio under arrest he escorted the men to Columbia to be tried before Justice of the Peace Hubert P. Collins.

As the story goes one of the four cows belonging to Solomon Schachnowitz jumped from the latter's pasture to a lot owned by Nameck. Nameck called the owner of the animal to witness the damage caused by the animal and when the proprietor asked where his cow was, he was told by Nameck that it was locked up in the latter's barn. Then things began to happen and Nameck, who is tall and strong, was fast disposing of the short and stout Schachnowitz who began to feel the impending defeat and started to chew on Nameck's left hand. Nameck in turn began to see this aboriginal tactic when Louis Schanowitz joined the fray with a wagon stake. Apparently the stake did not suffice and Louis whipped out a knife with which he hacked Nameck's thumb. Nameck said that he fought for dear life and was on the verge of victory over the two brothers when the battle was interrupted.

The Schachnowitz brothers are Russian Hebrew and Nameck is a Russian Pole.

Solomon Schachnowitz and Nameck were both charged with assault and breach of the peace to which they pleaded not guilty. Judge Collins imposed a fine of one dollar and costs in each case, amounting to $18.13 which was paid. The state was represented by Grand Juror D. A. Lyman.

The Willimantic Rotarians heard much of interest on the subject of "Telephones" at the weekly luncheon Tuesday noon, through a talk given by A. Linn Weatherhead, manager of the local exchange of the Southern New England Telephone Company and a fellow Rotarian. President James P. Mustard presided at the session. DODGE BROTHERS
TOURING CAR

If there is one word which will sum up the average owner's impression of Dodge Brothers Touring Car, that word is dependable.

If there is a word to express the quality which Dodge Brothers have striven, above all else, to build into the Touring Car, it is—again—dependable.

Indeed, it is not too much to say that the word dependable has come to be definitely associated, the nation over, with Dodge Brothers Touring Car—and the other vehicles bearing their name.

Nor have Dodge Brothers built this enviable reputation through advertising. They have built motor cars, so dependable in fact that the word has presented itself automatically to the public mind.

Broadway Theatre.

Hearts Aflame, announced as one of the biggest spectacular photoplays of recent years, is to be presented at the Broadway theatre on Thursday where it will begin a run of three days. It is Reginald Barker's latest production, released by Metro, and it adds considerably to the fame of this director of big pictures.

One thing in particular has attracted widespread attention in connection with this picture, and that is a vivid and exciting forest fire, which is said to surpass anything of the kind ever before presented in motion pictures. In order to reproduce it for screen purposes, a tract of timber was ignited and twenty cameras photographed it from many angles. It is through this raging blaze that Anna Q. Nillson runs a locomotive; and in staging this realistic episode the celebrated screen actress was painfully burned. Her injuries kept her confined in a hospital for several weeks.

The forest fire is one of several big scenes in the picture. There is, in addition, the blowing up of a dam, done to release thousands of logs which lay stranded and imprisoned. Another big scene is the dynamiting of a hillside, necessary to prevent the spread of the forest fire.

In addition to these thrills, there is a story of unusual interest. It concerns a young man who leaves his millionaire father's home and goes to the Michigan woods in order to "make good." There he meets an aggressive miss, who single-handed, has defeated the aims of the neighboring lumbermen, intent on depriving her of her valuable timber tract. A romance begins between them; and circumstances send them together through the flaming forest in the cab of an old locomotive.

In the cast are Frank Keenan, who returns to the screen after a period of retirement; Anna Q. Nillson, the brave miss of the Michigan woods; Craig Ward, as the son of a wealthy father who leaves his home to redeem himself. Others are Richard Hendrick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Stanton Heck, Martha Mattox, Ralph Cloninger, Lee Shumway and Irene Hunt.

Hearts Aflame was produced for Louis B. Mayer. It was adapted by J. G. Hawks and L. G. Rigby from Harold Titus' novel, Timber. The photography is the work of Percy Hilliburn. Walter Mayo was assistant director.

A comedy and News will be the short subjects.

The Lady—You look strong and healthy—you ought to be able to work.

Tactful Tim—True, lady, and you are beautiful enough to be on the films, but you seem to prefer the simple life.—London Opinion.

HARDDIGS AND NUGGETS BATTLE TO 6 TO 6 TIE GAME LAST EVENING

The Harddigs battled the Nuggets to a 6 to 6 tie in eight innings at the Fairgrounds Tuesday evening in a game that was featured by the pitching of Mike Kelley for the Nuggets. The Nuggets played a rather loose game at times, especially George Maddox, who did the catching for the Nuggets. The Harddigs put up a very good exhibition of baseball and outclassed the Nuggets in every department except the pitching, but the breaks of the game went against them and the best they could do was to hold the Nuggets to a tie score.

Kelley, although wild at times, had 12 strikeouts to his credit, accounting for more than half of the putouts of his team. Siegal also pitched good ball and received good support. The outstanding feature of the game was the catching of O. K. Madden, who donned the mask and mitt at the last minute. George, although credited with five glaring errors, did the best he could and filled the position with commendable ability, although ridden hard by the fans. The score:

BROWNS MAKE IT THREE STRAIGHT FROM BOSTON

Boston, June 19.—St. Louis made it three straight over Boston by winning 13 to 7 today. The winners used five pitchers while Boston used three. Schliebner continued his heavy hitting, making four hits, including a homer over the left field fence off Fullerton in the seventh with Williams on base. Shocker finished up effectively for the visitors although he pitched a full game yesterday. The score:

WHITE SOX HAND ATHLETICS BAD LACING

Philadelphia, June 19.—Chicago drove "Slim" Harris off the mound today and handed Philadelphia a lacing 12 to 3. SENATORS WIN FROM INDIANS IN SEE-SAW GAME

Washington, June 19.—Washington twice came from behind to take the second game of the series from Cleveland today, 7 to 6. Smith was invincible until the 7th when he was batted out of the box and while his successor issued passes to the three men he faced, forcing in the tying run, Connolly and Luitzke of the visitors made circuit clouts, each scoring a runner ahead and a freak homer was made by Pitch Hitter Brower in the 9th, the ball careening off the pavilion railing through an opening at the end of the fence. Hits by Hargrave, Goslin, Rice and Ruel, combined with errors by Sewell, gave the locals their winning margin in the final inning. The score:

Although Baltic was reinforced by two Riverview players, Sterling handed them a string of goose eggs while the Sterling boys pounded the Baltic hurler hard and scored nine runs. PLANS BEING MADE FOR VILLA-GENARO BOUT

New York, June 19.—Plans already are under way, according to Tom Moore, Polo Grounds matchmaker for another world's flyweight title bout, bringing together Pancho Villa, the new champion, who toppled Jimmy Wilde from the throne last night, and Frankie Genaro, of New York, who won the American 112-pound crown from the Filipino last March. Villa has signed a contract for the match, which O'Rourke plans to stage about September 1.

Though still weak and bruised from the terrific punishment he absorbed in losing his title to Villa, Wilde was declared today by physicians to be in no danger from his injuries. Propped up in bed in his Jersey City quarters, the little Welshman, who was hailed by critics as one of the gamest battlers of all time, was able to receive a few of his close friends.

Revised figures today on the championship bout, announced by promoters, placed the paid attendance at 28,000 and the receipts at $94,580 considerably below the totals of 40,000 for the crowd and $160,000 for the receipts as estimated last night. On the basis of the new figures, Wilde's share, 27 1-2 per cent. was about $36,000, and Villa's, 12 1-2 per cent. amounted to $12,000.

BENNY LEONARD AND LEW TENDLER MATCHED FOR LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE

New York, June 19.—(By The A. P.)—Benny Leonard, of New York, world's lightweight champion, will defend his title in a 15-round match with Lew Tendler, Philadelphia southpaw, at the Yankee Stadium on the night of July 23. The boxers, together with their managers late today signed contracts for the bout with the newly organized Cromwell club, which has obtained ring privileges at the American League Park.

Immediately after the announcement of the match, Tex Rickard notified Leonard that he would hold the champion to the terms of an agreement made last year for a title bout with Charley White, of Chicago, to be staged at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City. At the same time Rickard had before the New Jersey boxing commission his claim to first call on Leonard's services.

Billy Gibson, Leonard's manager, when advised of Rickard's action, declared, however, that the agreement he had previously made with White did not prevent him from signing for the Tendler match. The White-Leonard go, originally slated to have been held last fall, was postponed indefinitely because of an injury to the champion's mouth, according to Rickard, the contract is binding now that Leonard is ready to stake his title claim.

Financial terms for the Tendler-Leonard contest, it was understood, called for the champion to receive 37 1-2 per cent. of the gross receipts and Tendler 15 1-2 per cent. Cromwell A. C. officials estimated that the fight would attract a "gate" of $400,000 on which basis Leonard would receive about $150,000 and Tendler $60,000.

Tendler and Leonard have been bitter ring rivals for a long time. They fought a slashing 12-round no-decision bout at Boyle's Thirty Acres last July, in which the champion was credited with a narrow margin of victory, although the Philadelphian had him on the verge of a knockout in the eighth round.

Leonard returned to the ring recently after several months of idleness and knocked out Pinkie Mitchell, Milwaukee welterweight at Chicago.

AUSTRALIA HAS HIGH RANKING TENNIS TEAM

New York, June 19.—An expression of high hope for the Australian Davis cup teams, which is due to arrive at Vancouver soon and proceed to South Orange, N. J., for its first American zone match against Hawaii, has been received by the United States Lawn Tennis association from Antipodean tennis authorities.

The contest as South Orange will be played July 26, 27 and 28, the winner to meet the survivor of the Japan-Canada tie, which takes place at Montreal on the same dates, in the final American zone match at Chicago August 7, 8 and 9. The Australian enthusiasts believe their team will advance through the American zone matches and continue to the position of challenging nations for the Davis cup.

J. O. Anderson, by regent and impressive victories over Gerald Patterson, has become the Australian ace, with J. B. Hawkes, another veteran internationalist whose game has shown marked improvement, and W. B. Schlesinger and L. D. McNabb, the colts of the team, whose sensational play has been one of the features of tennis in Australia in the last year. The outfit from the Antipodes is believed to be of the highest rating.

YALE TAKES CLOSE GAME FROM HARVARD

New Haven, June 19.—Before a crowd estimated at 20,000 persons, Yale today won the first game of the annual commencement series with Harvard, 3 to 2. Ray Pond, who held Princeton to 4 hits last Saturday yielded only 5 to the Crimson and turned in his second victory in the "big three" series.

Young, who pitched for Harvard, held the Elis to 4 hits. Harvard scored twice in the third. Yale's big inning was the sixth when two Harvard errors and two clean hits helped to put three runs across the plate.

THE PLAYGROUNDS.

With the approach of the close of school in the cities there is reached the time when greater dependence is placed upon the playgrounds of a community. This doesn't mean that it is the only time when they are needed or used, for in many cities they are an all year round institution. They are needed and used in the middle of winter, they are utilized by larger numbers as the milder weather arrives and they are the outlet for the pent up enthusiasm of the youngsters through spring, summer and autumn.

The playground idea was inaugurated in days when the highway had been the playground for many and when the increasing dangers were recognized as too serious to ignore. There was likewise the recognition of the fact that the children were entitled to adequate provisions for play and a place to indulge their natural proclivities.

Through the establishment of fitting places and the equipment of them with the needed apparatus boys and girls have had their minds occupied, turned in other channels than mischief and even though school is out for the long vacation they are under proper supervision during the summer months and out of the way of the menacing automobiles.

The streets are no longer proper places for children to play. They are places where the parents as well as the children must look well to their safety and have a care as to where and how they cross.

Norwich long since endorsed the idea of the playgrounds and the announcement that he number will be increased this year is bound to be pleasing to both the children and the parents. They have long since become a fixture for which no substitute has as yet appeared.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Industrial activity tells the story of the conditions throughout the country. When the mills and factories are busy and running overtime, when it is impossible to get sufficient help and when there are additions being erected to plants there are unmistakable signs of good times. It is good business that makes the wheels go.

But that is not the only way in which it is being emphatically demonstrated that the American people are benefiting by the present day conditions. Not only are they being provided with plenty of employment but they are getting good wages and by the use that is being made of such wages it became evident that they are, at least in many instances, guarding against the rainy day. It may be due to conversions to the recognition of the value of thrift or it may be that the good examples of others are being emulated. But whatever it is, the fact that the deposits in the savings banks show steady and large gains and the amounts put into life insurance show an abnormal increase tell the story of prosperity.

According to figures, which have been disclosed there has been an increase of 22 per cent. in the amount of life insurance issued during the first five months of the year as compared with the same months of a year ago. Where policies totalled $3,600,000,000 were issued in 1922 the aggregate sum for this year is $3,194,000,000 or a gain of more than a half billion in 40 of the leading insurance companies of the country. It tells the same story as the growing deposits of the savings banks.

As the country increases in population and the value of saving and protection is recognized bank and insurance figures are expected to grow, but it is when unusual increases are shown that it is manifest that better than average times are at hand. It means that many of the people are not only getting some of the prosperity but they are making excellent use of it with a view to the future.

AIRPLANE LEGISLATION.

When Kansas enacted its industrial court law it was evident that it was sure to attract the attention of the other states. That is exactly what it did and they have been watching it ever since and noting its experiences in the enforcement of such a law.

There are states which are disposed to make a forward step where others may hesitate. There are those which seem to like to show the way or to show up the bad points in legislation about which there has been much agitation. They render a service to others as well as to themselves. They stand in the position of pot being afraid just because there's a chance of a mistake being made.

Kansas is one of those and beginning the first of next month there will go into effect there a state law dealing with aviation. Much has been urged in behalf of federal legislation that would deal with aviation and perhaps it will be through the experiments and experience of Kansas that an adequate federal law will be hastened.

By its new law Kansas requires that every aviator must be examined by an expert airplane engineer and by an experienced airman. He must demonstrate his skill and every operator of an airplane must be a licensed aviator and there must be an airplane number prominently displayed.

Cities are authorized to establish landing places, aviators must maintain a height of not less than a thousand feet over cities are forbidden to do stunts over cities and towns, or to fly low over farms where horses and cattle might be frightened. They are also prohibited from endangering crowds at fairs and similar places.

There is nothing very radical or unnecessarily restrictive in such legislation in view of the conditions which have been disclosed from time to time. The importance of properly protecting those within the machine as well as those under it has been taken into consideration. Kansas has responded to the demand for restricting relative to the airplane. It is a demand that comes with the rapid strides in aviation and it is only what other states are bound to find necessary, sooner or later, if the same situation is not covered by federal laws.

ARTHUR H. BREWER.

Death claims one of Norwich's most prominent citizens in the sudden passing of Arthur H. Brewer. His influence has been used in industrial and banking circles of the city and vicinity for a long period of years. Probably no citizen of the present day has been more conspicuously identified with the business activities of Norwich than was the deceased. They began long years ago as the successor of a similarly prominent townsman and they continued to the day of his death. In later years they have been somewhat modified, but they were nevertheless potent and effective to the very end.

Mr. Brewer was at all times an outstanding citizen. No cause that was for the welfare of the community escaped his attention or support. He was public spirited to the echo, a loyal son of the Rose of New England, a strong defender of its institutions and a leader in those activities that spelled progress and development. He was a man of strong convictions and stood manfully by them.

Successively did he go from business administration to the boards of directors and officers of some of the leading industries of the city and this part of the state, and to similar activities in connection with the banks of the city, having held at the time of his death the highly important positions of president of the Norwich Savings Society and president of the Thames National bank. Politically he was an ardent republican and he always found time to give valuable aid to his party as well as to the long list of fraternal, patriotic and church organizations.

Norwich could have had a citizen whose influence has reached out into so many circles without having appreciated the benefecence thereof, or without realizing at his death that it has suffered a pronounced loss. Men of his accomplishments, men of his type and character, men of such high ideals are bound to leave their mark.

THE RESULT IN MINNESOTA.

If we can judge by the returns which are available from the Minnesota primary at this time the republicans of that state have placed in nomination for United States Senator Governor Preus, the man who had been picked by the late Senator Knute Nelson as his successor and a man who is regarded therefore as a supporter of the administration as against that element which has manifested itself in behalf of certain radical policies.

There have been times when nomination in Minnesota was equivalent to election. The entrance of the non-partisan leaguers, the farmer-labor influence and LaFolletteism have changed that situation somewhat. For that reason some uncertainty has been displayed regarding the primary. Nevertheless with the state through a small vote disclosing its preference as to nomination there are good reasons for believing that the sentiment thus expressed represents the wishes of a sufficient number to insure election.

Minnesota for years received the benefit of the hard headed representation given it by Knute Nelson, who died in the harness. He knew the situation in the state and he knew what was for the best interests of that commonwealth at Washington. He spoke both for what the state representation had been and what it has given evidence of becoming when he favored Preus as his successor. Apparently his advice has been heeded.

LIKELY TO BE SO.

"I have always had quite a good time to let on that we were rich," said Mrs. Simmons' niece. "About the greatest time that there we were up at Cowwoods, you know and now he can get even with me."

"It isn't always safe to laugh too hard at once's troubles or gains," declared Mrs. Simmons. "I remember once how Mr. Simmons laughed at me when I did not know that potatoes are green before they are cooked, and Mr. Simmons had that for a joke on me for ages. But it was not long after that that I heard him tell a man that he wore warm bombazine for underwear. That made us even. Of course I know he meant belbriggan and that bombazine was an old word he had heard in his early youth, but I pretended it was something outlandish."

"George acknowledges that he has a very poor memory," said her niece. "And I have always boasted of having a good one, so I have had to mind my stead."

"It's a great mistake to have anything like that to live up to," said Mrs. Simmons, shaking her head. "I remember telling Mr. Simmons when we became engaged that I never burned anything and my cakes were always light. Of course, a little exaggeration was excusable in a newly engaged girl, but it happened that he remembered what I said and boasted of it to friends.

"As luck would have it, some of these friends came to call five minutes after I had let a cake burn to a crisp in the oven. The whole house was full of the smell of burned cake and they could not help noticing it. I had heard Mr. Simmons tell them many times that I was such a careful cook, so I was extremely mortified. I thought it would teach your uncle not to boast about me, but he has never been cured."

"Terrible!" sighed her niece.

"Moreover, I remember the first time I cooked a meat pie," continued Mrs. Simmons. "Your uncle cut into it and then called the waitress I had hired for the occasion and sent it out. Some of his relatives were guests that night and we had the meat pie because they asked especially for it, so it was a calamity that something should be wrong with it. However, I asked no question and we had the dinner with some hastily cooked chops the waitress fixed up to take its place, being meat that I had reserved for breakfast. As soon as possible I went out to the kitchen to see what was the matter with the pie and found it perfectly delicious."

"For goodness' sake!" exclaimed her niece. "What on earth did he send it out for?"

"When I went back and told him," laughed Mrs. Simmons. "He said that the center of the pie was hard as a rock, not even cooked! You see it was the first time he had ever carved a meat pie and he did not know that we always put a cup in the center to hold up the crust. That is still a family joke with all of us."

"I am afraid that my latest mishap is going to be, too," sighed her niece. "You see George loves to tell things on me to all the relatives and they have so long memories they never forget."

"Well, well!" exclaimed her aunt.

"It was when I was in New York last week," said her niece dolefully. "But I just remembered what I did today when I learned that my old Alice never received the wedding present I sent her. I met her downtown this morning and a awful discovery. You see, I might as well send her some from New York as long as I was there, instead of buying anything from here that she might have seen. So I was very careful to select something nice for her table and leave it to be marked. At first I thought I could take it with me in my trunk, but I bought some clothes and a coat in New York and some new things for the baby, so I decided to have it sent. She never got it."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Protecting Fish and Game

Mr. Editor: I am writing this on account of a letter of Mr. Chappell's in a recent issue in regard to the game warden's fees.

The game warden made six arrests in our town. Three arrests were made for digging out one fox and killing it on Sunday. In two cases the game wardens showed the men where to get a boat and then arrested them for being non residents and fishing without a license. One case was of a man seventy years old who set four muskrat traps without a license.

In every case the warden demanded and received ten dollars besides the court fees which were the highest that can be demanded.

Now, if that is protecting fish and game, please show me.

Wives of Famous Men

Christiane Vulpius, Wife of Goethe.

Noted as a great lover, it is amusing to learn that Goethe, great German writer and author of "Faust," waited until almost 60 to marry, and then met defeat at the hands of his wife. The poet met his future life companion, Christiane Vulpius, when he was about 40 years old, and at the time he was engaged in his hectic love affair with Baroness von Stein. Christiane was considerably younger than the baroness and caught Goethe's attention at once by her unusual beauty. In a short time he had severed relations with Madame von Stein and was in desperate pursuit of Christiane.

A woman of arresting appearance, handsome in an obvious sort of way, possessing a figure of generous proportions (described by an unkind observer as "globular"), Fraulein Vulpius came from a different world than that of her poet lover. Her social position was vastly inferior to his, but she had the kindness of heart and the understanding that so often compensates for a lack of perfect breeding. At any rate, wherever her charm lay, it was sufficiently potent to hold his errant fancy for 28 years.

For some time they lived together without benefit of clergy, but ultimately, when Goethe had reached the age of 58 he was prevailed upon to make the union regular, and they were married. Now sure of her hold on him, Christiane relaxed her grasp grew careless, and became addicted to intemperate habits. This occasioned many unpleasant scenes, yet for the most part the two were devoted to each other. After ten years of married life Christiane died, and although people referred to it as a "happy release" the poet was sincerely bereaved.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

The Croats.

The Croats, whose frequent frictions with the Serbians have ruffled the political waters in Jugo-Slavia in recent months, are described in the following bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society:

"Consider the story of the newly-arrived Croat and the American newsboy," says the bulletin.

"It was when the Croat was yet an Hungarian, politically, that he went up to Agram, which then was Zagreb, officially. There he waited for a thousand or so of his fellows to foregather before they swarmed on a train for Fiume, which only knew D'Annunzio as a poet. Then he embarked for the United States.

"Being a fairly well informed citizen, this newcomer had heard of skyscrapers, elevated trains and electric signs. The phenomenon which spelled the spirit of America to him, as he told it in after years, was the newsboy.

"This newsboy sold papers openly on the streets to anyone who could buy. The police didn't seem to mind. Also the papers might be had at newsstands. Now in his old-world Agram if one wanted a newspaper he went to the newspaper office for it. Or ordered it sent by mail.

"Some days one didn't get any paper. That meant that the government had confiscated the issue. If the editor had erred too greatly, or once too often, in offending the government one never heard of the paper again. If one wished to look up the editor it was contraband to try the jail first.

"Small wonder the Croat is jealous of his new-found liberty and wishes to emphasize his voice in the recent national partnership of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

"Perhaps one aggravation arises because the Serb and the Croat are so nearly alike. When, in 1908, Austria-Hungary took over Bosnia and Herzegovina from Turkey, all but 2 per cent. of the inhabitants were Serbs and Croats. Living long together had made the two peoples similar but each still is jealous of its identity.

"The Slovene, the third and more silent partner, stands apart from either Serb or Croat. Austria governed the Slovenes and treated them most kindly of all her subject races because they were compliant and complacent. War checked their coming and legal barriers now keep them out, but 15 years ago there were 100,000 of them in this country, and they were welcome citizens because so many passed through the cities to settle on farms.

"Agram, Croatia's spick-and-span capital, offers physical evidence of the remarkable vitality of the Croat. It has a church, St. Mark's, and before the church is a paving with five holes, which constitute the shrine of the Croatians. These holes mark the places where five iron posts were set up to pile up the logs which were to burn the last of the Croatian kings. That was in the 13th century; but the national spirit of the Croats has burned fiercely ever since, unquenched by domination of other powers.

"Away from Agram—which never was Zagreb to the Croatian way of speaking—the Croatian is a peasant, and one of the most picturesque of his kind in all Europe. His dress is light, colorful and beautifully embroidered.

"As she tends her sheep or her geese a Croatian girl will generally be knitting. Before her teens she begins upon her trousseau, for when she marries she must have enough stockings to last her and her husband all their lives. In addition, she must have ready a complete outfit for herself and for her bridesroom as well.

"The parents assure themselves the young man can support a horse; nothing more is expected from him. Whereupon he gives his wife an apple, she presents him with a handkerchief, and these simple tokens signify an engagement which rarely is broken."

A Little Talk on Thrift

Seek The Pathway of Progress.

"I have not succeeded. No real man ever succeeds. There is always a larger goal ahead." Thus wrote one of America's industrial leaders when asked to give the secret of his success.

When a man is in the position of being thoroughly satisfied with his condition in life he will make no further progress.

One of the economic evils in England today is the so-called dole system through which the unemployed are given certain support by the government. While governmental aid is, of course, to be recommended in cases of extreme emergency, the system as a whole is creating an enervating effect on the people. Thousands are perfectly satisfied with their condition of public dependency. With them ambition for personal progress has ceased. They would rather live in their meager way at public expense than to create better conditions for themselves through work.

Do not allow yourself to become thoroughly satisfied with your present condition in life. Seek always the pathway of progress. Strive continually to make more of yourself than is now the case.

After several months spent abroad, the writer, who has just returned to the United States, has been most forcibly impressed with the fact that this general spirit of restless ambition constitutes one of our greatest sources of national strength. In America, broadly speaking, every boy and girl, every man and woman every where and always are striving consciously toward better conditions. Progress is visible everywhere.

In striking contrast to the universal progressiveness, one notes in the older countries across the sea a greater disposition to let well enough alone, to follow the lines of traditions, to be satisfied with the methods of past generations.

Let us remember always that success is really discontent expressed in terms of worthy accomplishments. — American Thrift Society.

Stories That Recall Others

Just Like Uncle

Big sister's beau was a college athlete. And because her seven year old brother admired ball players so much she permitted him to come into the library and chat with ar beau a while. Like two pals they talked together about football and basketball. "If you expect to grow up and make a basketball player," the athlete winked at sister as he said it, "you will have to learn to chew tobacco."

"Do you?" little brother asked.

The beau nodded. Then little brother turned to sister. "You better lay him off right now," he warned, "cause it made you sick when you had to kiss Uncle Bob when he was here because he chewed tobacco. I'll run and tell dad he needn't worry over you ever marrying this fellow."

THE MIRACLE OF THE DAWN.

The wonder of the dawn!

Our souls [illegible]

What wonder that the [illegible]
The All of spirit and [illegible]
And sacrificed to it, and prayed,
With rites that [illegible]
The passing of the night revealed
To them in [illegible]

What wonder, too, what awe, behold!
What rapture and what fear
Were [illegible]
That new each day appeared,
Born on the world in darkness veiled,
Once every thousand years!

Think what it means to me and you
To see it even as God
Evolved it when the world was young!
Wider light rose earthquake-rent,
And show its gradual splendor grasp
Our deeps the whirlwind trod.

What shoutings then and symphonies
Arose from death and night!
What worship—solemn transmission
And thunders, tumbling white,
Of winds and waves and antheming
Of earth received the light.

Think what it meant to see the dawn!
The dawn, that comes each day!
What if the east should never grow
Should never more grow gray!
That line of rose no more be drawn

A BALLAD OF DREAMLAND.

I hid my heart in a nest of roses
Out of the sun's way, hidden apart;
In a softer bed than the soft pink snow's is,
Under the roses I hid my heart.
Why would it sleep not? Why should it start,
When never a leaf of the yew-tree stirred?
What made sleep flutter his wings and part?
Only the song of a secret bird.

Lie still, I said, for the wind's wing closes,
And mild leaves muffle the keen sun's dart;
Lie still, for the wind on the warm seas dozes,
And the wind is quieter yet than thou art.
Deep a thought in thee still as a thorn's wound smart?
Does the fang still fret thee of hope deferred?
What bids the kiss of they sleep depart?
Only the song of a secret bird.

The green lands name that a charm incloses,
It never was writ in the traveler's chart,
And sweet on its trees as the fruit that grows is,
It never was sold in the merchant's mart.
The swallows of dreams through its dim fields dart,
And sleep's are the tunes in its tree-tops heard;
No bound's note wakens the wild-wood hart,
Only the song of a secret bird.

ENVOI.

In the world of dreams I have chosen my part,
To sleep for a season and hear no word
Of true love's truth or of light love's art,
Only the song of a secret bird.

NORWICH TOWN

On Sunday morning at the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich, preached from the text Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. At the Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday evening Miss Marion Hope, a deaconess from Fall River, Mass., gave a very inspiring address, her subject being Faith Accomplishes the Impossible. A scripture lesson in connection was read from Philippians, fourth chapter, from the first to the fourteenth verse. The resume of the work done by Miss Hope and her fellow workers at Fall River and Providence in the rescue home and industrial school for girls was given. Many interesting facts concerning results were given by Miss Hope. Miss Hope stated that many of the girls yet living in this home, and some who have left, are occupying important places in business and home life. It was also stated by this deaconess that the results of the religious work cannot be measured. In closing, a collection was taken in the interests of this rescue work.

In compliance with a recent request from the permanent walk committee of the Norwich Rural association, there has been a response from two property owners so soon, in laying a cement walk in front of their property.

Though for about two years Jonathan L. Smith has had a fine walk in front of his home on Town street and is contemplating to continue this permanent walk all along his property line at some future time; it surely looks as though the pledges promised by several others would be carried out at an earlier date than had been anticipated. The new walks laid during the past two weeks, are a long stretch in front of the property of Joseph Piretti, and that of Michael Buckley on Town street. The remainder of the property owners on this street who have pledged their support in this way include Lee Haun, Frederick Morris and Frederic H. Wyant, the latter being influential in getting those pledges, in behalf of the Rural Association.

Mr. Wyant, representing the permanent walk committee had for his territory under solicitation, the entire length of Town street from Harland's corner, to the Norwich Town greens.

The walks thus far laid, and those promised within two years comprise only one side of this street. In some places on the other side, desirable sections for the walk are not available because of business enterprises, and in some places are stone flagging.

All such improvements are most attractive, and leave a lasting impression, especially on out of town visitors.

English Royal Names.

The use of surnames was introduced into England by the Normans and for a long time were used only by the nobility. The earlier kings, therefore, had no claim of any sort to a family name, but are often designated by some quality, as Alfred the Great, Edward the Martyr, etc.

Kings do not have family names which exactly agree with those of common people, their titles or estates more often giving them what corresponds to a surname. The kings from William the Conqueror to Stephen (1066-1154) were of the Norman line. The Plantagenets received their name from the adoption by Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, of the broom (plante de genet) as an insignia. This name was borne by the kings from Henry II to Richard II (1154-1485).

The Tudor line, which includes the rulers from Henry VII to Elizabeth (1485-1603), received its name from Owen Tudor, a Welshman, who married the widowed queen of Henry V and whose grandson was Henry VII.

The Stuart line includes the rulers from James I to Anne (1603-1702). The name is derived from the important office of steward to the royal household of Scotland.

The house of Hanover, whose family name is often given as Guelph, started with George I, of whom George V is a direct descendant. — Exchange.

Fijian Tattooing.

It used to be quite common in Fiji and Samoa for a man to bear upon his arm or body a certificate of his birth which was practically indelible.

Tattooing is carried on in these islands to an absurd extent, and it is the practice to tattoo on the hand of a mother the date of her children's births. Sometimes also an enthusiastic father will tatoo the date of the birth on the child itself, and, no matter how long it lives, the certificate will remain easily decipherable.

In some adjoining islands every child is tattooed almost from head to foot upon its completing its 12th year. The result is very remarkable, especially if the child is growing rapidly, so that the spaces between the tattoo marks increase in size year by year.

It may be that matches are made in heaven, because the fire never goes out in the other places.

MAGICAL BEAUTIFIERS FOR WOMEN

Women everywhere are trying all kinds of beautifiers, only to find that their effects are transitory. The first requisite of beauty is health. Without it the steps lag, eyes are lusterless, dark circles appear beneath them, the complexion becomes sallow, and almost invariably the underlying cause is some ailment peculiar to women. There is a very inexpensive remedy for this condition in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for nearly fifty years has been relieving women from some of the worst forms of female ills. Why not let it restore you to health and beauty and the joys of living?

Gentlemen of the board of trustees: It is not at all easy to show how greatly we appreciate the opportunity you have given us for obtaining a high school education. For some of our number our four years here mean the last years of school life; for others they are but the intermediate step between preparatory study and higher training. Today means for all of a parting of ways an inevitable break in

OBITUARY.

Arthur H. Brewer

Arthur H. Brewer, 75, president of the Thames National bank and of the Norwich Savings society, and a director in a dozen local manufacturing concerns, died at six o'clock Tuesday evening at his home, No. 57 Broad street. The news of his death was received with profound regret by his numerous friends and acquaintances.

Although Mr. Brewer had been in failing health for several months past his death was unexpected. He had made plans to attend the graduation of his grandson, Arthur Brewer Norton, at Dartmouth college Tuesday, and had started for there by automobile Sunday. Reaching Northfield, Brewer had a recurrence of illness from which he had suffered at times, and he returned to his home here Monday. A physician from Hartford was called here in consultation and Mr. Brewer improved somewhat, but early Tuesday morning he was seized with a cerebral hemorrhage from which he remained unconscious through the day until the end came.

Arthur H. Brewer came of an ancient New England family, his grandfather, Lyman Brewer, coming to Ludlow, Mass., and then to Norwich, in early life. Lyman Brewer was of the sixth generation of the family founded in New England by Daniel Brewer, who came in the ship "Lion" in 1632.

Arthur H. Brewer was of the eighth American Brewer generation in New England and was born in Norwich, May 17, 1848, the son of Charles H. and Martha L. Witter Brewer. He was educated in Norwich and Boston schools and at the age of 20 entered the employ of Edward Chappell, a coal dealer in Norwich. Ten years later, in 1878, Mr. Chappell admitted Mr. Brewer to a one-third partnership interest, Enoch F. Chapman also having an equal interest.

Mr. Chappell died in 1891, Messrs. Brewer and Chapman continuing the business until the latter's death in January, 1898, when Mr. Brewer admitted his former employes, Messrs. Washburn, Hatch, Chapman and Crary, reorganizing as a corporation, The Edward Chappell Company.

The company waxed prosperous, its management claiming Mr. Brewer's able interest until 1913, when he retired from the management, not to private life but to an enlarged field of activity. The interest Mr. Brewer held in the Edward Chappell Co., he disposed of among his sons-in-law, William A. Norton, Willis Austin and Lucius Briggs.

It would require a volume to chronicle in full the ramifications of Mr. Brewer's numerous interests, so important have they been. He was for a number of years president of the Hopkins & Allen Arms company, president of the Falls company, vice president of the Ponemah Mills company, acting president during President William A. Lester's absence abroad; president of the Ashland Cotton company of Jewett City; secretary-treasurer of the Uncas-Hall company; director of the Norwich Gas and Electric company; president of the Crescent Arms company; director of the Uncas Paper company; president of the Bard Union company and held numerous other offices. Of late years he had retired from executive place in many of these corporations, but at the time of his death held directorships in several concerns.

Mr. Brewer's banking interests were very important and became his sole activity in the business life of this city. On June 21, 1913, he became president of the Norwich Savings Society. In 1918 he was elected the eighth president of the Thames National Bank. This in brief is an outline of the business career of a real captain of industry, but it is only an outline of half a century of useful effort.

The Norwich institutions devoted to charity and philanthropy always had a warm friend in Mr. Brewer, although he acted in a quiet, unobtrusive way few knowing how deep his interest was and how broad his charity. He has long served as a director of the Elisa Huntington Memorial Home; was an ex-president of the old Norwich Board of Trade; was a member of the Arcanum club and its president when the club was revamped and located in its present quarters on Main street, the acquirement of which was originally instigated by Mr. Brewer. Mr. Brewer was a trustee of the Norwich Free Academy; member of the Society of Colonial Wars, and was a republican in politics, sitting as a delegate in the national convention in 1896 that became associated with the store in Portland, one of the chain of Porteous & Mitchell stores. He showed business ability to an unusual degree and was recognized in Portland as one of the progressive young merchants of the city. He leaves a wide circle of friends in this city and in Portland among whom he was sincerely regarded for his fine character and attainments.

Besides his wife, and his father, he leaves a sister, Mrs. B. M. Crosthwaite of Feltham Manor, N. Y., and a brother, Louis R. Porteous of this city.

Mount Everest.

It is a striking fact that Mount Everest is almost the only one of the great Himalayan peaks that has not a native Indian name. The reason is still more striking. It has been the invariable custom of the survey of India to adhere to the native names. The English maps therefore contain Kinchinjunga and Makalu and Sandakphu and other foreign words but for Everest, the highest peak of all, the most careful search failed to find any native name, and so it was called after Sir George Everest, the great English geodesist. There is something pleasingly poetic in the thought that by leaving the mightiest of their great peaks unnamed the people of India have been content to think of it as the great Unknown.

WHEN A CHILD COUGHS IT IS "CATCHING A COLD"

Is The Time To Take WINCARNIS

"I feel that I owe you a debt of gratitude for what your wonderful Wincarnis has done for me and many members of my family. We first learned of Wincarnis when we resided in England. It gave us so much satisfaction that we all used it whenever we felt the need of a tonic, as when influenza was rampant or when every body was "catching a cold."

We have continued to use Wincarnis since our arrival to this country, and we have recommended it to a number of our friends here. All the members are now reaping the praise of your excellent preparation.

It is really surprising how quickly one regains weight and strength and recovers from nervousness when Wincarnis is taken after an attack of influenza or a very severe cold."

General Arrangements — L. M. Crandall, chairman, Lillian Boynton, Anna Shamit, Sabra Stoughton, Coranna Paradis, Walter Dombroski, Ethel Whaley, Maxwell Wunderlick, Catherine Twomey, Dorothy Egli.

The class is to leave immediately after school is dismissed on the afternoon of the races.

A Leveled World.

If all the hills on the earth were used to fill in all the valleys, we should have a world as smooth as a billiard ball, completely covered with an ocean 8,000 feet deep. That depth is called the "mean sphere level." The Atlantic ocean has an average depth that differs little from that level, for, compared with the other great oceans, it has an unusually large area of comparatively shallow water. First comes the shelf-like "continental slopes"; then follows, at much lower level, a vast plain of a uniform, dull-grayish-buff color, flat and featureless as the desert, unmarked except by an occasional rock or wreck, or a recently laid cable. This plain continues with hardly a break until it reaches the great mid-Atlantic ridge that extends from Iceland as far south as 53 degrees south latitude and that roughly bisects the ocean. The ridge runs almost parallel with the eastern contour or Europe and Africa. Occasionally the ridge rises above the surface. The Azores, St. Pauls Rocks, Ascension Island, the Island of Tristan da Cunha; and the Gough Islands are all parts of it.—Christian Science Monitor.

Crab Locomotives.

The queerest locomotives are the types used in mining and called "crabs." Gliding into the black galleries of coal mines and halting at a crevice in the wall from which issues the distant ring of pick and shovel, the crab lets out a flexible tentacle (a steel cable) for perhaps 200 or 300 feet, drawing it back presently with a car of coal in two. Feeling into the holes, first on one side, then on the other, it moves along and never fails to secure its prey. Finally, with a dozen or more cars in its wake, it proceeds to the shaft or outlet and delivers its booty to the crusher.

These crabs operate by trolley conductors. They run through the main passages of the mine. Each crab is furnished with an electrically operated drum, on which are carried 200 or 300 feet of steel cable. This is hauled into the side passages or drifts by a man who couples the end to a loaded car, then gives a signal, and the crab does the rest.—St. Nicholas.

In Old Porto Rico.

In the vicinity of Mayaguez, Porto Rico, are several historically interesting places: The little village of Rio Guanabao, near Anasco, was the scene of the unique experiment by which the Indians in 1511 endeavored to discover whether the Spaniards were immortal.

After holding a Spanish nobleman under water six hours they were assured that those intruders were just as subject to death as themselves.

About seven miles from Mayagues, across a rough mountainous country, is the famous sanctuary of Monserrat, which is visited every year by many pilgrims.

Situated conspicuously among its wild surroundings, its large stone church is visable for many miles. From the mountain top we obtained a delightful view of the beautiful plain through which flow the Boqueron and Guanajoba Rivers.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Fishermen will be interested in a statement by County Game Warden Charles M. Letters in the Putnam column this morning relative to the open season for bass and particularly relatives to the days on which fishing will be allowed in Alexander's lake in this town. Ample warning is being given that bass under 10 inches in length must not be intentionally taken and possessed, so fishermen will have little excuse for being caught with smaller bass in their possession.

Are your dollars earning 5 per cent.? If not, deposit them immediately in the Windham County National bank, and you will receive thereon December 1, 1923, a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.—adv.

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. John's church in Plainfield there was a solemn high mass of requiem for Miss Amelia Dezina, who died at her parents' home in that place. The mass was attended by many relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery in Jewett City. The bearers were Joseph Dezina, Joseph Fournier, Leo Fournier, Omer Fournier, Nataire Turcotte and Xavier Cloutier. Louis E. Kennedy was the funeral director.

In the town court Tuesday morning there was a hearing of the case of Joseph Milone of the Green Hollow road, charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell. Mr. Milone was represented by Attorney E. L. Darbie, who demurred to the complaint, but the demurrer was over-ruled and the accused declined to plead over. Judge W. Fenner Woodward imposed a fine of $25 and costs, the total assessment amounting to $70.95 which was paid.

In the interest of the Nurses' Home Fund of the Day Kimball hospital of Putnam, Mrs. Richard D. Bannigan of Broad street is holding an exhibition of curios this afternoon and evening. These curios were collected in many lands by Mrs. Bannigan's sister, who recently returned from a world tour. The exhibition is one of the many activities in Danielson in th einterest of the Nurses' Home fund and patrons of it will help increase the donations from this community.

Apparently perfectly satified with the hospitality at Gallup Brothers and Lindner's, the beautiful carrier pigeon that walked through the entrance Monday after a flight that apparently had exausted it was loitering about during Tuesday. It ventured out once and flew about a bit, but eventually returned to the market and remained there until late in the afternoon, when it was again released and flew off in the direction of Academy street.

The Submarine base team will come here Sunday afternoon for the first big game of the season with the Danielson team that is to be under the direction of the Casino Amusement company. This is a change in plans that will bring one of the fastest teams in eastern Connecticut to Danielson, which will be represented by a semi-pro organization of high class.

Miss Dorothy Atwood, daughter of J. Arthur Atwood of Wauregan, and Miss Evelyn Cranska of Moosup left Tuesday en route to Alaska. They will be away about six weeks. After completing the transcontinental trip they will board a steamer at a Pacific coast port for a voyage northward along the coast of Alaska, where landings will be made. The sea voyage will be of about ten days' duration.

Distribution will begin Thursday of the summer issue of the directories of the Southern New England Telephone company. Compared with the number of stations in the Danielson division a few years ago the new directories show a surprising growth in the army of telephone subscribers. Telephones now reach out into the most distant and obscure corners of Killingly and surrounding towns and it may be mentioned that this fact makes the service more valuable than when the number of subscribers was materially smaller than at the present time. The forthcoming directories are the semi-annual issue.

Captain F. O. Armington, commanding the Service battery, 192nd Field artillery, received Tuesday an announcement that Colonel M. B. Payne, of New London, the regimental commander, has been promoted and assigned to command the 55th infantry brigade, C. N. G. Colonel Payne organized the 192nd Field artillery and is pleased with the advancement it has achieved in the face of apparently insurmountable obstacles. In the notice of his relinquishing the command he expresss his particularly thanks and appreciation to the officers and men who have so faithfully given their time and energy during the formative period of the organization.

In connection with the address of Hamilton Holt on the Achievements of the League of Nations at the Congregational church this evening there is to be an organ recital by Raymond A. Preston, now visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Preston, and vocal solos by John Downs of Wauregan.

Mr. Holt, distinguished writer and speaker, comes here under the auspices of the Non Partisan league association. There will be no admission charge and all interested in hearing what is certain to be a brilliant and scholarly exposition of the subject to be discussed are invited to hear Mr. Holt.

A special car bearing members of the public utilities commission was run over the trolley lines of the Connecticut company in this part of the state Tuesday. The commissioners were on a periodical visit of inspection. In this section of the county they covered the line between Central Village and Moosup, between Central Village and the state line above North Grosvenordale and between Elmville and East Killingly. They went northward through this city about 11.30 a. m., returning here in time to allow of their catching a train for Hartford just before 1 o'clock. The special car which they used on their trip of inspection was from the carhouse of the Connecticut company at Greeneville.

The administrator of the trust funds of the estate of Harriet Tourtellotte, donor of a fund for the erection of a beautiful memorial chapel in Grove street cemetery is expected here from Minneapolis today to confer with representatives of the Putnam Cemetery association relative to the project. There is a possibility that the conference may result in a decision being arrived at to go ahead with the construction work, although that was not definitely known here Tuesday. The fund available for the work, with the accrued interest, is in the neighborhood of $40,000. Actual undertaking of the work has been deferred from year to year awaiting a time when construction costs would be lower than they have been at any time since the money, invested in Liberty bonds, was made available. A site for the chapel has been selected at the cemetery and when the building is completed it is expected to be one of the most beautiful structures of its kind in Connecticut.

The body of Eugene Tetreault, 31, who died Monday of heart failure at the Taylor private hospital in Boston, was brought to his home here. Mr. Tetreault was taken to the hospital Sunday for treatment. His condition was serious at the time, but it was not considered so highly critical as events showed it to be. He took a serious turn for the worse early Monday morning and died about 8.45. Mr. Tetreault was a native of Putnam and had spent his life here. He leaves his wife, his father, Henry Tetreault, and several brothers and sisters.

The open season for bass will be from July 1 to October 31, both inclusive. Bass less than 10 inches in length shall not be intentionally taken and possessed and, if taken, shall without avoidable injury be immediately returned to the waters whence taken. Bass taken in open waters shall not be purchased, sold, exchanged or exposed for sale or exchange. Bass shall not be fished for or taken except by angling, which means taking, attempting to take any fish by means of any hook and line not personally attended.

The open season at Alexander's lake will begin Tuesday, July 3, and will be open to anglers on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays thereafter.

One hears of an infinite number of uses to which a flivver may be devoted, including the possibility of the election of its creator to the presidency, but numbered among the more interesting purposes for which it has been used hereabouts recently is killing moles. Up in Thompson these tiny rodents had all but ruined a fine lawn with their boring operations. Affairs had arrived at such a stake that it was imperative that the moles be disposed of, so an employe with a mentality and a vision got out a section of old inner tubing from an old automobile tire, connected it over the end of the exhaust pipe on the flivver and started up the motor. With this device quantities of monoxide gas were directed into the holes the moles had dug and the moles just naturally curled up and died, and now there is promise of a fine lawn again where the turf had come to have much the same consistency as a sponge.

A slump of 200 points in the price of cotton with an attendant drop of approximately $10 a bale in the cost of buyers came Tuesday as a hopeful sign to cotton manufacturers hereabouts as well as in other parts of New England where the textile industry is all important. The fact is that what is termed a buyers' strike has been on for some time as a protest against the high cost of finished goods and has been having a serious effect on manufacturing concerns, faced with the necessity of continuing operations for the manufacture of materials at peak prices without any market for the product. This situation was bringing about a condition that seemed likely to force curtailment of operations. The break in the cotton market does not remove the condition, but is helpful and looked upon as significant as forecasting the possibility of return to a more easy market and a more lively one.

Today rounds out another full week of the strike of former employes of the Manhasset company. There has been no material change in the situation during the past week. The strikers held an enthusiastic meeting Tuesday morning at their hall and were as confident as ever of ultimate victory. The mill is operating as usual and is continuing to rebuild such part of its working organization as was disrupted by the strike.

"BLIND MEN" TOPIC AT Y. M. C. A. NOON MEETING

At the Y. M. C. A. shop meeting at the Radiator plant at noon Tuesday Rev. C. H. Ricketts gave a very practical address on the topic, "Blind Men, Past and Present." Among other things the speaker said:

My theme today is "Blind Men, Past and Present." This subject came to my mind last Tuesday when I saw a blind man in Hartford making his way along Main street with the aid of a small bamboo cane. With the dangers involved from the sidewalks thronged with people and the streets with various motor vehicles, these words of scripture came to me: "And two blind men followed him, crying and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us!"

Blindness has always been more common in the warm eastern countries than with us. The heat reflected from the white burning sands is a terrible strain on the eye. As most of these eastern lands are agan little help has come to suffering eyesight from applied science. We who live in the Temperate Zone have much to be thankful for that ours is a colder climate where abundant vegetation absorbs the excessive light and heat of the sun.

While blindness is rare in our favorable climate still it exists and is always a serious handicap to a life of activity. There are warying degrees of blindness, from defective eyesight to total blindness. The science of oculism has done much to help our defective eyesight.

The subject was then treated in the following manner: 1 The four things that cause blindness. 2 The three different kinds of blindness, and 3 The two different effects that blindness has.

Under the first head it was noted that some are born blind. For this there may be some natural causes that are not humanly preventable, but congenital blindness is generally due to some hereditary taint. Blindness is caused by accident and disease; by over strain and abuse. Our poor eyes know nothing of an eight or even ten hour day. Most of us at it sixteen or more. We have no mercy on our eyes.

Under the second head not much was said about physical blindness, but mental and moral blindness was elaborated. Some people go through life with their eyes open and see things, and others live on from day to day and see practically nothing. How much does a clod-hopper see of the beauties of nature compared with a Ruskin or a Burroughs?

Under the third head the speaker remarked that there are those who go through life blind to their own interests. Much of what they think, say and do, hurts rather than helps them. "Eyes have they but they see not," what ought to be done to gain true success here and in the hereafter.

There are those who go through life without much thought about other people. They are blind to the sins and sorrows of the other fellow. The speaker felt that America ought not to be blind to the misfortunes of the world. Science and commerce have brought us into political solidarity. Humanity is much bigger than nationality. The family of God is a more important unit than any racial unit. Let us get beyond the Monroe Doctrine and think in terms of continents. "The hour cometh and now is" when we ought to have some League of Nations. As war is the policy of the blind man let us rally around President Harding's International Court of Arbitration praying that it may bring in a new world day.

That section of the Shore Line electric tracks between the upper cemetery gate and the top of the hill by the Foster farm on Beach street, has been uncovered that the tracks may be raised to conform to the grade of the adjacent highway.

Chester Salb of Providence visited in Westerly over the week-end. Mr. Salb has taken a cottage at Pleasant View to make his home with his family for the summer.

JEWETT CITY

Mrs. John Barnett, the older daughter of the late John Sharkey, and Margaret McGovern Barnett, died at her home on South Main street on Monday. She was born Miss Ellen Sharkey in Canterbury, moving here in infancy. Miss Sharkey and John Barnett were married sixteen years ago.

She is survived by her mother and husband, also by a brother and sister Miss Rose and John Sharkey of Jewett City, a brother Thomas of Attleboro, Mass., and a brother William.

Mrs. Barnett was a decendent from one of the older Irish-American families of the town, which calls to mind the Driscolls, Fogartys, Foleys and McCuskers—all of whom lived in Griswold for more than two generations, raising and educating large families.

Mrs. Barnett has been in ill health for several years. She was quiet, a home woman always interested in the better sort of things. Many friends here and elsewhere will mourn her loss.

There are two step-children whose homes are in New Haven, Michael Barnett and Mrs. Helen Lynch.

Daniel F. Finn, Jr., of Jewett City is a nephew, also Sadie Sharkey and Paul Sharkey of Attleboro, the children of Thomas. Miss Sharkey is a student in Simmon's College of Boston and Paul is at the Boston School of Technology.

The borough people's interest were sharptened early Monday evening by the true color of war scenes, which were enacted in reality only a few years ago. Cavalry men and horses of the 103 Field Artillery, counting up 100 horses and 300 men and a dozen field pieces marched over the state road, through the town, enroute from their base in Providence to Niantic, where they will be in quarters for some time. Monday and Tuesday evenings they made temporary camp in the south part of the town on Charles R. Palmer's farm.

Many thoughts came to Jewett City people who stood and watched the passing soldiers in silence.

One fine incident occurred along the line. Among the spectators as the flag passed, were two members of the Anne Brewster Fanning chapter, D. A. R. as the colors passed they stood at reverential salute.

Their action was not overlooked by the color bearer. He raised his hat, and one could tell that he was saying, "That's fine"——

Heat, and then some, struck the borough Tuesday. Even with the quick flirting with the ninety mark for more than four hours, the heat was tempered by a below the average amount of humidity.

Everybody is getting ready to help boom the fireworks fund for Fourth of July evening.

It is understand that an important challenge has been issued. Louie Carpenter and Doc Gingras challenge Sol Paquette and Zeb Hiscox to a canoe tipping contest for the fourth. Last year this same redoubtable quartette furnished a brand of sport that it would be hard to excel with honors going to the latter pair.

The Misses Katherine and Alice Barnett were in Boston Monday to be present at the commencement exercises of the Boston University when their older brother John Barnett was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Business Administration. The class of the different departments of the various educational branches of the University numbered 901.

Mr. Barnett has completed a four year course, three of which were in study at the institution followed by one year in actual business experience. A glance at the college records stands to prove that another Jewett City boy is assured of a fine equipment to meet life's many difficult problems.

He is a prominent member of Psi Mu, the college fraternity.

The children, as well as some flower lovers that are starting on their first herbarium are bringing in golden ragwort, or squaw weed.

It is to be found in any of the local meadows at this time, and in 1898 was recorded on June 1st.

Many find this flower who never know it. Stain yellow the white rays of the common field daisy, diminish the size of the whole head somewhat, and one has a pretty good likeness of the ragwort. There is much interest in its generic name "senex"—an old man alluding to the silky down of the seeds, which is supposed to suggest the silver hairs of age.

George D. Gill and Miss Annie Hopkins, both of Jewett City were married at the home of the bride, Tuesday afternoon. Both young people have hosts of friends that are offering congratulations and best wishes. Both are employed in different textile concerns of the town. The ceremony was performed by L. M. Carpenter, justice of the peace.

Reliance Lodge, No. 39, I. O. O. F. made the following nominations for officers, Monday evening: W. J. Robertson, Jr., noble grand; Abraham Zegeer, vice grand; David A. Bothwell, recording secretary; G. A. Haskell, financial secretary; William McCluggage, treasurer; G. W. Robinson, janitor, the appointive officers will be announced later. Undaunted Lodge, No. 34, K. of P. and Reliance Lodge, No. 27, I. O. O. F., will unite in a memorial service, Sunday morning, June 24 at the Methodist church.

Committees will decorate the graves of deceased members, all brothers of both orders will meet in their lodge rooms at 10.15, D. S. T., to assist in the ceremonies, wearing their badges.

Mr. Taylor leaves many friends in Plainfield who wish him the best of success in his new venture.

Miss Lena Piper entertained her mother, Mrs. Allie Piper, at the home of C. L. Smith during graduation week.

Mrs. William Bradford called Saturday on Mrs. Nellie Smith, who has been in Norwich the past week having medical treatment for facial eczema.

Many relatives and friends of Alexander William Dougherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Dougherty of Plainfield, from Plainfield, Providence, Oneco, Moosup and Putnam attended the graduation exercises of the educational department of the Connecticut school for the blind last week. Alexander W. Dougherty is a member of the class and had an important part on the graduation program, reading an essay on The History of the English Language and rendering a delightful piano solo, The Alpine Hut (Lange). Mr. Dougherty was president of his class. Joseph E. Cady of Taftville is a member of the class.

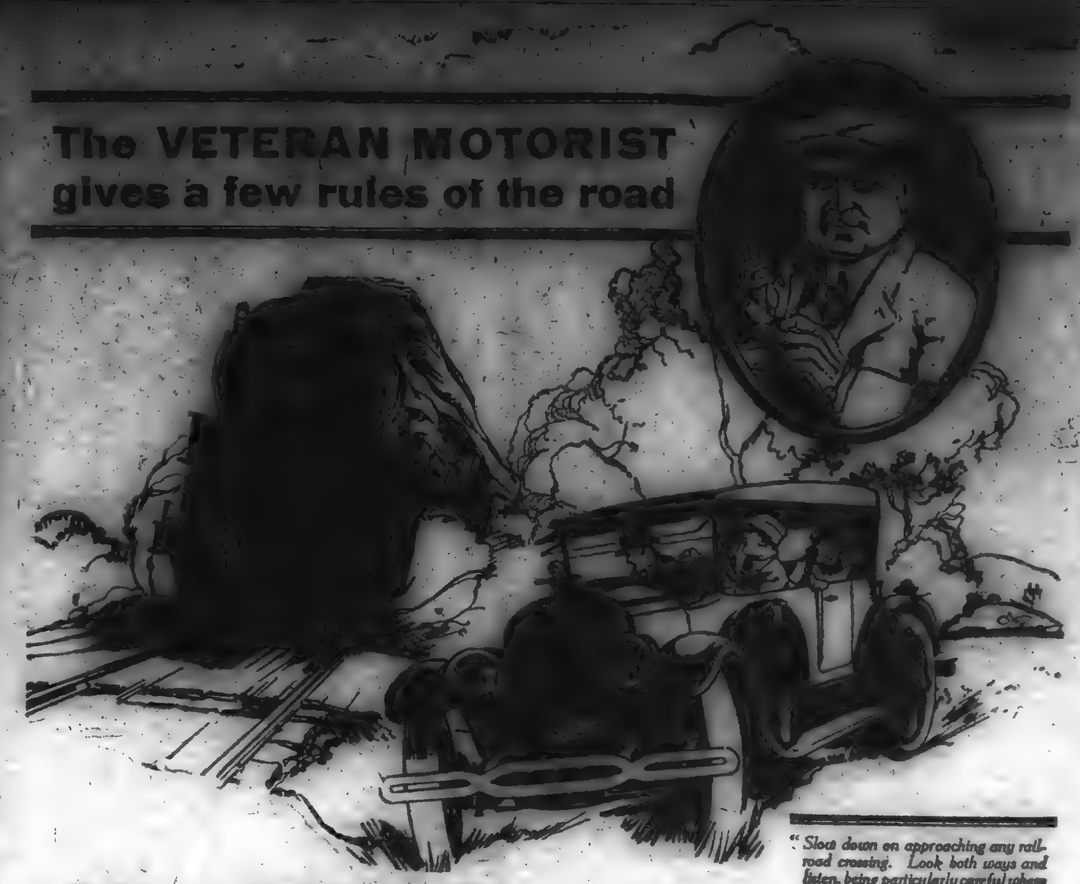
The VETERAN MOTORIST gives a few rules of the road



"Slow down on approaching any railroad crossing. Look both ways and listen, being particularly careful where there are two or more tracks, because of trains in opposite direction."
(Am. Railway Ass. Safety Section)

"WHY IS IT, I WONDER, that you still read about so many automobile accidents at railroad crossings? With the thousands of smashed cars and undertakers' bills caused this way, you'd suppose that every motorist would put on the old thinking cap when he spots a crossing.

"I saw a smash once, and that was enough for me. No more taking chances for Yours Truly after that, or 'hoping' there isn't a train coming. You can't absolutely trust anything but your own eyes to tell you whether the track is clear or not. The flagman may not be on duty when you happen along. The automatic signal may be out of order. The train may be coasting quietly down a grade toward the crossing. There are a dozen 'mays', and 'may nots', and 'ifs'.

"No siree! Life's too short and sweet to take blind chances at grade crossings—when it's so simple and easy to make sure. My tip is: always assume there is a train coming. It is better to be wrong than to have your picture in next day's paper—"Victim of Auto Wreck."

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

STOPPING AT RABBIT INN.

Now let me see. We left the two little bunnies, Uncle Lucky and his little rabbit nephew in the train on the way to Turnip Hill, didn't we? Well, I guess we've left them long enough to reach Turnip Hill by this time, for they were aboard the Cannon Ball Express which went like everything and maybe faster.

"Turnip Hill! Last stop!" yelled the brakeman, a white-poodle dog with a little blue cap on his head.

After Uncle Lucky's old wedding stovepipe hat and Little Jack Rabbit's khaki cap had been dusted off by the black poodle dog, Uncle Lucky handed him a ten cent carrot piece and then said to Little Jack Rabbit: "Come on! Let's see what Turnip Hill looks like." So off they hopped and into a taxi.

"Where do you want to go?" asked the driver.

"What's your best hotel?" asked Uncle Lucky.

"Rabbit Inn," answered the driver, a funny little pig, with a yellow straw hat on his head and a pair of sneakers on his hind feet.

"All right. Take us there," answered the old gentleman rabbit, taking a cabbage leaf cigar out of his waistcoat upper pocket. Then he looked at his gold watch and chain and would you believe it, it was just 15 o'clock.

Pretty soon, the taxi drove up to a nice little hotel and out hopped the two little rabbits.

"How do you do! Welcome to our city!" said the long-legged crane who stood behind the desk.

This pleased the old gentleman rabbit so much that he handed the crane one of his cabbage leaf cigars.

"Now let's go in and get dinner," exclaimed the old gentleman bunny.

Well, sir! You should have seen that bill of fare! It was all in rhyme, and I never would have known what they had to eat if Bobby Redvest hadn't brought it to me this morning. Yes, sir! Just as Mr. Merry Sun was getting out of his bed in the purple east that dear little bird fluttered up to my windowsill and handed me the bill of fare.

Carrot ice and turnip pie,
Peanuts on the half shell,
Lettuce cream and lollypops,
Apple cake and orange jell.

"Bring us everything on the menu!" said Uncle Lucky, and pretty soon a little white duck with a big yellow bill waddled back loaded down with good things.

When the little rabbits had finished Uncle Lucky asked for the bill, but, oh, dear me, it was bigger than the duck's bill and that's saying a great deal, but Uncle Lucky didn't care for he was very rich you know.

By and by the two little rabbits went upstairs to their room and in the next story if they get up in time to take the train back to Rabbitville, I'll tell you what happened after that.

STUMPT?

FROM childhood up, we meet stumps every day of our lives.

They either stump us, or we stump them. The more successful we are in jumping stumps, the less are we stumpt by stumps.

The most important stumps to watch are those that stump the maintenance of good health.

When Nature sounds her warning and indicates unmistakably the location of a stump—HEED NATURE.

When the mouth tastes bad, breath is foul, stomach distressed, brain foggy, eye dull, remember Beecham's Pills will clear away the stumps of indigestion, constipation and biliousness.

For 80 years this famous family medicine has stumpt disorders of stomach, liver and bowels to hold their grip on man, woman or child.

COLUMBIA

Mr. and Mrs. George Fiske of Rockville were in town on Thursday last and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. North and family of New Haven motored to Columbia on Tuesday and spent the day visiting friends. Their daughter, Miss Cornelia, is a student in Wellesley college and their son John is at Yale. Several years ago they spent their summers in one of Mr. Hunt's houses on the Green.

The members of the Columbia Congregational church met at the chapel on Friday at 2 p. m. to act upon the resignation of the pastor, Rev. T. Newton Owen, presented on Sunday, June 3d, and to take such other action as was necessary. L. E. Winter was chosen moderator and the clerk of the church, A. A. Latham, read the warning. Upon motion of Alonzo Little, the resignation was accepted. Fred A. Hunt, Mrs. Alonso Little and Cecil L. Gates were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions of regret. At the request of Mr. Owen, he was granted a letter of dismissal.

The committee presented a report which was accepted, referring to the larger field of labor to which he had been called and that his resignation was accepted with regret, and their hope that he will have an opportunity to continue his usefulness and to profitably apply his ability. They referred to his long pastorate and the many friends he had made and their hearty wishes for his future success.

Remarks were made by W. A. Collins, F. A. Hunt, A. A. Latham, C. L. Gates and Mrs. Mary B. Yeomans eulogising the work that has been accomplished by Mr. Owen, especially under difficulties during the past year, while laboring under great sorrow because of the death of Mrs. Owen, and of the automobile accident in which he was injured with others. He was spoken of as being very heroic under the circumstances, and it was stated that he compared favorably with the best preachers in the church. It was stated that he has great opportunities in his new work, and will be continually led into new fields of service. The speakers urged that the members pull together so that the church may go on to greater success with the new leader that they may have. The standing committee, Cecil L. Gates, H. W. Porter and Clayton E. Hunt, will have charge of supplying the pulpit until a new pastor is called.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lyman moved into the house on the Pine street road belonging to Mrs. Warren Collins during the past week, expecting to reside there in the future.

Clayton E. Hunt took his truck full of the children of St. Paul's Episcopal church in Willimantic for an outing on Saturday to a park in Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Carpenter, who have spent the winter and spring at Muncie, Ind., arrived at their home on Tuesday last. Mrs. Carpenter expects to remain here during the summer but Mr. Carpenter will return shortly.

Smoke from forest fires in the surrounding states was very noticeable in town on Tuesday and Wednesday, the atmosphere being quite hazy.

Flag day was generally observed in town, most of the residences on and near the Green displaying the national colors.

Henry Isham, who has built many of the boats in use on the lake, recently finished and delivered a flat bottomed boat for Mr. Abbott, who is occupying one of the cottages there for the season.

Mrs. Mary B. Yeomans has had a radio installed in her house recently and with her friends has been greatly pleased in listening to concerts, sermons, etc.

After the demonstration of a fire extinguisher company on the evening of June 6th the parties giving the demonstration left without removing the debris. Later the charred and broken pieces of wood were removed, but the results of the fire have left a bad appearance in a prominent place on the Green.

Many excursion parties are now visiting the lake and the pleasure which they are deriving from their trips can be noticed as they pass through the Center singing and in the exuberance of youthful mirth.

On Tuesday last at about 3 p. m. a ten-ton Mack truck engaged in carrying tar used in the construction of the Columbia-Hebron highway was upset on the Columbia branch road near the place known as Miller's Corners and about a half mile from where the road joins the Hartford-Willimantic road. The truck had descended a long hill with a sharp turn in it near the bottom when on ascending a short rise it was obliged to turn to the left to pass another truck which was delivering gravel for the road. The Mack truck is supposed to have struck a large stone and it shot across the road, upsetting on a bank by a stone wall. The engine, front wheels and other parts of the car were said to be badly damaged and it was reported that the driver was injured. The truck was not removed until the following day.

There was a dance at the town hall on Saturday evening by the young people of the town under the management of Miss Margaret Blakeley. It was attended by about 25 persons.

Children's day was observed at the church on Sunday morning. The day was ideal and the church was filled with the children and their friends. The children had been well drilled by Mrs. Howard Rice and Mrs. Clayton Hunt, in the program which they gave and which was well rendered. Mrs. Hunt had charge of the musical portion of the program, which showed in its fine execution the results of her excellent training. The recitations and exercises on the program were under the direction of Mrs. Howard Rice and were equally well rendered. The Misses Madeline Holmes and Gertrude Gates had charge of the floral decorations of the church, which was tastefully trimmed with a profusion of snowballs, peonies, yellow iris and weigelia. A short devotional service was held, followed by the baptism of Carol Gwendolyn Lyman, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lyman.

The program was as follows: Processional, America the Beautiful; anniversary greeting, ten girls; recitation, A Snappy Salute, Westcott Rice; song, Follow Me, Lila Seeley and four girls; recitation, Clayton Hunt, Jr.; exercise, Shy Happenings, three boys in the primary class; flag drill, ten girls. Margaret Hutchins reading the story; song, Carleton Hutchins; recitation, Frederick Bertsch; song, I Love Jesus, Helen and Marie Field; reading, Elisha and Dothan, Elizabeth Bertsch; song, Not a Sparrow Falleth, Mrs. Philip Isham; The Sunday School: Past, Edward P. Lyman; Present, Howard Rice; Future, David Hunt; address, Rev. T. Newton Owen, on the text He bringeth them into the desired haven.

He expressed the hope that all the children would reach their destined haven, using the metaphor we have the business of carrying cargoes through out lives, and must steer the ship ourselves carefully through life to the heavenly haven. We must not allow others to enter the pilot house and manage the ship.

A surprise party was given to Mrs. Robert Cobb of West street by Miss Esther Granstrom, the West street school teacher, and a number of their friends on Friday evening. A very pleasant evening was passed in playing cards and other games.

NORTH STONINGTON

Miss Flora E. Gauthier of Hartford, a former principal of Wheeler school, was a commencement guest of Mrs. George W. Tryon.

Mrs. Leonard Main was a week end guest of friends in New London.

John D. Avery, who entered the Lawrence hospital in New London several days ago, is expected home soon.

Wheeler school commencement exercises Monday afternoon passed off very pleasantly. Henry A. Tirrell of Norwich, a member of the board of trustees, presented the diplomas to the two graduates, James Franklin Brown, Jr., and Lillian Swanson. The Downs memorial prize was awarded to Helen Magnus, and the reading prizes to Carolyn Stedman and Messrs. Fisher and Harland.

The officers of the Wheeler School Alumni association for the year ensuing are: Frank W. Stolfe, president; Miss Evelyn B. Man, vice president; Mrs. George H. Stone, secretary. The executive committee is Mrs. Thurman P. Maine, Mrs. George H. Murray and Miss Gertrude L. Maine.

Miss Elizabeth S. Brown will graduate from the State Normal school at Willimantic next week.

Miss Dora Thompson Maine is in town for an indefinite stay.

"The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise"

EASY on the ears! Irresistible to the feet! That's the kind of record Paul Specht and His Orchestra have made in "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise."

It is a wondrously romantic melody, dressed in the gorgeous harmony with which Specht clothes all his numbers; and through it runs a fox-trot rhythm smooth as silk, resistless as the sea.

When the final encore has been answered, reverse this New Process Columbia Record—A-3870—and "Roses of Picardy," a companion fox-trot presented by this same master of symphonic syncopation, will start the dance anew.

To-day, your Columbia Dealer is demonstrating this double "hit," with the other new Columbia releases. These include choice Symphony selections and the newest dance and song successes. All are listed at the left.

Cut out this list now, before you turn the page. Take it with you to any Columbia Dealer, and play as many selections as you wish in his hearing room. You will be delighted.

All these new records are Columbia New Process Records—with the super-quiet surface from which the scratch and scrape are so delightfully absent. The process is patented, and no one else can produce records even resembling Columbia construction and improved surface.

But, all Columbia Records can be played on any phonograph.

LITTLE TO SHOW IN NEW LONDON THAT BIG RACE IS TWO DAYS OFF

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 19—With only two days to intervene before the struggle on the river between the crews of Yale and Harvard one would hardly realize that the greatest of all college aquatic events is at hand. There are a few yachts in the river, a very few, but more are coming and by Friday when the race is to occur there will be a harbor full of various craft, large and small. The hotels have not, you felt the increase in patronage though there are a few enthusiasts at the Mohican which is the head quarters for the friends of the crews and the collegians who will be at the races. The reservations at the Mohican and at O'Leary's are coming in, but they must come in more rapidly if the hotels are to be filled. The great part of the spectators of the races will come on the afternoon of the races for they can leave home at noon and then be here long before the hour of the race, which is at 4 o'clock. The varsity race will be rowed down stream this year so that the observation train patrons will have a view of the contest and a distant sight of the crews all the way down the course. There is absolutely no betting on the race as yet, though Yale is the favorite among those who express an opinion as to results in the varsity contest. The yachts that have come into the harbor are well up toward the bridge whence they can slip above the big span that stretches across the river on the morning of the race and take a place of vantage along the course. The state motor vehicle department has made every arrangement for keeping the roads leading to the city as clear as possible for automobile traffic. In years past the city has provided a number of special officers who are acquainted with the light-fingered gentlemen who come from the cities, but under the new form of government nothing of that sort has been arranged for and the crooks will have greater liberty and more opportunity than they have ever had since the first races were rowed here more than thirty years ago. There has never been a race day yet when there have not been arrests of crooks from the big cities, for they have preyed upon those who are careless in crowds. What the light-fingered gentry will do this year remains to be seen. At the council meeting Monday evening an appeal was made by Councilor Grogan and the mayor for the appointment and assignment to duty of supernumary policemen, but the matter was dodged and no move to get the additional officers has been made.

It becomes more apparent every day that Bank street must be made a one-way thoroughfare if automobile traffic is to go on unhindered and accidents are to be averted. The street is now congested whenever there is anything particular going on.

Charles Hines, a sailor aboard the U. S. S. Savannah at anchor in the lower harbor, is under arrest, being charged with the theft of $30 from a fellow seaman, Thomas McCulle while Hines, McCulle and a third sailor, M. Levy, were in New London Sunday, the trio occupied rooms in a local hotel Saturday night and during the absence of McCulle from his room, which he had left unlocked, Hines is alleged to have entered the room and stolen the money.

O'Connell, a member of the board of relief, were married this morning at 8 o'clock, the ceremony taking place at St. Joseph's church and in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the couple. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, pastor of the church. Michael L. O'Connell was best man, and Mrs. Hazel M. O'Connell, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. The bride wore a becoming gown of gray crepe de chine with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of white snapdragons, fastened with a bow of silver glow silk ribbon. The gown of the matron of honor was a burnt ornage ceration of crepe de chine with hat to match and she carried a bouquet of deep pink snapdragons, tied with silver glow ribbon to match. A reception was held following the wedding at the home of the bride's mother, where Mr. and Mrs. Spellman received the best wishes of their acquaintances. Mr. and Mrs. Spellman departed upon their wedding tour at noon and before they take up their future home at No. 667 Broad street, Hartford, they will visit Washington and New York. Mr. Spellman is an officer of the Hartford police department and is well known in New London.

The search for the body of Edward Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fisher of No. 48 Nathan Hale street, who was drowned from one of the launches of the Hotel Griswold last Saturday evening, has not resulted successfully for despite the continuous dragging of the river bottom, the grappling irons have failed to come in contact with the body. The efforts of the searchers is now being directed principally up that section of the river bottom at the mouth of the harbor for it is believed that the body has been carried a long distance from the location where it sank in the water. This morning New London lodge of Elks of which organization the father of the boy is a past exalted ruler, offered a reward of $100 for the finding of the body.

An automobile, operated by Mrs. Lillian Champney of No. 32 Pleasant street, Groton, complained to the New London police this afternoon that while she was driving westerly along the approach of the Thames river highway bridge late yesterday afternoon her car was damaged by being forced off the edge of the highway by an unidentified auto that entered the state road from the state pier.

An automobile, owned and operated by C. H. Coffrom of No. 17 Bank street, in turning from South into Whitehall street, late yesterday afternoon struck and damaged a Ford sedan then owned by a Mr. Foster of Jewett City. The automobile was extensively damaged.

Detective Sergeant Charles Hastmond this morning arrested two boys, both about 10 years of age, for stealing a gold watch and $8 from the home of Mrs. Charles Champion of No. 147 Howard street, last Saturday. The boys who admitted the theft, will be turned over to Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield and will be arraigned in the juvenile court next Saturday. The boys spent the money, but they secreted the watch in a quantity of lumber in the yard of the Whiton Machine company and has been returned to the owner. Mrs. Champion did not discover her loss until yesterday, when she lodged complaint with the police.

An improvement is to be made to several of New London's streets, and improvements that have been needed a long time. This was decided at a meeting of the members of the city council, sitting as a committee following the regular session of the body last night. The meeting decided to cause the brick pavement on State street to be extended from Meridian street to the granolithic pavement on Broad street. When completed the entire highway from East Hartford to the railroad station on State street will be either paved or of granolithic construction. Another improvement to be made is the continuation of the pavement on Howard street to Walbach street. The present dirt surface on that street is constantly in need of repair because of the hundreds of heavy vehicles that pass over it daily. Still another improvement to be made will be the construction of new sidewalks and curbing on several streets at an estimated cost of $25,000. The streets that will receive the new sidewalks and curbing have not been determined, but as there have been many requests for the improvement in various parts of the city, property owners on some of the streets and avenues who have sought improvements being made there, will obtain them. The money to defray the cost of the work will be made by additional appropriations being authorized by the council. The committee also discussed the recent purchase by the city of a building and property in Crescent street, formerly that of the late Nathaniel Otis. The money to pay for the site of eight lots acquired and to be purchased will be obtained by the issuance of bonds. At the meeting of the council next Monday night resolutions will be introduced providing for the street improvements, and it is probable that a resolution authorizing the bond issue will also be acted upon.

Louie J. Webb became extricated from two offenses that stood against him this morning as soon as the police court could deal with him. He was fined $3 for operating an auto without registration, which let him out of his first case and then a complaint against him for transporting intoxicating liquor unlawfully was nolled. He was caught on the Thames river bridge last week Thursday morning about 3 o'clock when he was en route to his summer place, a public hostelry known as the Bayside Inn at Noank. Prohibition agents are said to have been tipped off that Webb was going across and that he was carrying many bottles or booze. It is believed the "tip" came from the submarine base at which place Mr. Webb has had customers for his stock of liquors. Mr. Webb for some reason has a suspicion, it is claimed, that a Williams "gave him away." Anyhow, Webb was not punished for the offense in the police court for Prosecutor Cronin moved for and was allowed a nolle as Webb would be punished twice for the same offense if he was penalized in the police court and then was taken before the district court and punished there too for the offense. Frank Saunders is the surety on the bond of Webb.

MANUFACTURES FORM OVER ONE-HALF OUR TOTAL EXPORTS

The continued success of the American manufacturer in the invasion of foreign markets is illustrated by the latest figures of our export trade. An analysis of the March exports, presented by the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York, shows that manufactures actually formed 54% of the domestic exports of the country in that month as against 48% in the same month of last year. In fact, the March exports of manufactures were at a rate of over 2,000,000,000 a year or practically double the annual average of the years immediately preceding the war. Exports of manufactures in March 1921 reached 60% of the total preceding the war, 34% in 1920, 15% in 1880, and 18% in 1890. Exports of manufactures in 1923 seem likely to total and perhaps exceed $3,000,000,000 against $1,040,000,000 in the year immediately preceding the war, less than a half billion dollars in 1900 and less than a quarter of a billion dollars in 1890. Exports of manufactures in 1923 will be double those of the year preceding the war, four times that of 1900 and ten times as much in value as in 1890.

What parts of the world buy this enormous flood of manufactures now passing out of the United States? Every section and every country. This is evidenced not only by the fact that all the important countries of the world are participating in the demand evidenced by the high percentage which manufactures are now forming of our exports, but when we study the details we find that all sorts of manufactures go to practically every country and colony on the face of the globe. Ploughs and cultivators, for example, went in 1921 to 80 countries and colonies, passenger automobiles to over 100 colonies and countries. Even in the smaller requirements of daily life the field covered is extremely large. In baking powder, for example, our exports extended in 1921 to 75 countries, and canned salmon to over 60 countries, while the number of countries to which our cotton cloths were sent was over 100.

The Face of the Soul.

Your palm is the newspaper of your soul. There are head-lines, heart-lines, death notices, marriage announcements, and little items that often contain all the news of your ancestors that is not fit to print.

I became interested in palmistry about three years ago when my wife, after an examination of the criss-crosses in my left hand through a powerful magnifier told me that my line of least resistance was very great, that the girdle of Venus had slipped on to the Mount of Apollo, that my line of intuition had shown tremendous development during the years, that a bar leading to the Plane of Mars [illegible] very many years ago. I was exciting more and more cravings about myself and found that [illegible] constantly seeking [illegible] from old [illegible] right. [illegible] began to [illegible] the lines [illegible] officers after a series of [illegible]. Since then I have become a palmistry fan.

I do not believe these lines in the hands are accidental. There is nothing accidental in nature. Everything means something. Why not the lines in the hand? It is all very curious. If the face is the palm of the mind, the hand may very well be the face of the soul. Destiny must express itself. Nature must out. Even the [illegible] palmists showing the vast leagues of the subconscious that lie buried in each of us. Palm-reading is not a fad. It is an exact science. — Soriesky De Casseres in Arts and Decorating.

Uses of Paper In Japan.

The Japanese, as you know, carry paper umbrellas instead of cloth ones; but the paper is a very tough kind and is heavily oiled to shed water. They are made of all colors; and a rainy-day street scene in a Japanese city is a very cheering thing to view, by reason of these bright-colored umbrellas.

They use paper napkins and handkerchiefs and burn them after use, which—do them—seems a much more cleanly custom than ours.

They also make their lanterns and lamp globes of paper; and a Japanese fireman, when assisting at a big fire, carries a lighted lantern in one hand no matter how fierce the blaze from the fire may be. This custom is still in vogue in many towns and country districts, though in the larger coast and commercial cities modern fire-fighting apparatus is expertly manned by trained firemen.

Japanese boatmen row with a bent oar and facing the way they are going. They draw their boats on to the beach stern first. Their boats, like their houses, are unpainted, but are kept very clean.—From Adventure Magazine.

Easy Way to Remove Freckles and Blemishes

Some women have skin of such texture they occasionally are annoyed by the sudden appearance of freckles, slight eruptions, or fine lines. Sun and wind usually play havoc with skins of that kind. In such cases if one will procure an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at any drug store, apply a little before retiring, like cold cream, the trouble can easily be overcome. When the wax is washed off next morning, flaky skin particles come with it. The entire outer cuticle is removed in this way in a week or so without harm or inconvenience. No bleach could so effectually remove freckles or other cutaneous blemishes. The new surface is smooth, clear, fresh-looking.

MARKET WAS STRONGER

New York, June 18.—Stock prices displayed a better tone in today's active dealings on the New York stock exchange but there were indications of frightened and forced liquidation and short selling throughout the day which gave the market a speedy appearance. Several of the leaders tumbled to new low records before sufficient buying support set in to stem the tide of selling orders.

Official denial of the widespread rumors that several brokerage houses were in financial difficulties did much to dispel the pessimism that was so prevalent in yesterday's late dealings. Speculators for the decline made repeated assaults on the list but in many instances they encountered substantial buying orders placed on the belief that the recent reaction had been overdone and that technical conditions warranted a rally.

Oils were rather unstable because of unfavorable trade conditions, the Pan American issues, Texas company, California Petroleum, Producers & Refiners, General Asphalt and a number of others falling to new low prices for the year.

United States Steel touched another new low at 92 1-4 and then rallied to 92 7-8, up 1-4. Gulf States and Republic Steels, Consolidated Gas, Cerro De Pasco and Kennecott Coppers, International Paper, Baldwin, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Central Leather were among the more than three score other stocks that sold at new minimum prices for the year, but all rallied before the close.

Rails held up well in the first few hours of trading but they gave way in the afternoon reaction and many of them closed at net losses on the day. Chesapeake & Ohio, Lackawanna Illinois Central, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico, and Norfolk & Southern dropped back 1 to 3 points.

Call money held at 5 per cent. all day. The demand for time money and commercial paper was again quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchange rates showed marked improvement. Demand sterling advanced 5-16 to $4.62 5-16 and French francs climbed 7 1-2 points to 5.32 1-2 cents. German marks rallied from .0006 1-4, the extreme low established yesterday, to .0009 3-8 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 19.—Recessions ranging from large fractions to more than a point were general in the trading in bonds today. Prices, however, held fairly steady in the U. S. government group.

Copper company liens were particularly heavy, Cerro de Pasco 8's dropping 4 7-8 points to 121 1-8, a new low for the year. Liggett & Myers 5's and American Telephone and Telegraph convertible 4's each dropped a point. Pan American 7's recorded a gain of one point.

Railroad mortgages also were offered freely, losses of a point or more being registered by Erie General 4's, Kansas City Southern 5's; and Denver & Rio Grande refunding 5's. Transactions slumped also. New York Railways refunding 4's certificates, and Interborough Rapid Transit 7's each declined 1.

Selling of foreign government issues continued throughout the day but losses generally were small. Mexican 4's closed 1 1-4 lower and Serbian 8's fell off nearly a point.

Total sales (par value) were $12,570,000.

Public offering will be made tomorrow of $5,000,000 state of North Carolina one-year 5 per cent. highway bonds at 110 1-2.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, June 19.—Although rains in the spring crop belt had a bearish influence on the wheat market today, and December delivery touched a new low price record for the season, the effect was counterbalanced by liberal purchasing for Europe. The market closed unsettled at from 1-2c net decline to 3-8c advance, with July 107 1-4 to 107 3-8 and September 1.06 5-8 to 1.06 3-8. Corn showed 3-8c to 1 1-8c gain, oats 1-8c a 1-4c to 1-4c a 3-8c and provisions 2c to 7c.

With moisture almost general throughout the northwest where drought has been complained of, the wheat market underwent a decided set back in price soon after the opening. The fact that crop reports from the southwest were less bullish than of late, tended also to weaken values. On the other hand the Liverpool market failed to reflect fully the severe fall which prices suffered here yesterday, and this circumstance helped to bring about a rally. Corn strength counted further as a bullish factor in regard to wheat.

Upturns in the wheat market attained their best impetus, however, only after estimates were out that export interests had taken 500,000 to 1,000,000 bushels of new hard winter wheat today in addition to purchases yesterday that totaled 1,000,000 bushels. Bullish sentiment in the late trading was increased somewhat by indications that hedging sales had fallen off by surmises that farmers might prove less anxious than usual to let go at the start of the season.

Corn and oats derived their strength from the fact that public elevators here have only 288,000 bushels of corn and that rural offerings are meagre.

Provisions at first lacked support but later rose with hog values and grain.

SWALLOWS BICHLORIDE IN ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE

New London, June 19.—Mrs. Edna Brown, 32, of No. 47 Church street, attempted self-destruction this noon on State street by swallowing a quantity of bichloride of mercury. The victim is now a patient at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, where tonight it was stated that she was resting comfortably and would undoubtedly recover. That Mrs. Brown will cheat death is undoubtedly due to the fact that a physician was at hand when she swallowed the poison and administered almost immediate treatment.

Mrs. Brown, who formerly resided in Fitchville and who is estranged from her husband, was until recently employed as a waitress at the Knickerbocker restaurant on Bank street. It is believed that her estrangement from her husband was the cause of her attempt to end her life.

Mrs. Brown, who had been about State street during the forenoon, was joined shortly before 12 o'clock by her sister, Mrs. Francis Reinhart, also of No. 47 Church street. While the couple walked in the block on the north side of the street, between Main and Green streets, Mrs. Brown produced two 15-grain bichloride tablets from her person and swallowed them. Within a few seconds the woman collapsed, falling in front of Francis Allanach of Bolles avenue and Frederick Burdick of Montauk avenue. The two men carried her to the store of R. D. Barrows and Dr. George P. Cheney, who was nearby administered first aid treatment. An antidote was given, causing her to become nauseated, after which she was transferred to the hospital.

MANAGER KNIGHT ISSUES KU KLUX KLAN DENIAL

Vice President and General Manager Harry C. Knight of The Southern New England Telephone company, has issued the following statement:

June 17, 1923.

I was informed by telephone this morning that a weekly paper circulating in this city and state contained an item to the effect that my touring car, registration No. 1091, was seen about midnight on June 9th, returning from the Waterman field, scene of the Ku Klux gathering at Meriden. On obtaining a copy of the paper, I found the statement as quoted.

For myself, personally, I would not consider the item worthy of notice. As a public service executive, and with the natural desire to avoid the least possibility of uncertainty on the part of any of the 4,000 people in our company who may have changed to see the car of it, I am moved so far as to denounce the statement as an absolute falsehood, whether malicious or otherwise.

I have no connection with the Ku Klux Klan, and my car remained in New Haven throughout the night of June 9th.

LISBON OFFICERS DEFENDANTS IN SUIT FOR DAMAGES OF $10,000

Late Tuesday afternoon in the superior court here before Judge George E. Hinman the trial was started in a $10,000 damage suit brought against Grand Juror Enoch B. Cheney and Constable Merton Bugbee, of Lisbon by Joseph and Mary Smerchansky, husband and wife of that town. The plaintiffs accuse the defendants of using brutal and unnecessary force in arresting Mrs. Smerchansky at her home on March 23, 1923, threatening and aiming a revolver at her, beating, kicking, dragging her on the ground and handcuffing her. It is alleged that she was in a delicate condition of health at the time and that the treatment she recieved at the hands of the officers caused her much suffering.

Mrs. Smerchansky was the first witness called to the stand by her attorneys, John H. Barnes and Josiah Greenstein. She told of the arrival of the two men at her home with a demand for money in a court case, and of her refusal to pay. Thereupon she was handcuffed and when her husband saw her being led out of the house, a struggle ensued between the two officers and the man and woman, in which Mrs. Smerchansky testified she was knocked down and dragged over the ground by the handcuffs and that two shots were fired from a revolver by the officers.

Joseph Smerchansky and her 12 year old daughter, Virginia, gave evidence along corrobatory lines, after which the plaintiff rested. All the witnesses were cross-examined by Attorney Arthur M. Brown, counsel for the defendants.

Mr. Cheney was the first witness for the defense. He said he was grand juror at the time of the alleged assault, but he had resigned shortly afterwards. He had gone with Constable Bugbee at the constable's request and they were to collect some money that was due on a mittimus. When they arrived at the Smerchansky farm the woman was outside the kitchen door emptying a pan of water. Constable Bugbee showed her the paper and said he wanted the money. She said, "No money, no money," and stepped back into the kitchen where she grabbed a stick of wood. Bugbee pointed the pistol at her and told her to drop it which she did and then Cheney put the handcuffs on her at the direction of Bugbee.

As they were leading her out of the door, somebody threw a pail of water from upstairs. It went all over the woman and in a moment her husband jumped through a window onto their backs. In the scuffle that followed everybody went down at one time or another, the witness said, and he saw it was no place for him and he told Bugbee he was going for the marines. Bugbee fired his pistol off twice to scare the people.

Cheney denied that he jumped on Mrs. Smerchansky as she lay on a flat rock or that he had struck her in the back as she had testified.

Court adjourned at 4 o'clock standard time to continue the trial the next day.

DEFENSE WITNESSES TESTIFY IN AUTO SMASH CASE

Defense testimony in the $500 suit of Henry Marx of this city against Alex Lopato for damages to the Marx automobile which was in collision with the Lopato machine at Taftville in the early morning of October 29 last was reached in the common pleas court here Tuesday before Judge C. B. Waller and a jury.

Occupants of the Lopato car were the principal witnesses for the defendant. These included Benny Lopato, a cousin of Alex, Lillian Rustic, who was riding in the front seat with Alex who was driving, Julia Kisley, a niece of the driver, and Mrs. Agnes Jsemunth, who said her husband had hired the Lopato car to take them home to Occum from a dance in Pulaski hall.

These all gave testimony that contradicted testimony of witnesses for the plaintiff as to the way the accident happened and to the way the cars were traveling in the highway on Norwich avenue near the corner of Hunters avenue. All denied that they had made a stop at Wunderlich's or that the car had circled into Hunters avenue and had come out onto Norwich avenue, just before the collision, as witnesses for the defense had testified. The persons in the Lopato car testified that it drove along Norwich avenue close to the car tracks and that the Marx car came towards them in the same line of travel and without lights showing.

Herbert B. Wightman, a civil engineer, produced a plan of the location of the accident and two pictures. He testified that by test and measurements a car of the wheel base that Lopato was driving could not make a semi-circle into Hunters avenue and come out again on to Norwich avenue.

Officers John F. Carroll and Peter J. Driscoll of the Norwich police force testified to the position of the cars when they were locked together after the collision. The former said that he smelled Lopato's breath at the scene of the accident and at the police station afterwards and could not detect any odor of liquor.

Witnesses for the plaintiff who testified Tuesday morning were Albert Ziegelmeyer, Barbara Friese, Roselle E. Chapman, Joseph Cryskavitz, Henry C. Marx and George W. Carpenter. The last named is an automobile mechanic who said he put in 116 hours making repairs to the Marx car.

The trial will probably be concluded today (Wednesday).

DIES FROM INJURIES IN FALL DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT

As the result of a fall down the elevator shaft in the Shannon building about 11.15 o'clock Tuesday morning, Mrs. Ella Ford, 50, widow of Charles O. Ford, of this city, died at the Backus hospital about 6 o'clock Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Ford, who was getting ready to move to Willimantic from 82 School street had called at the Shannon building to visit a friend and was leaving the building when the accident happened. The operator had just taken a delivery boy to the fifth floor. The boy rode back on the elevator and asked the operator to stop at the fourth floor.

When the elevator was descending and approaching the fourth floor the boy opened the elevator door and got off to make a delivery. The elevator ascended a little below the fourth floor and the operator in order to bring it level with the fourth floor started it upwards above the fourth floor.

Mrs. Ford was waiting at the fourth floor entrance for the elevator. Evidently she thought the elevator was in the correct position and started to get in. She fell through the space between the fourth floor level and the elevator and went down the four stories to the basement, striking the elevator cable in the bottom of the shaft.

Dr. John W. Callahan was summoned and the suffering woman was taken to the hospital in the ambulance. She received a fracture of the left thigh, a compound fracture of the right leg, fracture of the right thigh, fracture of the right hip, laceration of the left leg and injuries to her scalp.

Mrs. Ford came to Norwich from Willimantic about a year and a half ago. She had made her home in Willimantic for 30 years before coming to Norwich. Her husband died May 9th and was buried in Willimantic. She is survived by an uncle, Henry Porter of Willimantic.

A hearing has been set for Tuesday, June 26, at 10 a. m., and Mr. Lyons is directed to produce the children in court then.

NUMBER FOUR

our former intercourse. Still, no matter which path we take, we shall carry with us a common bond of affection for our Alma Mater, and a feeling of gratitude for you who have made our years of school life here a possibility.

Mr. Tirrell and teachers of the Academy:

On this day which, for the most of us, marks the end of our school life here, we wish to express our appreciation of your many kindnesses during the past four years. Our daily association has led us to a perfect understanding of each other, has brought to us a realization of what a friend, an adviser and a confidante a teacher can be. Your never ending patience, your sympathy and encouragement have been our guide and inspiration throughout our course, and will leave with us only pleasant memories of you in years to come.

FREDERICK S. HASLAM,

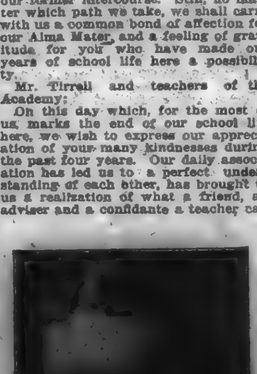
Parents and Friends:

Rightly to thank you is beyond our power, because our love for you has made us try at all times to be worthy of your sacrifice, your sympathy, your pride in us and in our undertakings. You have comforted us in our misfortune, cheered us in our despondency, rejoiced with us in our success. You have often deprived yourselves in order that we might have that education which you had obtained or had been unable to receive. In your attitude toward us you have shown a constant interest, an affection and a sympathy for all of which we thank you from the depths of our hearts.

Dear Classmates: Four long years we've spent together, laboring in the desire to acquire an education. We entered the Academy with this purpose, and today, as we stand upon the threshold of a new life, we cherish the same fond hope. For, although we feel that we have learned a great deal during our course here, there is still much more for us to know. Before long we must go out into the world. We must pursue our chosen professions while taking up the work of those who have gone before us. And when that day comes when we shall have reached the goal of our desires, may we still think with pride and love of our dear Alma Mater, where we spent four happy and fruitful years, where, through the kindly help of our teachers we learned to accomplish what we meant to do and where there was instilled in us an appreciation of the better things of life. May we always though widely separated, be bound in spirit by the unbreakable ties of love and loyalty toward our dear school, so that we may never act in a way to detract from her glory, but may seek rather to increase her honor and add to her praise.



ELIZABETH A. PORTELANCE,
Valedictorian.

Presentation of Diplomas

Members of the Class of 1923:

We gather today, your parents and friends, your teachers, the corporators and trustees of this institution, to congratulate you on the completion of your Academy course. As we greet you on your graduation day our chief feeling is one of responsibility. One hundred and twenty young people equipped as you are have great power for good or for harm. Today I am reminded of another group smaller than yours, that came more than 300 years ago to the coast of New England.

In many respects they had enjoyed fewer advantages than you have. But they came with high purpose and invincible courage. Death and famine could not conquer them. And they have left to our country a priceless heritage of ideals. Their lineal descendants are becoming relatively fewer and fewer, but their high aims, their conceptions of government, will last as long as our nation endures.

The thoughts that were theirs must be handed on to posterity by such young people as yourselves. You must be the standard bearers and on your standards must be inscribed the word "Service."

Our history is filled with the names of great leaders of various races and creeds who have unselfishly and courageously served their country.

As examples of public spirited citizens I commend to you the two Norwich men whose portraits are before you, John Slater, who after the Civil war left a million dollars for the education of the negro, and his son, William A. Slater, who gave to his Alma Mater this splendid building, and many other gifts, who was chief contributor to the Backus hospital, and has been in many other ways a benefactor of this community. They believed in service. You must believe it. Your abilities, your resources, your ambitions must be consecrated to noble aims.

And if your powers are centered on this great ideal, we look to your future with absolute confidence.

Class Gift Presented

ARBOR ORATION, CLASS PICTURE AND SUPPER

The class supper was served at 7 o'clock in the Academy gymnasium where the entire faculty and representatives of the other classes were guests. The floral decorations in baskets of blue and white by Hawkins, were unusually attractive. The following menu was served.

Grape Fruit a la Wauregan

51-YEAR-OLD WALL STREET FIRM FORCED TO THE WALL

Zimmerman & Forshay, One of the Oldest and Best Known Members of the New York Stock Exchange, Yesterday Filed an Involuntary Petition in Bankruptcy—Firm Had Been Subjected to a Run Since Monday—Was One of the Largest Money Changing Houses in Wall Street—Steps Are to be Taken to Close the Doors of Many Stock Brokerage Houses.

New York, June 20.—Caught in the maelstrom of rumors with which Wall street has seethed for the past few days, Zimmerman & Forshay, one of the oldest and best known members of the New York stock exchange, was forced to the wall today.

The crash, coming on the heels of an announcement by President Cromwell of the exchange yesterday that an investigation had disclosed rumors of failures to be without foundation, caused a bad break in the market, more than eighty of the most popular shares tobogganing to new low records for the year, with losses of two to five points.

President Cromwell, in an interview this afternoon, declared he was ready to repeat his statement of yesterday, that exchange officials knew of no member house that was in trouble. He admitted, however, that "any statement as to the condition of a brokerage firm is the statement of a moment and is no 'a priori' theory." He would not hazard a flat prediction that none of the eight or nine firms concerning which rumors have been floated would not fail tomorrow.

Emphasizing the fact that his statement was "the statement of a moment," Mr. Cromwell disclosed that the business conduct committee of the exchange had had members of the Zimmerman & Forshay house before it yesterday, a short while before the optimistic statement was issued. At that time, the firm was able to convince the committee, he said, that it would be able to pull through, despite a heavy run which started Monday.

No less than six times this forenoon, he said, he had received reports that the firm was on the verge of arranging a loan on the basis of its claims against the alien property custodian for moneys impounded during the war. But the negotiations fell through and the firm closed its doors shortly after noon.

Filing of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy quickly followed, and Gordon Auchincloss was appointed receiver in $50,000 bond. The firm announced through its counsel that its liabilities were approximately $7,000,000 and that it had assets of $5,500,000, inability to realize quickly on these assets, however, made it impossible for the firm to meet the run.

Thomas Cochran, a member of J. P. Morgan & Co., disclosed this afternoon the story of the frantic efforts members of the firm had made to induce the Morgan house to come to the rescue.

Mr. Cochran, who had been out last night, reached his home shortly before midnight, to find that repeated telephone calls had been made for him. In a few minutes the telephone rang again and a member of the firm begged him for a midnight conference at which he would "look into the picture," as he expressed it.

He declined, saying he would be glad to talk it over at his office this morning, but before the hour set for the conference the Zimmerman & Forshay condition had become so critical that Morgan & Co. decided it could do nothing.

The firm had been subjected to a run since Monday, when rumors were circulated that it was about to follow the trail blazed last week by the now bankrupt exchange house of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, which, like Zimmerman & Forshay, did a large banking business and trade in German exchange and letters of credit, in addition to its brokerage line.

Hampered by the frozen condition of more than $1,000,000 in assets impounded by the alien property custodian during the war, the firm tried to negotiate a loan on the basis of that claim, but failed. The crisis came today when the National Bank of Commerce, with which the firm kept its principal account, suspended certification of its checks. News of this action augmented the run on the firm and shortly after noon the doors were closed.

At 12:35 a letter was read from the rostrum in which the firm announced that it was unable to meet its obligations and had decided to close its doors. About the same time an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in federal court and Judge Knox named Gordon Auchincloss receiver in $50,000 bond. Shortly after 1 the New York curb market announced suspension of the firm from its associate membership on the curb.

By this time three assistant district attorneys, despatched by District Attorney Banton, had reached the Zimmerman & Forshay offices to make sure that the books were kept available for official scrutiny in the steadily widening investigation of Wall street houses that was inaugurated with disclosure of the E. M. Fuller & Co. buckeshon scandal.

The district attorney's office said, in fairness to the Zimmerman & Forshay house, however, that there was no indication of any irregularity so far and that no complaints had been received.

Leipold Zimmerman, senior member of the firm, issued a statement in which he declared that the failure of the firm had been caused solely by the flotation of rumors concerning it, which caused an overwhelming run.

"Zimmerman & Forshay," said the statement, "have been in business for fifty-one years and for more than forty-six years the firm has been a member of the New York stock exchange. I am one of the original members of the business and we have always endeavored to conduct the business along the highest and most honorable lines.

"During the past few days, from a source which we are unable to ascertain, there have been persistent rumors affecting the credit of our firm. It is our belief that the firm is entirely solvent and that we can pay our obligations in full. The insistence of these rumors, however, has led to serious withdrawals of balances and the calling of loans by banks.

"The firm has always specialized in foreign currencies and there was due it at the outbreak of the war large sums of money from German and Austrian banks. These sums have not been collected, although proceedings for their recovery are pending before the alien property custodian and mixed claims commission, and it is hoped that collection of this sum for the benefit of creditors can promptly be made.

"As stated above, however, we expect to pay our creditors in full."

Zimmerman & Forshay was the largest money changing house in Wall street and one of its members, John S. Scully, long has been regarded as a foremost authority on foreign moneys. For years the firm's quotations on silver were accepted as official by the financial district.

POOL TO ASSIST BANKING AND BROKERAGE FIRMS

New York, June 20.—Formation of a banking pool to assist brokerage and banking firms likely to be inconvenienced by the widespread uneasiness of investors and speculators through the two large stock exchange failures since Saturday was under discussion in Wall street today. Seymour L. Cromwell, president of the exchange told reporters that he had heard such a suggestion but did not know whether it had passed the discussion stage.

Mr. Cromwell admitted that the failure of Zimmerman and Forshay today could have been averted if the firm had had more time to negotiate a loan on its frozen credits in which, he said, several banking firms would have been willing to participate.

While a run on the Zimmerman and Forshay firm had been a matter of common knowledge in Wall street since Monday and rumors of impending failure had been widely circulated the bankruptcy came as a surprise after the statement of President Cromwell Tuesday soon that the committee on business conduct had "checked up the various names touched by rumor and in each case had found no justification for any suspicion of weakness."

Wall street was of a decidedly pessimistic frame of mind after the Zimmerman failure, which was reflected in the sharp break in the stock market in which most of the leaders touched new low records for the year. Liquidation by frightened investors was reported to have reached a stage where outside assistance might be necessary to restore public confidence.

Bankers, except in a few individual cases, have not been called upon for general support in the stock market since the declaration of war in August, 1914. The dumping of foreign securities into the local market made temporary banking assistance necessary at that time, but the exchange was eventually closed, until the following December when business was resumed on a limited scale.

STEPS TO CLOSE MANY STOCK BROKERAGE HOUSES

New York, June 20.—Definite steps to close the doors of many stock brokerage houses, against which complained have been received, will be taken in the supreme court tomorrow it was announced tonight by Deputy Attorney General John J. Dwyer. Injunctions against various brokers will be asked, he said.

Mr. Dwyer said he would act under the Martin act, passed recently by the state legislature, which authorized the attorney general to investigate brokers and suspend them by injunction in case fraudulent practices were disclosed. The deputy attorney general has been conducting the investigation quietly since the passage of the bill, he said.

When the checks were placed in evidence, Silkworth vehemently denied that the money he had deposited came from the checks, nor from any other bankrupt member of the Consolidated. He admitted, under questioning, however, that he had speculated on his own account.

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY STARTS 15,000 MILE TRIP

On Board President Harding's Special Train, Near Cumberland, Maryland, June 20.—President Harding made his first speech after leaving Washington for a 15,000 mile trip to the Pacific coast and Alaska today, at Martinsburg, West Virginia. It was addressed to a small boy in the streets who hailed the president and received in turn a cheerful "Hello, there."

The train had stopped for water when the president appeared on the rear platform. The small boy was the first to recognize the chief executive and called "Hello, Mr. President." Others, including a number of railroad workers who had been waiting at the station followed the boy's example, shook hands and wished the president a pleasant journey.

A few miles out of Martinsburg, the president, still on the rear platform, saw a scene which carried him back to the swimming hole days of his youth. In the foreground were half a dozen boys scantily clad enjoying refuge from the mid-summer heat in a pool formed by a little creek flowing down through th ehills. Mr. Harding greeted the youngsters with a smile and a wave of his cap.

The president spent the first hours aboard train enjoying the scenery along the upper Potomac and in complete relaxation after the long hours spent at his desk in preparation of his more important addresses and in clearing up official business. During this time he made the acquaintance of the train crew and pleasantly reprimanded some of the trainmen who had been to busy to visit the president's car.

STOCK BROKERS IN BERLIN ARE HAVING HARD TIME

Berlin, June 20 (By the A. P.)—The financial reports from New York were about ten hours late in reaching Berlin today, and the delay contributed greatly to a nerve-wracking day on the bourse.

There was a mad rush to cover on stock tradings as the mark opened at 123,000 to the dollar and rallied to 101,000, only to slip back in the afternoon to 117,000.

While the brokers were feverishly trying to reduce their losses down in the financial district, Chancellor Cuno sat in his Wilhelmstrasse office surrounded by the best financial talent available, trying to find some means strong enough to stem the tide of the mark's depreciation. It is reported that no final conclusions were reached, and that the conference will continue tomorrow, but the fact that the chancellor is consulting the bankers is credited with having lent a certain amount of support to the German currency.

It is understood that the questions discussed included measures to provide further artificial support for the mark, such as the Reichsbank has been affording lately; the advisability of the Reichsbank hereafter giving credits on a gold basis, an increase in the obligatory internal loan, and the adjustment of taxes to meet the mark's depreciation.

The question is also said to have been raised of floating another loan in dollar treasury bills. The socialists are reported to be behind the movement to have the Reichsbank credits placed on a gold foundation. In order that interest payments might be required on the same basis, a guard thus being provided against the possibility of the credits being used in speculation.

To Draft German Labor in the Ruhr

To Operate All Industries—Outputs to be Turned to the Account of Reparations.

Duesseldorf, June 20.—(By The A. P.)—A decree providing for confiscation of all Rhurl valley industries, the products of which are applicable to the reparations account and forced operation of the plants by the Germans is being prepared by General Degoutte, commander of the occupation forces, it was announced today.

Arrangements for promulgation of the decree are going forward as rapidly as possible, but owing to the wide scope of its measure and the extensive character of the industries affected, it was said the French and Belgian authorities would require several days more in which to work out the details before putting the plan into operation.

The decree will give the military authorities absolute power to take over all metal works, iron and steel plants, mines, coke ovens and virtually all other private industries in the Ruhr.

In the event of the Germans refusing to operate the plants after requisition, the decree provides for jail sentences of five years, and in addition heavy fines for the directors of the companies or others responsible for the resistance.

In case of sabotage to hinder the work at any of the plants after requisition, those responsible will be tried before courtmartial and, upon conviction, will be subject to the death penalty.

The decree will be most sweeping, giving the military authorities, in collaboration with the French civil commission the right to exploit the industries themselves or to lease the plants to concessionaries if this is deemed better to the interests of the occupation authorities in their plan to obtain reparations.

New York, June 20.—Grover C. Loening, president of the Loening Aeronautical Engineering corporation, and three companions narrowly escaped death today when they were dumped into the East river from a 400 horsepower hydro-airplane.

The four had started on an experimental flight to test the possibility of taking off on cross winds. The machine had risen about twenty feet and was just gathering headway when one of the lateral controls refused to function and the craft turned completely over. None of the men was seriously hurt, and all were picked out of the river almost immediately by passing boats.

The other occupants of the machine were Albert P. Loening, brother of the owner, Henry H. Therburn and George H. Rummell of Kew Gardens, N. Y. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

LAVA STILL FLOWING FROM MT. ETNA CRATERS

Catania, June 20.—(By The A. P.)—The smiling, fruitful and thickly populated slopes of Mount Etna and the surrounding country, as the correspondent of The Associated Press saw them in the past, have now become with ghastly suddenness "The Land of Dreadful Night."

Through the thick darkness, which can almost be felt, glows the crimson of the lava fire flowing from the broken lips of the craters, extending for miles and gradually growing darker as the molten mass cools and hardens, until cracks and crevices appear on the surface through which can be seen bubbling up the coiling lava from beneath.

The fields of Piume Freddo, Diana and Catatabiano, once green and beautiful, now covered with heavy deposits of dust and cinders, tremble and heave beneath the feet, while the roaring sounds accompanying the eruption mingle with the rumblings of lorries through the darkness carrying away the refugees and their possessions from the doomed villages.

Approaching the volcano, masses of fiery material thrown up from the smaller craters can be seen; they roll slowly down the mountainside, and above them are dense clouds of smoke and vapor. One by one the splendid homes and villas, where the families in the neighborhood were accustomed to spend the summer months, are overborne and destroyed. Orchards and gardens have been consumed in the intense heat long before the lava reaches them, throwing off myriads of sparks, and finally smoking down into grim blackness.

At Castiglione, where the progress of the devouring lava stream is slow but steady, the inhabitants linger in their houses, collecting and packing their possessions, though doubtless most of these must be abandoned along the road. The living room in almost every house has been transformed into a chapel, with statues of the Madonna and saints, and candles burning before them, while figures prostrate themselves in prayer for protection.

WOMAN SUES SCULPTOR CALDER FOR $200,000 DAMAGES

New York, June 20.—Asserting that A. Stirling Calder, well known sculptor, had used without her consent, a model of her head on the model of the nude body of another girl and exhibited it as a composite work, resulting in her husband leaving her, Mrs. Charles U. Lind, today took the first step in what she said would be a suit for $200,000 damages.

Mrs. Lind's father, Abraham Levy, has been appointed her guardian ad litem to institute the suit, as she still is under age.

She said today that when she was a member of the art students league in 1921, Calder, then her instructor, had her pose for a model of a head. The next thing she knew a photograph of a statue, "The Last Dryad," was published in a magazine, the head being her likeness and the nude body that of another girl.

Before the photograph was published she was married and when it appeared she was unable to convince either her husband, her mother-in-law or her friends that she had not posed for the entire work. The "mortification and disgrace," she said brought on a nervous break-down and she recently returned from Lake Placid where she went to recuperate.

Mr. Calder declined to meet reporters who called at his studio today.

Montreal, June 20.—After four hours of effort during which scores of talesmen were rejected upon grounds of prejudice, a jury was completed late today to try Adelard Delorme, former Catholic priest, on a charge of murdering his half-brother, Raoul, for his insurance. The plea of Gustave Monette, Delorme's former counsel, that the former priest should not be tried because he was congenitally a mental incompetent was overruled by Chief Justice Sir Francois Lemieux.

Delorme, who laughed during his former counsel's plea, took great interest in the selection of the jury.

Taking of testiony will begin tomorrow.

PRISONERS PARDONED BY PRESIDENT HARDING

Washington, June 20.—Immediate release of more than a score of federal prisoners convicted of violating war laws but with continued detention of almost as many more was ordered today by President Harding before leaving on his western trip.

The president acted on 159 pardon and commutation cases, a record breaking number in the opinion of department of justice officials. He granted 30 conditional and 14 unconditional commutations, one full pardon, restored civil rights to 27 former prisoners and denied 84 applications for pardons or commutations. He also ordered remission of fines in two cases.

Interest centered in the cases of those convicted of violating the espionage, draft and other war laws, whose applications had been pressed by various organizations and persons of prominence. These numbered 46 and the president granted commutations to 21, but denied applications in 21 cases, including a group of 20 alleged members of the Industrial Workers of the World, convicted at Sacramento, Calif. Two convicted there, however, had their sentences commuted on condition of their deportation.

Sentences of 32 alleged I. W. W. member convicted in the celebrated Chicago trials and sent to the Leavenworth pentitentiary were commuted to expire at once. Three or four alleged I. W. W. members convicted at Wichita, Kansas, receive commutations.

In addition to the cases growing out of war law violations, the president's orders included clemency for many other prisoners convicted of offenses ranging from bigamy to bootlegging and including violations of the Mann White Slave, bribery and other statutes.

The sentence of John Christiano, convicted of violating the prohibition laws; sentence of three months in the Burlington, Vermont, jail, was commuted to expire at once because of illness.

ASSOCIATED PRESS MEN WITH PRESIDENTIAL PARTY

Washington, June 20.—Two experienced members of the Washington staff of the Associated Press are accompanying President Harding throughout his trip to the Pacific coast, Alaska and Panama and their stories will record all elements of news developing in connection with president's addresses and other activities.

In addition, the usual complete facilities of The Associated Press for news gathering along the route will be utilized in making the service adequate in every respect. So that there may be no delay in reporting every news development, ample telegraph and telephone connections have been leased at all points where the president is to speak, and arrangements have been made to send by wireless the stories covering that portion of the trip which is to be made by water.

The staff men accompanying the president will so divide their duties that the service they render will completect Associated Press papers at every hour of the day and night.

MOUNT ETNA STREAM OF LAVA IS DIVIDED

Rome, June 20.—An official communique on the eruption of Mount Etna says that the main stream of lava is now divided into two branches, one point toward Linguaglossa station, from which it is two miles distant, while the other, which is vaster, after destroying the Cerro railway station and a tract of provincial road, now skirts the foot of the hill, which will determine the future direction of the lava.

If the lava swerves to the right Linguaglossa will be flooded, but if to theleft it will overflow the plains. At present Linguaglossa is not threatened.

This official communication is not timed, and probably does not cover the situation up to date, as direct reports from the volcanic region says that the lava stream is much closer to Linguaglossa than the official statement admits.

BELIEVES GEORGE A. WHEELOCK WAS RATIONAL

New York, June 20.—The winning of a wager of $100,000 on Seth Low's election as mayor of New York, in 1901, was offered before the surrogate's court today as evidence of the sanity of the late George A. Wheelock, well known bookmaker, whose will is being contested by William Addison Wheelock, a brother. The testimony was given by Dr. Thomas De Naculey, who also said that in intimate talks with Wheelock the latter had said that "if Murphy and the democratic party fail to nominate Al Smith for governor they will be making a great mistake."

The doctor declared that Wheelock, who was a staunch republican, said there were only two democrats he would vote for. One was the present governor of New York state and the other Supreme Court Justice Wagner. He said that in his opinion Wheelock was rational.

TWELVE GIRLS HELD THIEF UNTIL POLICE ARRIVED

New York, June 20.—Twelve girls acted as volunteer policemen today when they cornered a well dressed man giving the name of Frank Martin, whom they charged with stealing a purse, pushed him into the elevator of a Bayonik avenue office building, and held him there until the police arrived.

STATISTICS SHOW CANCER PERSISTENTLY INCREASING

New York, June 20.—Despite research and radium treatment, cancer is persistently increasing it was announced in a statement by Dr. Frederick L. Hofmann, consulting statistician of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, printed in the Spectator, an insurance magazine. In it Dr. Hofmann says the mean average of cancer deaths throughout the country is 90.4 per cent. per 100,000, 95 per cent. of which are persons over forty years of age.

The cities in which the mortality from cancer is at its highest are, in the order named, Albany, N. Y., 162.9; San Francisco, 161.6; Boston, Mass., 146.8; Los Angeles, 132.0; Topeka, Kans., 130.4; Sacramento, Calif., 141.7; and Providence, R. I., 785.5.

The seven cities whose death rate exceeds 100.0 per hundred thousand attain the maximum rate reached anywhere in the civilized world.

"Upon further consideration," the statement reads, "the problem assumes a still more sinister significance. The evidence is overwhelming that cancer cases are being arrested, or cured, to an increasing extent, and that many who might have died from cancer, die from other diseases, as the result of early operation, of qualified treatment otherwise.

One of the most menacing aspects of the situation, said Dr. Hofmann, is the numbers of quacks throughout the country calling themselves "cancer specialists" with alleged cures that have no acceptable value to scientific minds.

Dr. Hoffman stated that specialized research has not brought the results anticipated and points to the need of investigation in communities where cancer death rates are highest.

DISSENSION CONTINUES AT AMHERST COLLEGE

Amherst, Mass., June 20.—Amherst college's stormy commencement is over. Breaking his silence for the first time since the announcement of his enforced resignation yesterday, Alexander Meiklejohn, president since 1912, at the alumni luncheon today charged the trustees with failure to support the ideals they set out with and challenged the soundness of the entire fabric of American college education. Twelve seniors and one member of the class of 1922 refused to accept their degrees at today's commencement exercises.

Late today Walter R. Agard, instructor in Greek, announced that he and John M. Gaus, associate professor of political science, had resigned. Howard Edward Hinners, organist, choirmaster and instructor in music, declined to deny that he had contemplated resigning. Neither confirmation nor denial of his reported intention to resign could be obtained from George F. Whicher, professor of English. Professor Which said that he had a leave of absence for one year.

EXPERTS ADVISED TRIAL TRIP OF THE LEVIATHAN

New York, June 20.—The Leviathan was sent on her trial trip to Bermuda waters by the shipping board on "the advice of experts borrowed from a rival British Steamship company," Representative F. H. La Guardia charged today, in making public a letter from former Chairman Lasker objecting to La Guardia's designation of the trip as a "joy ride."

"Arrangements for the trial trip," Mr. Lasker's letter said, "including the number of guests, are proceeding entirely in accordance with the plans and demands of the experts, in the formation of which the members of this board had no more part than you; not being expert in such a matter, we are following, as we should, expert advice and shall continue to do so."

Mr. La Guardia said the experts mentioned by Mr. Lasker had been connected with the rival British company for many years. He declined to name the British company.

Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M., Norman B. Parkhurst, master, has voted in accordance with the invitation of Rev. Howard S. Stevenson, pastor, to attend divine worship at the Congregational church St. John's day, Sunday, June 24th.

It is now two weeks from haying time. An inquirer among the outlying district hay raisers, gleaned the information that on account of the least protracted dreuth, coupled with the present one, that not over half a crop will be harvested.

The strawberry yield, which has become an important asset to Griswold, was hardly two-thirds of last year's crop, on account of dry weather.

Late Wednesday afternoon, corn in the fields was in many cases reported, withered and barely roled.

The weather man threw in every switch he had when he dispatched our Wednesday's temperature for this day.

The mercury hung at 92 for four hours, but a lively breeze, although warm, tempered the sweltering heat.

Farmers in this section worked in the fields Wednesday afternoon in a broad sunlight temperature of from 93 to 104, and kept at it with apparently little discomfort.

Operations in the mills kept steadily on the job with an entirely different kind of heat, reading at from 85 to 90 degrees, and no sun. Peculiar as it may seem, both the farmer and the textile operative agree that if their jobs were shifted, it would be physically impossible to hold out an hour.

Every season the interests and attractions at Beach pond increase. It always stood in the lime light for excellent black bass fishing, even back in the days when the farmers from all the country around used to go there to get white sand from the beach, with which to manufacture rifles with which to whet their scythes. A local man has located th ebank or sand swallow there and reports them nesting in a secluded bank that stands some distance above the pond.

Years ago before the Aspinock was flowed these handsome birds used to nest in the Deacon Johnson sand bank, a mile or more above the town. Then the custom of collecting birds' eggs was common among the boys in their teens. The sand swallow drills a hole in the bank, from two to three feet. One day three village boys made visit to the bank. There were many holes with the birds to be seen in plenty. One young chap that was there that day has never put his hand in a sand swallow's nest since. The third nest he reached into, his surprise and fright is to be readily realized, when it is told that there was a coiled adder inside. An oar was brought from their boat and the snake was dug out and summarily dealt with, for robbing birds' nests.

Bread Theatre

As wholesome, breezy and rapid a comedy as the screen has unfolded in years is the new Rupert Hughes picture "Come On Over" which is the feature at the Bread theatre today. It is screen fun at its highest point of achievement and the public should thank Mr. Hughes, the Goldwyn company, the director and the excellent cast for an hour of pure fun.

When Rupert Hughes writes about the Irish, their humor —— their characterizations, he is always amusing and interesting. In this picture he maintains the high level reached in "Hold Your Horses" and "From the Ground Up," distinctly Irish pictures. And "Dreams My Book" and "The Old Nest."

Colleen Moore gives as charming a performance as she has ever given during her screen career—and that is high praise. Ralph Graves, remembered for his fine work in "Dream Street," is excellent as the Irish lad who leaves his sweetheart in Ireland while he comes to America to make his fortune. The cast is excellent throughout and the picture ends in a note of jollity that will keep spectators good-humored for a long time after the end of the picture.

For the second feature Helen Chadwick will be seen in "Brothers Under the Skin," and Reginald Denny in the new Leather Pushers and Movie Chats make up the remainder of the bill.

Reginald Barker's New Photoplay Features Big Forest Fire, Amazing Realism.

A photoplay that is in many respects a remarkable achievement is Reginald Barkers production, "Hearts Aflame," scheduled for presentation at the Broadway theatre today. Advance criticisms place a great deal of emphasis on one episode especially, that in which a raging fire sweeps through a pine forest. Through the heart of this blaze a locomotive is driven by a young girl, who is determined to reach a powder magazine in order to blast a hillside and thus prevent the fire from spreading.

This forest fire scene is said to be one of the most impressive spectacles of its kind ever filmed. In order to present it, pine trees had to be transplanted from one location to another, and this work alone was a colossal undertaking. After the new forest was completed, the foliage was soaked with gasoline and ignited.

Fire ordinarily photographs black, as in order to present this fire in natural colors the film was hand colored. The scene as projected on the screen is graphic and vivid, and a splendid example of directorial skill. Reginald Barker, who personally staged these scenes, as well as the production as a whole, is to be complimented for the best forest fire that has yet found its way to the screen. An interesting instance of the painstaking efforts and attention which are paid to details can be seen in this episode, when wolves bears and foxes run in all directions in order to escape the oncoming flames.

The story of Hearts Aflame concerns a young son of a millionaire lumber merchant, who is given an opportunity of proving his worth to his skeptical father. A vigorous and aggressive miss, whom he encounters in the Michigan woods, helps him realize his own manliness. Although his father is a devastator of forests, and her father was an ardent supporter of reforestation, the young man is finally convinced that he must take his stand against ruthless destruction of timber land. He opposes his father's wishes of course; but the conflagration and the unanswerable logic of the girl are sufficiently powerful to align the old man in the cause of conservation.

A remarkable cast is seen in the picture. Frank Keenan, a veteran of stage and screen, is seen in the role of Lyle Taylor, a crabbed old millionaire whose life has been spent in the timber land; Anna Q. Nilsson is Helen Forsker, a girl of the Michigan woods, a refreshing, strong-willed miss; and Craig Ward is the one whose worth is proved when he is thrown on his own resources in a crowd of antagonistic lumbermen. Others in the cast are Ralph Cloninger, Richard Headrick, Lee Shumaway, Irene Hunt, Russell Simpson, Martha Matten, Stanton Heck and Richard Tucker. "Hearts Aflame" was produced for Lasala B. Mayer. It was adapted by J. G. Mewks and L. C. Rigby from the novel, Timber, by Harold Titus.

A Cameo comedy and news weekly are the short subjects on the bill.

YALE-HARVARD GRADUATE RACES TO BE ROWED ON THAMES TODAY

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 20—Yale crews in training here postponed their afternoon practice today until midevening because of the continued heat and then had only a brief workout to keep in condition. The crews are being taken out on yachts whenever an opportunity presents itself to keep cool and to keep them from losing weight.

The combination crews went downstream a mile and had two racing starts which went much better than their starts in morning practice. The freshmen went downstream to the three-quarter mark and had several two minute sprints. The varsity had a half mile sprint with the junior varsity.

Harvard won all five tosses for position on the course in the races and is expected to announce her choice tonight.

The graduate crew, which will race a similar crew from Harvard was selected today. Its make up is as follows:

Stroke, Church Peters, '16; No. 7, Charles Wiman, '14; No. 6, Steve Hord, '21; No. 5, Seth Low, '16; No. 4, J. H. Sheldon, '15; No. 3, G. C. Ellis, '22; No. 2, Coles Coe, '15; bow, W. Leslie, '22; coxswain, Charles Pratt, '16.

Harvard Has Light Work

Red Top, Conn., June 20—The oppressive heat at quarters today kept heavy work by the Harvard crews at a minimum and they were only sent on a 3 mile paddle with a few racing starts to vary the work. Tomorrow morning the crews will practice racing starts under the eye of Referee Mehleham, who was at quarters tonight.

An informal celebration was held in quarters by the crews when they learned of Harvard's 8 to 7 victory over Yale in Cambridge this afternoon.

The graduate crew which will row Yale's graduate crew tomorrow will be as follows:

Bow, W. L. Chanler; No. 2, Farley; No. 3, Murray; No. 4, William Chanler; No. 5, Jefferies or Newton; No. 6, Withington; No. 7, Richardson; stroke, Cutler; coxswain, Abeles.

Later in the evening Capt. Ladd chose the east side of the Thames for the varsity, combination and graduates races and the west side of the river for the freshmen and junior races.

TIGERS TAKE SLUGGING MATCH FROM YANKS

New York, June 20.—Detroit got an even break in its four game series with the New York Americans, winning a slugging match today by a score of 9 to 7. Third Baseman Fred Haney sprained his right ankle in the first inning, when he tried to get away from Ward. Jones, out for weeks with an injury, then played third base, but limped badly. Cobb's infield problem was further aggravated when Third Baseman Blue, knocked out yesterday by a batted ball, was unable to play today. Score:

CREWS BEGIN LAST WEEK OF TRAINING

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 20—Today marked the beginning of the last week of training for the intercollegiate regatta on June 28. Shortly before sun down the varsity, junior varsity and freshman eights of Cornell went over the local course for their initial work out in the wake of oppressive heat, which kept the crews of Washington, Columbia, Syracuse and Pennsylvania, also off the Hudson until late afternoon. Although they arrived at Highland on the west shore at 9 o'clock in the morning the red and white eights were unable to be on the water before noon, as the shells were not rigged until mid afternoon.

Indications of the speed to be expected of the Cornell freshmen were given in a short evening drill held by coach John Hoyle, which revealed smooth coordination. In the junior varsity, Flittus was in his old position at stroke and Baker was stroking the varsity.

With their usual economy of effort, but completeness of polish, the Washington varsity and freshman eights went up and down the course in a fashion that continued to attract interest. A singularly powerful freshman boat and a well stroke varsity presented combinations that brought from several coaches the involuntary comment of "good".

Syracuse and Columbia were on the course late this afternoon, together with the Pennsylvania freshmen. In spite of the hot weather Coach Jim Rice's Morningside eights performed to advantage, the varsity hitting a consistantly good pace.

REDS CONTINUE THEIR VICTORIOUS MARCH

Cincinnati, June 20.—Cincinnati made it three out of four from Brooklyn today by winning handily behind Benton's effective pitching. Vance, who shut out the locals with one hit on Sunday, tried to come back but was taken out in the fourth inning. A great catch by Rousch of Daberry's long fly in the 4th was the fielding feature. Bob Caveny and McCarren were slightly injured and forced to retire. The Reds won twelve of the thirteen games played with the eastern clubs during the home stay which closed today. The score:

LAMPHERE SETS STRIKE-OUT RECORD FOR TWILIGHT LEAGUE AS TEAM LOSES

Although Jerry Lamphere fanned 18 of the Hillies in eight innings Wednesday night, his support was such that he lost the game to Jail Hill, 3 to 2. Lamphere, a new recruit for the Atlantics, established a strikeout record for the league, leading Kelly of the Nuggets by five victims. If it had not been for some costly errors on the part of his teammates, he would have been credited with an almost perfect shutout game.

Inability to hit had a lot to do with the score of the Atlantics, for they had men on bases most every inning, but were unable to bring them home with hits. The Hillies played a good game in the field and spoiled many chances to score by brilliant fielding.

Twilight Game Tonight.

The Twilight league game tonight will be between the East Ends and the Swansees. The East Ends have a snappy little team of youngsters that is giving some of the higher rated teams a strong battle. Before the game there will be a debate between George Farrell, manager of the Swansees, and Abe Cramer, pilot of the East Ends, on the merits of their teams and other things in general.

HARVARD WINS FROM YALE IN THE NINTH

Cambridge, Mass., June 20.—By a ninth inning rally, Harvard today won the second game of the annual series with Yale 8 to 7. The third game to break the tie in the series will be played at Braves' field, Boston, on Saturday.

Harvard went into the ninth trailing by three runs. With the bases filled Owen made his first hit of the day, a single, scoring Clark and Thayer. Cosgrave, Yale third baseman, missed a throw intended to catch Jenkins, who had run from first on the play, and Jenkins came home with the winning run.

In the first inning Young was knocked out of the box, Yale scoring four runs. In the fifth, Harvard being still scoreless, Hawkes of Yale knocked out a home run, scoring Oed ahead of him. Yale added another run in the sixth. Harvard entered the scoring column first in the seventh, when Keegan knocked a home run and scored two ahead of him. In the eighth a sacrifice fly brought Jenkins home. Ross went in to pitch for Yale in the ninth with two men out. Then came Harvard's rally. Score:

THE ANTI-POLLUTION VETO.

By the action of Governor Templeton in vetoing the anti-pollution bill one of the important pieces of legislation enacted by the late general assembly has been killed and for the next two years there will be nothing accomplished by the state in the reduction of stream pollution.

There were teeth in the law as it was passed by the legislature, and apparently the governor took the view that the commission named to carry out its provisions were going to exercise their authority to the limit instead of displaying that good judgment which might be expected and which should have been the guiding influence in their selection.

The aim has been to get something started in the way of relief for the increasing pollution of the streams. Those affected have gotten excited over the possibilities under an arbitrary enforcement of the law if approved. They have imagined all sorts of dire results, some of which at least are believed to have been unjustified. Frankly it is not believed that any commission would have taken advantage of the measure's provisions to close or injure the industries of the state, and especially would they have refrained from any such exercise of their authority had they encountered a reasonable degree of cooperation in their efforts. On the other hand had there been a law passed which left such a commission powerless to accomplish anything no progress could be made. What the governor would have done with such a bill is another matter, but he has taken the position that providing the commission with authority to meet extraordinary cases cannot be supported for fear that they will apply such authority to all cases. Such a view of the commission's duties seem hardly justified [illegible] to be regretted that for the next two years nothing in the way of relief seems likely to be accomplished, except that those concerned take action on their own initiative as the result of the known attitude of the general assembly.

ONE-MAN CARS AGAIN.

The decision of the public utilities commission sanctioning the continued use of the one-man cars in Waterbury is in keeping with decisions which have been rendered by similar commissions in other states upon the very same problem.

Waterbury has experienced a number of accidents in which the one-man trolley cars have been involved. In certain instances the accidents have resulted in death, but from the decision of the commission based upon a thorough investigation of the circumstances it does not appear that the one-man cars were to blame or that the accidents would not have happened had there been conductors on the rear end of the cars that were involved in collisions.

The one-man cars have had to be resorted to in oder to meet the problem of present day transportation and keep the expenses down to the point where reductions could be made in the fares. They do require the close attention of the one man, but when records kept of the accidents in which they were involved are compared with records of the two-man cars and show that greater safety and less accidents result with the one-man cars it becomes plain that prejudice cannot be allowed to stand in the way of public transportatio nwith such cars.

Care in the operation of trolley cars is required in all cases, whether there is a crew of one or two men. There are cases where accidents are bound to happen in either case and because it happens to be a one-man car that is involved it does not necessarily mean that the type of car is to blame for it.

The public utilities commission finds that there is no reason why Waterbury lines should be denied the use of the lighter and cheaper cars.

AMUNDSEN'S DELAY.

While no one would want to deny Amundsen the honor of crossing the pole in an airplane, the announcement of his decision not to make the attempt with his machine at this time has no doubt been received with much relief by those who have feared for his safety in such an undertaking.

Airplanes have made long distance trips without stopping. Others have attained great speed but it doesn't appear that Amundsen's machine belonged to either class. There have been reports that the machine which he was depending upon was defective. Whether such was the case or not it is apparent that Amundsen has failed to become convinced of his own security and that the behavior of the machine under such tests as were made was not such as to inspire confidence. That being the case he has made a wise decision. Nothing would be gained by sacrificing his life in such an attempt. It might prove that the machine was built but what could be demonstrated elsewhere than in the polar regions and without the hazards [illegible] made to fly over the pole there are good reasons why even the courageous should have the best there is in a machine, one which has had its merits fully demonstrated and which therefore does not increase the danger through defective construction or mechanism.

That Amundsen has abandoned this effort does not necessarily mean that he will not make another attempt some time later. It will be worth while, if such is the case, to determine how he came to get a defective machine, but in view of the progress in aviation and airplane construction there is no reason to suppose but what someone will do the trick sooner or later. If Amundsen can stage it he will be entitled to the full honors, but it is a field in which all are free to enter though few are likely to be interested.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

In setting out on his trip to Alaska President Harding tackles the study of some of the vital problems of that territory. Alaska has been growing and it is destined to undergo great development. It is a vast storehouse of raw materials and it must get constantly increasing attention in the way of legislation in order that there may be a conservation of its interests that does not mean hoarding but such use of its resources that will not mean waste.

There are problems concerning the government of the territory that need to be adjusted. It needs to be settled whether it should be subject to several department influences or be placed under such a system that the best results may be obtained with the least friction. There are problems of immigration, colonization, transportation by rail and water, seal protection, fisheries, law enforcement, mining and land laws, roads, game laws and facilities for travel as well as for commerce.

Alaska has gradually been getting to the point where greater need exists for a more definite policy concerning such matters. Other administrations have known of them but this one believes it is time to do something about them. And when it comes to taking action, when it comes to getting the facts, there is nothing like being on the ground and seeing as well as hearing about the needs.

That is what the president and members of his cabinet, who must deal with these matters, are doing. It is by no means a pleasure trip. They are due to get a better grasp of the Alaskan situation as the result of their visit and the result should be to the great benefit of that important territory. It is a situation in which duty and pleasure are being combined.

DRIVEN FROM HOME.

With succeeding reports conditions grow worse in the vicinity of Mt. Etna instead of better. It is another in the series of similar disasters that will have its place among the volcanic disturbances of that country.

Fortunately it doesn't appear that there have been many lives lost. For the most part the people have been able to get away from the floods of lava as the streams roll down from the mountain sides. Whatever lies in the path of the molten material is quickly destroyed while the countryside is covered with ashes and filled with the sulphurous fumes. Homes, crops and property of all kinds are swallowed up and big problems are confronted in endeavoring to turn aside the lava streams and to give relief to the homeless.

How long the situation will last is as uncertain as was the outbreak. Those in Italy who cling to the base of Mt. Etna because of the fertile character of the soil are once more going through a great disaster that must necessarily stir that whole country. They cannot fail to recognize the chances they have been taking and yet they are fully conscious of the fact that if they had not done it others would. It is in fact not a sparsely but a densely settled section of the country in spite of the chances of an outbreak.

With 50,000 losing their homes the work of caring for the unfortunates will not be light. It will be a problem that will require some time before former conditions or their equivalent are restored, but there is no reason to expect that those same 50,000, or as many more will stick faithfully to that part of the country which has for so long been home. For many of them there's nothing else to do.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Not much need of keeping a fire in the heater these days.

Did someone say that there wasn't going to be any hot weather?

Though long in anticipation weddings and graduations are quickly over.

The man on the corner says: It's bad enough without doing a lot of talking about it.

From the frantic appeals for the iceman no one seems to think he has too much to do.

Amundsen has abandoned his flight. Reservations for polar trips are therefore cancelled before made.

Of course you have made up your mind as to the colors you are going to carry at the reeds on Friday?

China has the consolation of knowing that its government and cabinet are not the only ones that are having their troubles.

The president says every one should be able to sing the Star Spangled Banner. Have you commenced rehearsals?

If Germany thinks new propositions are going to change France's ideas regarding the Ruhr it may realize some day that it is mistaken.

Quebec is stirred over the loss of its forests. How much better it would have been to have been stirred while it was possible to have prevented such a long!

Those who would like weather like this the year round should make the most of the present offering for there is no chance for the fulfilment of such hopes hereabouts.

It is claimed 50,000,000 tons of coal could be saved yearly by utilizing the waste water of the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers. You know what coal costs you and you can figure the saving in dollars upon results.

MEN ARE SO FORGETFUL

"Birthdays always make me feel queer," said the young woman in the sailor hat, who was paying an afternoon call. "I always wonder—"

"All anniversaries do," interrupted her hostess, who was not really rude but merely liked to talk most of the time. "At least they do me. It's because my husband isn't like other men. He never remembers things the way he should. Other women's husbands all do the most wonderful things for them on their birthdays, but Herbert doesn't. Half the time he almost forgets that I'm having a birthday."

"That's just the man of it," said the caller. "I'm perfectly reconciled and disillusioned about it. And I always remind him in some subtle way so that he will think he remembered himself. Then he's always perfectly sweet—"

"Well, Herbert is simply frightful," said the young woman who was being called on. "And when I try to hint gently about my birthday or something he gulps and blinks and looks so guilty that I know he is thinking to himself, 'Good heavens, you don't mean to tell me you're having another one! Why, I thought it was only a few months ago that you had one!'

"It's hard, because mother never forgot, and always made an event of all of her children's birthdays. I used to just look forward to mine until I was married. But my husband always spoils the entire day for me by not remembering. You know my last birthday I said to him, 'Now don't get anything for me this birthday, because you know we have so many bills and things that I really don't think we can afford a solitary thing.' Well"—the young hostess put down her sewing to emphasize her point—"I never dreamed he would take me at my word. But will you believe that he did! It was perfectly awful!"

"That's typically masculine," said the guest, shaking her head. "They just don't remember things that lend so much sentiment to life—"

"Why, I thought of course he'd bring home a box of candy or at least some flowers or a pair of gloves or some little thing," continued the hostess, "but he didn't bring anything! It was simply ghastly and I went to bed early and cried myself to sleep. I felt that if he had really cared for me he never would have done it. Of course that was silly but—"

"Oh yes, that was like all men," said the afternoon caller. "But you can't help thinking that remembering things like that would add a lot of zest to life if men could only see it that way. After all it's up to women to keep sentiment alive."

"I will say for my husband that he never forgets our wedding anniversary," said the hostess, nodding to a maid who had entered. "Just set the tray down here Anna, thank you. Herbert always springs a surprise on me, and sends me flowers, but he is certainly awful about my birthdays. Why, year before last, he would have forgotten the day entirely if my mother hadn't come in for dinner the night before and mentioned it. It made me feel pretty flat when he came right out and said in front of the family that he had forgotten. Of course I was only a babe then but in a way that made it all the worse!"

"Two lumps, thanks," said the afternoon caller in response to a silent inquiring gesture from the hostess. "Well, as I told you, I take no chances of anything like that. My husband wouldn't have remembered that today was my birthday if—"

A far-away look had come into the eyes of the young woman who was pouring the tea. Her lips moved in silent computation.

"It isn't the nineteenth, is it?" she asked suddenly. "Do you happen to know the exact date?"

"Of course I know the exact date," said the young woman who was calling. "Haven't I just been saying that it's my birthday. Of course it's the nineteenth."

"I believe it is!" said the woman who felt that her husband neglected her birthdays, in a dazed way. "I believe it is! Isn't that awful—isn't that too awful! Oh excuse me!" She rose to her feet and started for the door laughing. "I've got to call up the caterer," she ended hysterically.

"What on earth's the matter?" demanded her astonished guest.

"To get a birthday cake," said the hostess, "for my husband. Today's his birthday! I forgot all about it!"

"Oh, my goodness!" said the young woman who was calling.—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pheasants Are Corn Pullers

Mr. Editor: A pheasant has been pulling my golden bantam corn! How much has he pulled? Well, he's pulled a lot of it. He's pulled hills and hills of it, the pheasant has. He's cleaned 'em right out, every stalk, just as though nothing had been planted there at all. How—how much did we plant in the hill? Why, the machine dropped 10 to 12 kernels, and that machine drops regular, too! And the corn seed was 90 per cent. viable, too! It was good clean, carefully harvested, carefully dried, carefully kept golden bantam corn seed. Why did the machine drop so many kernels to the hill, 12 too much? Why of course it it! I knew that before you began to ask questions; but I'd rather spend time thinning out surplus stalks and then have a perfect stand o' corn, every hill in its place and every hill full stalked, than have a streaked stand, wouldn't you? It was a pretty sure thing that the pheasants were going to be on hand to look at the corn when it was coming tenderly up; for they did the same thing last year. And new instead of having a patch of golden bantam corn with every hill in place, and every hill full stalked, a nice, pleasing sight to the eye of any beholder, we've got a patch of golden bantam corn that looks as though the "neighbors' hens" had been in it! If it only had been the "neighbors' hens!" Well! Couldn't I ale the dog on 'em. Couldn't I throw stones at them? And couldn't I have conversation with the neighbors? Yes. But what can I do with these pheasants? If I go up on the hill and talk to them, or even begin to pick up a stone to thrown at 'em, they take wing, are up and off, just beautifully gliding about a quarter of a mile before they land! That's all the good it does to talk to pheasants. They are gone long before you begin talking, long before you can get the flour and your golden bantam corn is gone with 'em! And there your patch of golden bantam corn is—with hills twenty feet apart, ten feet apart, eight feet apart; a nice looking patch of golden bantam corn that is, I must say! And that isn't half of the story! These same pheasants run right along to another piece of corn that was all [illegible] with stuff that makes the crows look red dyed at you, and they rip the corn out just as if it was fixed with salad dressing!

And if I flourish a gun at 'em along comes a chap and says: "Here! What are you undertaking to do, young man? Shoot them game pheasants? Don't you know them are state property? Don't you know them birds is protected, and; that I'm right here to protect 'em?" And he turns back his coat lapel, and says: "Look at that badge, young man! I'm a game warden! Them birds belong to the 'and ent lovers o' out-of-door sport,' and I put in my time watching out for 'em! You can come along o' me an' settle, that's what you can do!"

I guess that's the way the law is, Mr. Editor, but, what about my golden bantam corn—and taxes going up? The only comfort I can get out of it is this—I've seen only three potato bugs this year!

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

King Boris of Bulgaria, whose throne appears to be tottering as a result of the revolutionary movement in his domain, first came into prominence in the nineties, in connection with the recognition by the powers of his father, Prince Ferdinand, as ruler of Bulgaria. Ferdinand mounted the throne in 1887 in succession to Prince Alexander of Battenberg. Russia, however, withheld her recognition to his title, as did also the other powers. Nevertheless, Ferdinand maintained himself in his position, owing mainly to the ability of his minister, M. Stambuloff. The latter's end by the hand of an assassin, in 1895, paved the way for a better understanding with Russia, and when Ferdinand consented to have his son Boris received into the Greek church in 1896, the Czar Nicholas II. formally acknowledged Ferdinand as the reigning prince. In 1911 Prince Boris was recognized by Russia as heir to the new kingdom. In 1910 he came to the throne, when the fortunes of war had forced the abdication of his father.

Transjordania.

"Whether the newest Arab state to have its independence recognized be called by its western title of Transjordania or by its eastern name, Kerak, it seems hopelessly out of touch with things American," says a bulletin fom the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society, in regard to the land immediately east of the River Jordan over which Emir Abdullah rules.

"Perhaps it will bring the newly independent but very old country closer," continues the bulletin, "to realize that its capital, now Amman, was once Philadelphia—the great-great-great-grandfather of the half dozen or more Philadelphias, great and small, that are to be found in our postal guides.

"But it was only a mere matter of twenty-odd centuries ago that the city took the name Philadelphia from its new lord, Ptolemy Philadelphus. It had existed as Rabbath Ammon, chief city of the Ammonites, almost from the days of Lot, from whom the Ammonites are said to have sprung. It was after a victorious battle with these same people of Amman and Jephthah, according to the Biblical story, returned to the fatal meeting with his daughter.

"When Transjordania is described as stretching from the Jordan and the Dead Sea toward the interior of Arabia one is likely to call up the picture of a hopeless desert. But much of the region is steppe land, a high plain supporting some flocks and even capable of tillage. Nomadism has long held the region in its grip, however, and it is as a sort of 'chief of nomads' that Abdullah Ibn Hussein finds it necessary to rule. He holds his 'court' not in a palace but in a group of tents which he moves with the seasons.

"The land now given over largely to nomads is capable of development along stable lines as is shown by its past importance. After Alexander's Eastern conquests the cities to the east of the Jordan became Hellenized and the seats of prosperity and culture. In the second century before Christ Ptolemy Philadelphus built in the city which was given his name an extensive acropolis which in the Ammah of today is only a mass of fallen columns and ruined walls.

"Rome's sway over Philadelphia is shown in Amman by the ruins of a huge amphitheater which seated 7000 spectators. In the sleepy eastern town of today goats browse among the foundations of temples and public buildings. Arabian coffee shops lean against once-proud walls, and the eastern species of the village lounger sits on overturned marble pillars. Emir Abdullah is showing some interest in the ancient structures of his capital, however, and is having the fairly well-preserved amphitheater cleared of debris.

"Amman is not inaccessible. Five hours by automobile over reasonably good roads through the dazzling valley of the Jordan suffice for the trip from Jerusalem to the capital. The Jordan forms the boundary line and across it is an iron bridge. Amman is only about 30 miles from the river, and as the crow flies is hardly more than 60 miles from Jerusalem. The Hedjas railway, connecting Damascus and Medina, runs through the town."

Wished to Help Out.

Aunty is a school teacher in the winter time and playground specialist in the summer time, both jobs necessary so that she can provide for her widowed sister and three little children. She has the admiration of her nieces on account of her accomplishments.

The other evening the older one said: "I'm going to be a teacher and a playground woman when I grow up like aunty."

The little one looked troubled. "Why, I was going to be that myself," she returned, "but now I reckon I'll have to be the sister with the children, so you can spend your money."

Could Sing, But Wouldn't.

Civic pride and interest ran high recently when members of a church and Sunday school held a social gathering. Mothers and fathers sat with pride while their offspring sang songs of various musical standards. The enthusiasm was not so pronounced among the girls and boys who were not participating in the programme.

The crowning blow came when a group of little girls sang a childish Sunday school song in a manner that won a hearty applause from the audience.

The popularity of the girls was too much for a four year old boy, who said in a loud voice that resounded when the applause ceased:

"I know a song I could sing, too, if I wanted."

Judge Hinman reserved decision.

THREE MACHINES IN COLLISION ON ROAD TO JEWETT CITY

Two touring cars lost a front wheel each and were otherwise damaged and a third touring car was driven into a fence in a collision about 8.50 o'clock, Standard time, Wednesday night on the Jewett City road, a short distance above the Lisbon bridge near the J. B. Martin Co. velvet mill. None of the drivers or other occupants of the cars were injured.

The smashup occurred on a straight stretch of road when two cars, traveling in opposite directions, and owned and operated by Fortune Cyr and James E. McCusker, both of Jewett City, crashed together, tearing a front wheel off each car. After this smash the McCusker car continued on and struck the new Studebaker touring car of Harold J. Reardon of this city, which was following the Cyr car towards Norwich. The Reardon car was gunned up against the white highway fence on the side of the road to Reardon's right.

The McCusker car, which was going towards Jewett City, lost its left forward wheel and came to a stop when it met the Reardon car, striking its left front fender. The right front wheel of the Reardon car was against the highway fence after the smashup and the McCusker car stood down on the left forward axle close to the Reardon machine.

The Cyr car and the McCusker machine, which were the first to crash, were about 35 feet from each other in the position they finally came to a stop. The broken left forward axle of the McCusker car left a mark in the road that was to the left of the central line of the highway.

A telephone call of the accident was sent to Norwich police headquarters, from which the message was relayed to the state police barracks at Groton, where it was reported officers would visit the scene.

While waiting for the state police, dozens of cars gathered at the scene of the smash, which had partially blocked the road. A resident of the neighborhood, used a flashlight and went on voluntary traffic duty to steer passing cars through the tangle.

ROTARIANS ARE TOLD OF STATE POLICE WORK

"The Progress of the State Police Department" was the topic of a very interesting talk by Superintendent Robert T. Hurley at the noonday luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday at the Wauregan Hotel. Supt. Hurley, who was introduced by President Charles A. Barton, told of the work of the department since, it was created in 1903 by the legislature with a force of 15 men. He brought statistics that show just what the State police are doing and the enormous amount of work that is being done by the department along various lines.

Supt. Hurley said that during his nineteen years connection with the department he has seen more and more duties assigned to the care of the police until it has been necessary to ask for more men from time to time. Besides attending to the criminal and other complaints that come in the state department must inspect the moving picture houses, supervise the sealers of weights and measures, inspect the state parks, regulate motor vehicle traffic and make inspections and examinations and do many other things. During the first year of the organized department from July 1921 to July 1922 there were 3,736 complaints of various kinds sent in to the state police. Of these 2,551 were criminal complaints and 2,026 arrests were made and 1,819 prosecutions were secured. The police inspected 1,400 moving picture houses; gave 10,878 inspections of weights and measures and examined 36,643 applicants for motor vehicle driver's licenses besides being engaged in other routine work. This year has been even heavier and the work is constantly increasing.

In speaking of the cause of crime Supt. Hurley said that while many believed it to be because the courts were too lenient he thought it was because the public in general was too negligent in many matters. He said that 80 per cent. of the people were law abiding and that only 20 per cent. were law-breakers but this minority is holding at bay a body four times its size. Mr. Hurley went on to illustrate what he meant by negligence on the part of the citizenry and cited several cases where a little forethought would have prevented crime and in other cases where it would have resulted in the arrest of the criminals.

Mr. Hurley's talk was very instructive and much appreciated by the members of the Rotary club who gave the speaker a rising vote of thanks.

At the business session a report on the field day to be held at Storrs on July 19th was given by Myles E. Standish, chairman of the local committee. The general committee of which Richard E. Dodge of Willimantic is chairman has voted to invite the ladies to the field and special events for them will be arranged by the committee. The following is the tentative programme for the Field Day: 10 a. m., ball game between Putnam and Willimantic clubs; 12.30 p. m., chicken dinner, fixings, songs and stunts at dining hall; 1 p. m., inspection of livestock and college; 2 p. m., band concert and ball game between Norwich and New London Rotary clubs; 4 p. m., dancing in armory and field sports. The other members of the local committee are James J. Madden, L. M. Young and E. Larue Bliven.

Alfred G. Bliven, captain of the losing team in the attendance contest recently held, announced that his team would provide the luncheon for the winners next week.

It was voted at the meeting to hold the July 4th meeting on the day following rather than on the holiday. Telegrams from James L. Case who is in the west and Joseph N. Weymouth who is attending the International convention at St. Louis, were read by President Saxton.

There was the usual singing and solos from various members of the club and despite the extreme weather the vocalists were in fine voice, especially Ed Harris and L. M. Carpenter, the Rotary infants.

BERT LUCAS TO SEE DEMPSEY-GIBBONS BOUT

Herbert W. Lucas of this city, who is visiting in the west, writes The Bulletin from East Stanwood, Wash., that he is making plans to see the Dempsey--Gibbons bout at Shelby, Mont., on the Fourth of July, which will be a 1,000 mile trip by a special train that leaves for Montana on July 2nd. The fare will be $35 for the round trip with $15 for meals and $10 for sleeper on train. He is backing Dempsey to win.

He is to be in Seattle for the big celebration there from July 29-27 when President Harding will be a guest and will review the Pacific fleet of 50 or 60 war vessels. A trip up Mt. Ranier and a visit to Yakima are in Mr. Lucas' plans for July, the latter a trip which is made only in the summer time across the Cascade Mountains because there is too much snow in the winter season.

Smouldering Waste Blazed Up.

About 8.15 o'clock Wednesday evening Squad A was called out by telephone to the dump off Falls avenue. The smouldering pile of cotton waste that has lain there since the Max Gordon fire some time ago showed signs of life again, so another call was sent in for the fire department.

SEVEN PLAYGROUNDS FOR CHILDREN OF NORWICH

As soon after July 1st as possible the Recreation Commission will open seven playgrounds for Norwich children, in such locations as will serve every section of the city.

In preparation for this work an institute for playground workers, parents, teachers, and all those interested in child welfare will be conducted during the week of June 25th. The sessions of this institute will be held in the Y. M. C. A., where gymnasium facilities will be available, and where ample room may be secured.

Through the courtesy of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, with headquarters in New York, Miss Ruth Sherburne, field secretary, will give a series of talks and demonstrations. Miss Sherburne's eighteen years' experience in playground work insures a most worthwhile programme, which will be of great interest and benefit to all those who attend.

The Norwich Recreation commission expects all applicants for positions on Norwich playgrounds to register for this course, which is given free of charge. A cordial invitation is likewise extended to the public to attend any or all lectures.

The institute sessions will begin each morning at 8.40 (d. s. t.), the first period of the session being devoted to a lecture, to be followed by various practical demonstrations of the different phases of playground work.

The programme in detail is given below:

Tuesday — Lecture: Play Periods. Demonstration: Games for ages 3 to 6.

Wednesday—Lecture: Play Periods. Demonstration: Games for ages 7 to 9.

Thursday—Philosophy and Technique Leadership. Demonstration: Games for ages 10 and 11.

Saturday—Lecture: Special Activities on a Playground Programme. Demonstration: Activities for Older Boys.

Direction in play is as necessary and as valuable as in work, and is enjoyed by the child. Every parent knows the satisfaction with which children include the elders in their games, and how susceptible they are to proper control in their play as long as the control is skilfully exercised.

These Norwich playgrounds, with trained and experienced supervision and intelligent direction, will be a boon to many a tired and harassed mother during the trying summer weeks. It is to be hoped by the commission that there will be a widespread interest in this work.

ANOTHER WALKOUT AT THE LORRAINE MILL

Westerly, June 20.—The textile workers who did not return on Wednesday afternoon to their work at the Lorraine mill on Mechanic street held a long afternoon session in Caledonian hall. The following statement was given out by a committee of the United Textile Workers of Westerly:

"We maintain that the company has not lived up to the agreements as given to us by the commissioner of labor. At today's meeting the strike committee was appointed. Some of the workmen have obtained employment out of town. Members of the union have been intimidated and discriminated against. Organizer Francis J. Gorman addressed the meeting Wednesday afternoon."

The leaving work was the result of a meeting of the mill operatives held Tuesday night. Another meeting of the strikers will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Supt. Robert E. Steere of the Lorraine plant said that approximately 300 operatives of the 530 total employed remained in the mill Wednesday afternoon and that the mill's management had received no notice of the walkout. No idea could be given of the number who had reported for work on Thursday morning.

BOY SCOUTS' CAMP TO OPEN IN JULY

The Norwich Boy Scouts' camp committee and the camp staff are to set up the camp for the season, Camp Tippecan, Beach pond, Voluntown, on July 7th.

Registrations for Camp Tippecan to date are gratifying and all Scouts who are anticipating enrollment in camp this season are expected to turn in their names at Scout headquarters not later than Saturday of this week.

Dr. R. R. Agnew has consented to make visits to camp as the official camp physician in additions to the camp director there will be five assistants to divide the duties of the camp programme.

A Scout Good Turn.

GREENEVILLE GRADUATES HAVE SECOND ANNUAL REUNION

The Greeneville Graduates' association held its second annual reunion Wednesday evening at the Wauregan house with a banquet and dance that made a delightful program for the 80 who attended.

Class songs and cheers under the leadership of Kenneth McNeil and Edward Gromke influenced the banquet hour during which the following menu was served:

Split Pea Soup.
Pickles. Relishes.
Chicken Croquettes.
Stewed Corn. Mashed Potatoes.
French Bread. Ice Cream.
Coffee.
Assorted Cakes.

Following the banquet, a pretty gypsy dance was given by eighth grade pupils of the school and the rest of the evening was given over to dancing, for which Herb Smith's orchestra played.

Four of the jurors sought all the comfort they could in court in the intense heat of Wednesday by sitting in their shirt sleeves. The jury in the case consists of t Norwich, Samuel S. Greenman, S. Clinton Rogers, Harry W. Cardwell; Preston, Willis Spicer, Frank R. Ayer; Lisbon, Charles A. Whitaker, Clarence A. Mell, Lebanon, Charles A. Perkins, Charles L. Hinckley; Sprague, Oscar Gallup; John Morrison; Ountown, Charles C. Bliven.

Attorney C. V. James made the argument for the plaintiff and Attorneys Aaronson of New Haven and R. M. Douglas for the defendant.

BOY CRUSHED BETWEEN TROLLEY AND AUTOMOBILE

Westerly, June 20.—A serious automobile accident occurred on Wednesday afternoon at about 4.45 o'clock on Railroad avenue when Alfred LaPiore, the four and one-half year old son of Peter LaPiore, 31 Pierce street, was thrown between the colliding electric car and the Nash automobile in which he was seated on the front seat. LaPiore sustained a split lower lip, which required several stitches, lost a tooth, had a severe cut on the upper lip, had bruises under the right eye and middle of the forehead, and sustaining a compression of the brain which left him in a serious condition at his home to which he was removed.

The accident happened when his father, Peter LaPiore backed from the Picard gas filling station across the electric car tracks, just as an electric car came down the street. The side of the automobile was smashed in and the left forward wheel broken. The child was thrown between the electric car and the automobile.

Dr. Michael H. Scanlon gave the necessary medical attention.

C. W. CARROLL, JR. HAD BROWN CLASS AS GUESTS

Twenty members of the class of 1908, Brown University, met in the Griswold hotel at Eastern Point, last Saturday and spent the week-end as the guests of George W. Carroll, Jr. On Monday the group stopped for lunch at the summer home of Hunter S. Marston.

Tuesday morning 45 members of the class met on the campus and motored to the Rhode Island Country Club for luncheon. The afternoon was spent in playing golf and group reunions. Class songs and cheers were given previous to the dinner, which was served at 7.30 o'clock.

RUBBISH FIRE IN THAMES STREET CELLAR

At 4.14 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the fire department responded to a telephone call for a rubbish fire in the cellar of the house at No. 53 Thames street, owned by Herman Mueller and occupied by Nick Nesola and family. A small amount of chemical was used in extinguishing the blaze. There was no damage.

Children playing with matches are said to be responsible for the fire.

Operators' Examinations On.

State police officers will be too busy Friday directing traffic in connection with the Yale-Harvard boat race to all their regular dates for giving examinations for motor vehicle operators' licenses. State Policeman M. R. Sterling has been assigned to the highway between Groton and Westerly, and for that reason will not give the usual examinations in Norwich on that day.

Class of 1918 Reunion.

The N. F. A. class of 1918 is perfecting plans for its fifth annual reunion next Monday evening at the Wauregan house with a banquet at 7.30 to be followed by a dance from 9 to 12. Already about 40 have arranged to attend and it is expected there will be an attendance of about 50. Clifford C. Oat, president of the class, is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

ARRESTED FOR SITTING ON MIC STEPS

Willimantic, June 20.—Daniel Levin, a resident of the Wood block at the corner of Union and Center streets was placed under arrest Wednesday evening after he had refused to move away from the bottom of a stairway leading to his pool room on Union street.

Complaint was received some time ago that frequenters of a pool room on the first floor of the block had been in the habit of sitting on the stairs and obstructing passersby. Wednesday night while Officer Lariviere was patrolling his regular beat he ordered a number of young men away from the stairway. All departed but Mr. Levin, who argued that he was in the right as he was sitting on steps leading to his own home. A contradictory thought was entertained by the officer and the young man was taken to the police station from where he was soon released on bonds of $50.

At the session of court this (Thursday) morning he will be charged with breach of the peace and resisting an officer.

SPARKLERS SET FIRE TO SMALL BOY'S CLOTHING

Playing with sparklers in the yard at his home, 44 Coit street, about 6 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, William Capalos, 3 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Anagryos Capalos, was seriously burned when the sparks set fire to his clothing.

The child's mother rushed from the house when she heard his screams and tore his clothing from his body but not before he had been extensively burned on arms, chest and abdomen. His head and legs were the only parts that the flames did not reach and his condition is considered critical.

Dr. H. E. Higgins, who was summoned, rushed the boy to the Backus hospital as quickly as possible, where everything possible was done to ease his sufferings and to give him a chance to recover from his injuries.

TOWN CLERK'S THERMOMETER HIT THE HIGH SPOTS

Temperatures in the shade that flirted close around the century mark were reported in Norwich Wednesday, the hottest day of the season so far. Marks of 90, 93 and 94 were no novelty from noon to 3 in the afternoon, but a thermometer on the window of the town clerk's office at the court house took the record when it was caught at 98. This was on the Union square side of the building. Down stairs on the Broadway side, the thermometer at police headquarters showed a high mark of 92.

In the sun the high mark of 114 was reached.

Sailors Arrested For Fighting.

Three sailors, Thomas Moran, Daniel Donohue and Claud Bradford, from the submarine base engaged in a free for all fight Wednesday evening about 9.30 on Central avenue near the car barn. They were scooped in by the police who rushed the patrol wagon there when police headquarters was notified of the row.

The trio will be presented in the city court this (Thursday) morning on breach of the peace charges.

DANIELSON

Added to recent important real estate transactions here is one in which the Evans block, one of the borough's well known business structures, has passed into the hands of Peter Hoyden, who occupies a store in the building. Mr. Hoyden took over the block from Messrs. Burroughs and Levi, Boston men who only recently acquired the property in taking over various parcels of property that had been owned by Miss Florence M. Johnson, formerly of Danielson, and which came to her from her father, William S. Johnson, one of the largest real estate holders of his time in Danielson.

The building is of brick and two and a half stories in height. Like no other business block in Danielson it embraces a feature formerly popular in such structures—a basement of commodious area, where business firms were located for many years in the past, but not in use for such purpose during the past decade.

The building is on lower Main street between the Hyde and Keystone blocks and runs to Water street. When the property passed from the Evans estate it was purchased at auction for $17,000 by William S. Johnson. The price in the most recent sale was not given out. It is estimated that the building could not be duplicated at present costs for less than $60,000.

Danielson camp, No. 1118, Modern Woodmen of America, will attend a joint class adoption at Putnam this (Thursday) evening. Captain Kenney and the celebrated degree team of the camp of Woodmen at South Manchester will exemplify the work. The Danielson camp will have ten or more candidates. State Deputy J. R. Hughes and District Deputy C. E. Gilmore will be in attendance at the meeting and will assist with the work. The Woodmen have over a million members and during the month of May more than 13,000 new members were received. Assistant Deputy L. J. Sylvester of Danielson organized the local class.

Mrs. Natalie Lefevre, 74, died Tuesday night at her home in Dayville. She was born in Canada, but had lived in this country for many years. She was the wife of John B. Lefevre, and the children that were born to them there was included 4 sets of twins. Mr. Lefevre and eight children survive. The children are Joseph Attawaugan, Mrs. Joseph Berthiaume, Mrs. Napoleon Briere, Henry, Frederick, Mrs. Napoleon Blanchette and John Lefevre, all of the town of Killingly.

Owing to the absence of the officers, who will be doing patrol duty at the boat races, there will be no examinations for operators' licenses at the state police barracks Friday.—adv.

Two more organizations have come forward in aid of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam. Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., has appropriated a complete unit of $50 for the fund and the Ladies' Aid society of Dayville has given $25. This is indicative of the fine spirit in which Killingly organizations are assting toward completing the fund of $20,000.

Principal Elton E. Knight of the Danielson graded school is spending the opening days of his summer vacation as a patient at the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis Tuesday. Mr. Knight was so seriously ill Tuesday that Dr. George M. Burroughs advised immediate entrance to the hospital and the operation was performed almost upon his arrival there and was successful. The announcement of Mr. Knight's illness came as a surprise to his friends, for he had been about town as usual the past few days and apparently was in excellent health.

Fearing through a veil of perspiration that had some resemblance to Montmorency falls, a citizen looked at the recording thermometer at Woodward's store Wednesday afternoon and noted that the record reading of the season was on 94 degrees—and only the fact that he was nearly drowned by the sweat of his brow saved the wise cracker who slipped past him to remark—"Yes, we have fresh roasted bananas today"—from being executed forthwith. It will be gathered from this that it was some torrid in Danielson Wednesday. Old-timers apparently harking back to pre-Volstеadian days were seen pawing aimlessly about for foot rails that afforded hot weather support when other summers grew hot and foam blowing contests became the order of the day. In fact some of them mentioned it. But they lived through the heat of Wednesday just the same though some of them were inclined to believe that they had qualified to wear a fez and get on speaking terms with the camel—wise-acre of the desert, champion non-stop abstainer from drink and holder of the great damp secret of the modern world.

Danielson will soon be burning Rhode Island coal, which though there is nothing really strange about it, will seem to many like getting grapefruit from Quadic. The fact is that most householders hereabout have come to think in terms of Pennsylvania when the coal question is under consideration. Nevertheless coal is going to be shipped to Danielson from the mines near Portsmouth, R. I., and it is said to be an especially good grade of anthracite, though very hard and requiring more draft than the Pennsylvania hard coal. Purchases from the normal sources of supply are not coming through at all satisfactorily, so some sample carloads of the Rhode Island product have been ordered in.

Officers and men of the Service battery, 192nd Field artillery, were interested in the announcement received Wednesday by Captain F. O. Armington and Lieut. Colonel Mogen E. Mogensen has been named as colonel of the 192nd to succeed Brigadier General M. B. Payne, promoted to the command of the 55th infantry brigade. Sol. Mogensen has been commanding in the western part ofthis state. At Tuesday evening's drill of the Service battery, Major Kenneth P. Lord and Captain James D. Cobb, New London officers, made an informal visit to the state armory.

Cloud Digger, Packer's weather prophet, has hit the bull's eye so many times of late with his long weather forecasts that a few more predictions, especially those promising earthquakes, will have the average man taking to the tall timbers to chant his gwan sung and prepare for the worst. In his prediction for the spring and summer period issued on March 23 he promised earthquakes among other interesting happenings and the record of the three months' period since the forecast appeared has shown numbers of them. Press clippings from issues of April, May and June tell of earthquakes in Ponya Delgada, Mexico City, Moscow, Quayaquil, Rome, Helena, Mont., Logan, Utah, Naples and many other places—and to top it all comes the Mt. Etna quake and eruption. Here is predicting with a vengeance. But if Cloud Digger can only tell the world when W. J. B. is going to start rattling and blow up, he will be giving the world news it will pay big money for—in fact a nation-wide collection of "free" silver.

Which suggests the thought that if they would only put a Ford motor in W. J. B. and fit him with oversize tires, he would make a good candidate, too, and just as noisy.

At St. James' parish hall Wednesday evening the annual graduation exercises of St. James parochial school were carried out. Intense heat did not operate to keep interested parents and other parishioners away and it may be said they were well repaid by the excellence of the program of exercises, recently printed in full in this column. The school will be closed until September.

PUTNAM

This morning a New Haven contractor who has been awarded the job by the state highway department will begin the work of resurfacing the state highway between this city and Pomfret station, a distance of 5 1-2 miles, with a 3-inch coating of bituminous macadam. The work will cost $60,000 and will require from three to four months to complete. It is the largest project scheduled by the state highway department for this section of the state during 1923.

The work will extend from near Cargill falls in this city all along the route over hospital hill into Pomfret and through Pomfret street to the railroad station in that town.

Nearly a year ago the state highway department began its work for the permanent improvement of this stretch of important trunk line on the important Hartford-Putnam route by laying a heavy bed of boulders on the surface of the old macadam highway, which had been badly battered by the tremendously heavy and ever increasing traffic on this route. Now that this foundation, capable of successfully withstanding the pounding of heavy trucks and other traffic, is completed the new surfacing is to be applied and when the work is completed early next fall the section between this city and Pomfret station will be one of the finest pieces of high, excluding cement routes, in this part of the state.

The New Haven contractor who is to do the work is one of the most experienced road builders in Connecticut. The small force of men employed when the work is started today will be augmented as rapidly as the development of the operations permits.

Class day exercises of the seniors of Putnam High school brought an attendance that tested the capacity of the auditorium of the high school building Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It was the first important function of commencement week in Putnam, a period that is always of great interest to hundreds of citizens.

Entrance of the classes of the school marked the opening of the exercises. Michael Maher, class president, delivered the address of welcome. The class history was given by Miss Sarah Barber and this paper was followed by the sing of The Song of the Seasons by the Senior Double Trio. Chandler Morse read the class will, an excellent paper, this being followed by another musical number, a saxaphone solo by Carl Tilquist, '25. Miss Edith Pease and William McCoy collaborated in the presentation of the class prophecy, a marvelous forecast of what awaits the graduates of today. A vocal number, The Moonlight Dance, by the Senior quartet, preceded the presentation of class gifts by Miss Mildred Perry and Miss Elizabeth Rich. In the presentation of class memorials Michael Maher, Carl Peterson and Miss Lillian Winburg participated. The ivy oration was by Miss Grace Buell.

This (Thursday) evening the graduation exercises will be held in the Bradley theatre and on Friday evening the senior hop, final of the commencement week festivities, is scheduled to be held in Union Hall.

A. Newton Vaughn was reelected as president of the Putnam Chamber of Commerce for the third consecutive year at its annual meeting and E. C. Rogers was named as first vice-president and Charles A. Richards as second vice-president. Otto E. Wulf was elected third vice president and Daniel J. Byrne as treasurer. The directors for three years are Miss Katherine Byrne, F. O. Marion, Charles E. Dean, Thomas De Coudres, W. E. Moss, directors for two years, G. Harold Gilpatric, F. F. Russell, Willis Carroll, Charles A. Thayer, Louis E. Law; directors for one year, John T. Hanton George L. Padgett, Walter J. Bartlett, Armand Lisotte and Alexander Gilman.

The meeting adopted a new rule pertaining to advertising under which the members of the Chamber of Commerce agree not to advertise in any publication not first having obtained the approval of the advertising committee, recommended by the Merchants' committee and approved by the board of directors. This rule will except newspapers and theatre programs.

According to what the police had heard and were discussing Wednesday morning a fanciful phrase that has gained more or less popular favor was revised by two Webster youths who came here Tuesday even to catch 'em young, treat 'em rough and give 'em a motor ride—even if they holler! This leads up to saying that the Webster youths came to town to fulfill a date. Near the junction of Providence and School streets they picked up three young Putnam girls—flappers of the most inexperienced type. Something went wrong soon after the expedition started to get under way and one of the flappers shrieked for help. The cries attracted the attention of someone who telephoned the police and Captain Jarvis and Sergeant Laird were quickly on their way to the rescue of the distressed maidens. The information was that the pursued car had gone out the route that leads to Providence by Chepachet, but a chase down that road netted the officers nothing and they had to return without their quarry. Later it developed that the chased car had gone up the Children's home road toward Thompson—and later the girls came home. A probation officer had interviews with them Wednesday.

Officers here are inclined to believe that the car which figured in the accident was one and the same as a machine reported stolen from Webster during the early part of Tuesday evening and reported Wednesday morning as having been returned to the town. There may be more about this episode later—the police were not quite certain as to that Wednesday.

This morning at 10 o'clock at the F. L. Herrick farm at West Thompson there is to be a meeting of poultrymen at a culling out of poorer hens at this season of the year. R. E. Jones, extension service specialist of the Connecticut Agricultural college, will conduct the demonstration. Opportunity will be given to ask questions regarding poultry diseases. Many of the poultrymen have had trouble with their chicks and this meeting will offer an opportunity to discuss all poultry troubles with an expert in such matters. The gathering is to be the second quarterly meeting of the poultrymen of Putnam, Thompson and Woodstock.

It was announced Wednesday that the L. A. W. Acceptance corporation with its headquarters in this city has declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on its common stock of 12,000 shares. As the par value of the common stock is but one dollar a share, the dividend amounts to 50 per cent. This is the third dividend on the common stock of the corporation since its incorporation in September, 1921. The first dividend on the common stock, paid four months after organization, was 30 cents a share. The second dividend on the common stock was paid January 1 of this year and was at the rate of $1.00 per share, or 100 per cent. In addition the corporation, which confines its activities to financing buyers of automobiles, has paid regular dividends on its preferred stock.

Just 19 people, according to the city's most experienced statistician, disappeared during Wednesday and appear to be a total loss. This estimate is on the basis of a shrinkage of 14 2-3 ounces per person under the melting insistency of a temperature that appeared to have a particular liking for rambling around in the 90's.

"It is a deadlocked situation and there is no change" was the statement of Oliver Christian strike director, as the strike of former employes of the Manhasset Manufacturing company entered its seventh week Wednesday. "We are as confident and determined as ever". Mr. Christian declared. "Our organization has ample funds and none of our people are suffering". Because of the intense heat Wednesday's meeting of the strikers was cancelled and the picket line removed for the day.

Attorney Charles L. Torrey of this city, a member of the state board of education, will present the diplomas to the members of the graduating class of the state Normal school at Willimantic today.

Victor Duquette, student at Boston university, is at his home here to spend the summer recess.

State officials of the Modern Woodmen of America will come to this city tonight and there will be delegations from neighboring towns to witness the adoption of a large class.

Joseph G. Irons, 72, Civil war veteran and a former resident of this city, died the past week at Everett, Mass. The body was taken to Providence for burial.

Camp Woodstock, where hundreds of boys will spend periods of two weeks this summer, will open tomorrow (Friday for the camp leaders. This is the tri-county Y. M. C. A. camp.

Principal E. H. Snow, who closes five years of service as principal of Putnam High school today, has been presented from the school with a bill fold containing three $20 bills. The presentation on behalf of the school was by Michael Maher, senior class president. Mr. Snow's response attested his appreciation of the esteem in which the school holds him and his gratitude for the kindly remembrance.

Then watch it combat the film on teeth

This is to people who are missing benefits which millions now enjoy.

There is a new way of tooth cleaning. It is used by careful people of some 50 nations, largely by dental advice.

It means whiter, prettier teeth, better tooth protection. It means fighting the teeth's enemies more effectively.

Your dealer will give you a ten-day test. Go ask him for it. Test this new method now.

Don't leave that film

You can feel on your teeth a viscous film. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush, used in old ways, has left much of it intact. That's why so many had dingy teeth, decay and other troubles.

Food stains, etc., discolor film. Then it forms cloudy coats. Tartar is based on film. That is why teeth lose luster.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. That was almost universal.

Germs breed by millions in film. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. And that became alarmingly common.

Their greatest enemy

Film was the teeth's chief enemy. Very few escaped its harm. So dental science long sought ways to fight it. Eventually two ways were found. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was perfected to apply them twice a day. That tooth paste is called Pepsodent. Now it has come into world-wide use, largely by dental advice.

New in several ways

Pepsodent brings other new effects which research proves essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

Although the new town hall has not yet been accepted by the town, the high school graduation will be held there, as the contractor, E. J. Pinney, has given permission to have the exercises there. Now that the building is nearing completion, some defects are being noticed by the townspeople and there are rumblings of dissatisfaction in the air. There are no fire escapes on the building, and no outside stairway of any kind, although the hall will accommodate 700 people and is on the second story, with a balcony on the third story. The cellar is damp and has had water in it all winter and it is doubtful about the records being safe from mildew in such a damp place, it is said. It is also said that both the vault in the town clerk's office and the one in the probate office are too small. The vault in the probate office is a narrow, damp dungeon and neither vault provides for future growth.

FAILURE DEMORALIZED MARKET

New York, June 20.—Failure of another stock exchange house demoralized today's stock market and sent prices tumbling to their lowest levels of the year. Coming within 24 hours after the president of the exchange had issued a statement that "the committee on business conduct has checked up the various names touched by rumor and in each case has found no justification for any suspicion of weakness," the latest bankruptcy brought about a vast flood of liquidating orders by frightened investors which were increased by the heavy offerings of professional short interests.

The market opened firm and seemed destined for a good rally when the suspension of the bankrupt firm was announced. Supporting orders were rushed into the market and the higher prices were maintained for a time after the bad news had become known. The pressure became too great, however, and quoted values began to crumble all over the list. The selling reached its climax in the final hour when more than 450,000 shares, comprising more than one-third of the day's business, changed hands. The ticker did not stop recording quotations until 23 minutes after the market closed.

Eighty stocks including nearly all the leaders broke below their previous low prices for the year, net losses of 1 to 6 points being quite common at the close. Among the stocks to establish new minimum prices were United States Steel at 90 1-8, off 2 3-8; Baldwin Locomotive at 120 1-8, off 4; Studebaker at 103 7-8 but rallied later to 103 3-8, off 3; Anaconda at 39 1-2, off 3 1-4 and U. S. Rubber at 44 1-2, off 1.

Rails held better than industrials but even this group showed an average loss of 1 1-8 points on the day. Reading, New York Central, Southern, Delaware & Hudson, the Erie issues, Great Northern Preferred, Atchison and a number of other lost 2 to 2 1-2 points and Lackawanna broke nearly 6.

Call money held at 5 per cent throughout the day. Time money was quoted at 4 3-4 for the shorter maturities and 5 per cent. for the longer dates with business quiet. Commercial Paper was still on a 5 per cent. basis.

Foreign exchanges held fairly steady. Demand sterling was quoted around 4.61 1-16. French francs around 6.35 cents and German marks at .0008 5-8 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 20.—Bond prices tumbled along with the stocks in today's trading on the New York Stock exchange, frightened bond holders joining with stock investors in offering their securities. Losses of a point or more were common throughout the list, with the exception of United States government issues, which held relatively firm.

Foreign government bonds were sold freely at declines of from 1 to nearly 3 points, issues chiefly effected including Prague 7 1-2s, Belgium 8s, Denmark 6s, Mexican 4s and 5s, Serbian 3s, and Austrian 7s.

Railroad mortgages were hard hit, losses of a point or more being registered by Colorado & Southern Refunding 4 1-2s, New Haven convertible 6s, Pennsylvania General 4 1-2s, "Katy" Adjustment 5s, Kansas City Southern 5s, Erie General 4s, and Delaware & Hudson Refunding 4 1-2s.

Interborough Rapid Transit 6s and the refunding 5s, stamped, sold off more than a point. Third Avenue Refunding 4s, however, advanced 2 points.

Among industrial liens Pierce Arrow 8s led with a drop of 5 7-8 points. Cerro De Pasco Copper 8s receded 3 1-8 and American Telephone & Telegraph Convertible 6s, 2 1-8. Losses of a point or more were recorded by Armoura & Co. 4 1-2s, Morris & Co., 4 1-2s, Wilson & Co. 7 1-2s, Northern States Power 5s, Montana Power 5s, and Virginia Carolina Chemical 7 1-2s, with warrants. Utah Power & Light Company 5s advanced 1 and Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Refunding 5s, 1 3-8.

Total sales (par value) were $12,062,000.

METAL MARKET.

New York, June 20.—Copper quiet, electrolytic spot and futures 15 1-2. Tin firmer, spot and nearby 40.87; futures 40.62. Iron steady, prices unchanged. Lead steady, spot, 7.25. Zinc quiet, East St. Louis spot and nearby 5.90@5.95. Antimony, spot, 6.75@6.85.

MONEY.

New York, June 20.—Call money firm; high 5; low 5; ruling rate 5; closing bid 5; offered at 5; last loan 5; call loans against acceptances 4 1-2.

COTTON.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 20.—After announcement of an important failure on the New York Stock Exchange, heavy selling here tumbled September and December wheat prices today to a new low record for the season. July wheat was weaker than September and December, but kept above the season's low record for the July delivery—$1.01 1-4 made last October 6. Today's close was nervous at 3 3-8 to 3 1-2 cents net decline with July and September both at 1.03 7-8 to 1.04 and December 106 1-2 to 106 5-8.

Corn lost 1-4 to 2-4 cent and oats 5-8 to 3-4@7-8 cent. In provisions, the outcome varied from unchanged figures to 37 cents down.

At first, the wheat market had a noticeable upward tendency that appeared to be due chiefly to improved prospects of export business. Extreme cold weather abroad was cited in this connection. Suddenly, however, wheat selling here widened, and buying power largely gave out when wodr came that suspension of a New York stock market firm involved liabilities of $7,500,000.

In some quarters, the late weakness was ascribed to bearish sentiment growing out of attacks made here yesterday against alleged discreditable methods of grain dealing and to widespread circulation of estimates indicating that wheat stocks were burdensome. Against this view, though, was the fact that the bulk of the heavy selling here today came in the last half of the board of trade session when attention had focused on the bearish news from Wall street. Corn and oats receded with wheat, but only after corn had equaled the season's previous top price record, and profit taking had set in.

NOT unless you wanted to "get the air"! For etiquette dictates and quality demands that fine confections be put up in boxes.

Has it ever occurred to you that cigars, too, are at their best when put up in packs? You know that cigars fresh from a humidor are far better smokes than those you've had in your pocket or that have been lying around the house. That's the beauty of Peter Schuyler packs. They keep the cigars in humidor condition.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Norwich Savings Society.

Resolved, That the Directors of The Norwich Savings Society hereby place on record their profound sense of loss in the death of Arthur Henry Brewer, for thirty-five years a trustee of this institution, for thirty-one years a director, and for the past ten years its President.

As a successful business man, as a public spirited citizen, as a companion beloved by a large number of intimate friends, he constantly used his influence for the betterment of Norwich.

Many and varied are the interests that will miss his counsel and enthusiasm. Our community mourns the loss of one of its best citizens.

In memory of the valuable leadership he gave to this Society, we place this resolution on our permanent records.

Be it further resolved that copies of this record be sent to his family, to whom we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

Norwich Free Academy.

Norwich, Conn., June 20, 1923.

At a meeting of the Trustees of the Norwich Free Academy held this day the following memorandum was unanimously adopted:

In the death of Arthur H. Brewer, for many years a member of the Board of Trustees, the Norwich Free Academy sustains the loss of a friend who at all times had the best interests of the institution at heart. His wise counsel and mature judgment were unfailingly given and contributed in no small measure to the upbuilding and maintenance of the Academy.

His was a nature which could be satisfied with nothing less than the highest ideals. These conceptions were combined and manifested in a marked degree by his devotion of love and loyalty through the long term as a fellow member of this Board.

Resolved, be it resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy, and that as a mark of respect we attend the funeral in a body.

Resolved further, That this resolution be spread on our permanent records and that a copy be forwarded to his family.

Attest:

COSTELLO LEFFERT, Secretary.

The Thames National Bank.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of The Thames National Bank, held June 20, 1923, to take action upon the death of the President, Arthur H. Brewer, the following minute was adopted:

Mr. Arthur H. Brewer, for many years a strong and leading figure in the business and banking life of Norwich, died at his home on Broad street in this city on June 19th, 1923.

Mr. Brewer became a Director of The Thames National Bank on March 29th, 1893; Vice President on May 17th, 1915, and President on Nov. 20th, 1918, which latter position he held at the time of his death, thus rendering to this Bank more than thirty-one years of unquestioned and valuable service.

He was a man of keen insight and rare judgment, strong and positive in his convictions, but always fair to the man who differed with him, and of such courteous and kindly bearing at all times that it was a pleasure to come in contact with him.

These qualities coupled with his strength of character, his absolute loyalty to the Bank and its interests, and his ability to say "No," and still leave no sting, made him a most valuable asset to the institution. Not only does this Bank sustain a great loss in his death, but a large number of personal friends also comes to each one who was privileged to be associated with him in the management of its affairs, and it is with an abiding sense of the truth of this that his associates affix this tribute to his memory.

It was voted that this minute be spread upon our records as a mark of respect to his memory, and that the Bank be closed at 2:46 p. m. upon the date of the obsequies.

Voted, That the Directors and Officers attend the funeral in a body.

Attest:

NATHAN A. CHASE, Secretary.

The Ashland Cotton Company.

In the death of Arthur H. Brewer, which occurred at his home on Broad street, in Norwich, on June 19th, 1923, the Ashland Cotton Company has lost a strong executive, a wise counselor and valued friend.

Mr. Brewer became a Director of the Ashland Cotton Company in 1882 and its President in 1900, holding the latter position at the time of his death.

He was a leading factor in the reorganization of this Company which took place in 1910, and to which reorganization as well as to the earlier and later activities of the Company he at all times brought a wide experience in business affairs, a trained and analytical mind, a clear perception and a strength of character which commanded universal respect on the part of all those who came to know him.

Mr Brewer had an inborn sense of justice and hated hypocrisy and sham; he was firm in his judgments when place arrived at, loyal to every interest he served, and brought to each duty and responsibility of his busy life the high purpose of honest achievement. He was a tower of strength to this Company and his loss is keenly felt.

To his associates he was ever the kind and courteous gentleman, and their association with him will ever be to them a precious memory.

Resolved, That this minute be spread upon the records of the Company and that the mills of the Company suspend all operations for fifteen minutes at the hour of Mr. Brewer's funeral as a silent tribute to his memory.

TAFTVILLE

Albert Labarre, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Labarre of Hunters avenue, and Miss Rose Bellerose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Bellerose, South B street, were united in marriage Wednesday morning at a nuptial high mass at Sacred Heart church. The bride was handsomely gowned in white, with bridal veil of tulle, and carried a bouquet of roses. The wedding march was played by Professor Adolph Dugas. Before the ceremony Professor Dugas played on the organ Humoresque (his own arrangement) and Lullaby, Jocelyn; accompanied by R. DeGrutela on the bello and Professor Christopher on the violin. After the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast and reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Bellerose at 49 South B street, which was attended by many friends and relatives. The gifts were numerous and included much linen, cut glass and silver. The young couple left on a wedding trip of several weeks. Mr. Labarre is one of the popular young men of the village, being a member of Court Wequonnoc, No. 88, Foresters of America and Fonemah Council, No. 34, Knights of Columbus. His bride was born in Canada, and since her residence here has made many friends. She was a member of the Children of Mary Society.

The pupils in the eighth grade of the Sacred Heart school have each received a souvenir from Jerusalem, the gift of Philias C. Dion of Merchants avenue, who is touring the Holy Land.

Tonight (Thursday) the Army & Navy club and the Clerks will cross bats to ascertain which of the two teams will occupy the cellar position in the Twilight league. Tubbs' band will play between the innings and it gives the village folk an opportunity to spend a pleasant evening out of doors. The games so far have been well patronized and usually there is enough excitement to satisfy the most excitable fan. The battery for the Army & Navy club will be John H. Murphy, pitcher, and Suprenault, catcher. For the Clerks, Gaudette and Eccleston will do the honors.

Arthur Roy of Merchants avenue has returned from the Willimantic hospital where he was a patient following an operation for the removal of his tonsils.

Mrs. A. E. Pingree and Leonard Pingree of North Third avenue are in New York, to attend commencement at Pratt Institute, where Mrs. Pingree's son, Raymond A. Pingree is a member of the graduating class.

Sheriff Main of Norwich was a caller in town this week to put a padlock on the place of business of Henry Laplante in the Gouin block on Merchants avenue. Mr. Laplante recently collided with a motorcycle, on one of the Jvillage streets, and shortly after that, disappeared.

The state roads in Lisbon are being treated to a coat of tarvia.

Alphonse Paquette has resigned his position with the Ponemah company.

Mrs. Hubbard of North Third avenue, who has been spending some time in town, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Edmund Hindle of North Third avenue was pleasantly surprised Wednesday evening by the members of the Thimble club. Mrs. Hindle is sailing this week for Europe with Mr. Hindle and her son, Edmund, to spend the summer. Mrs. Hindle was presented a silk umbrella by the members of the club. Refreshments were served and a social evening followed.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. NELLIE QUILLON, 17 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and backaches, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

SILK COMPANY DEED CONVEYED TOO MUCH

Trial of the suit of the Corticelli Silk Company against Jacob R. and Hattie F. Slosberg of this city to have a deed of a lot in this city reformed, was started in the superior court here Wednesday afternoon before Judge George E. Hinman. It is alleged in the complaint that a deed given from plaintiff to defendants in the sale of a plot of land adjoining the silk mill property off North Main street made the width of land abutting on the Shetucket river 75 feet instead of 60 feet and that this arose either through the mutual mistake of both seller and buyer or the mistake of the seller and the fraud of the buyer. The measurement given on the deed in question is such that it includes a portion of the silk mill building. The sale was on April 5, 1922.

The real estate involved is a vacant lot between the plaintiff's silk mill building and other land of Mr. Slosberg.

Witnesses for the plaintiff company were J. P. Taylor Armstrong of New London, secretary, and Douglass E. Ackroyd, superintendent of the Norwich mill of the silk company.

Attorney Frank L. McGuire, counsel for the silk company, rested his case after the testimony of these three witnesses.

Attorneys J. J. Desmond and E. W. Perkins, counsel for Mr. Slosberg, opened their case by calling him as the first witness. He told of negotiations for the purchase of the vacant lot for which an offer of $4,000, was at first made and refused. Later the offer was raised to $10,000 and the sale was made at that price.

Mr. Slosberg was still on the stand when court adjourned to continue the trial Thursday.

Sang Dr. Jules Jordan's Hymn.

At the re-opening of the beautifully re-decorated Church of the Holy Ghost, in Providence, a musical number which won universal admiration was the new setting of "Salve Regina" (Hail, Queen of Heaven) composed by Dr. Jules Jordan, a native of Windham, Conn., composed for and sung by one of his pupils, a gifted young tenor named Dinnucchi. Organists and choir directors from a number of Catholic churches throughout the country have written to Dr. Jordan in regard to the new composition, which received most flattering praise from the Providence musical critics. Dr. Jordan's setting of Ave Maria has for years been a favorite number with choir singers.

HOLY FAMILY ACADEMY HOLD COMMENCEMENT DAY

The commencement day exercises of the Holy Family Academy at Baltic occurred Wednesday morning with the usual ceremonies at St. Mary's church.

A solemn high mass was celebrated with Rev. William O'Brien, as celebrant, Rev. U. O. Bellerose of Taftville, deacon, Rev. Ludovic Paradis, Voluntown, subdeacon, and Rev. J. Jalbert, Baltic, master of ceremonies. Rev. J. Brady, of Hartford, was the preacher for the occasion. A number of priests from out of town parishes were present in the sanctuary.

The singing by the Academy students' choir was excellent, and judging from the fine manner in which they carried through their beautiful, but difficult parts, those who had the pleasure of hearing them felt that the musical training which the students of the Academy receive is especially good.

The sermon by Father Brady was indeed a literary and spiritual treat, couched in language whose force and elegance attract while its convincing enlightened and inspired those who had the logic pleasure of listening to Father Brady's splendid discourse. He dwelt upon the folly of education where religious principles and teaching were eliminated from the curriculum of studies. That no nation however powerful through the accumulation of wealth or vast in the extent of its territory has survived the years, whose foundations were not laid secure upon the belief in a personal God ruling and directing the universe, and that the nation which had dared to deny these great truths and sought to direct its course independent of the God who created it had realized in the failure of its undertaking that a nation is great insofar as its individuals are a moral people.

Father Brady congratulated the graduating classes upon the success which had crowned their efforts, now that they had completed a long step on the road of life's endeavor.

He also told the classes that the diplomas they were about to receive, in themselves were but white sheets of paper bearing certain characters, but that they really stood for an accumulation of struggles bravely endured and of difficulties successfully overcome, that the diplomas, were a symbol of their souls upon whose white surface had been stamped the results of long years of patient labor and training made possible by the sacrifice of their dear friends and through the supervision and experience of their good teachers.

A large number of guests, friends of the students and school, were present at the impressive ceremonies.

After the ceremonies at the church, luncheon was served at the Academy where also visitors had an opportunity of inspecting the splendid display of studio work, plain and fancy sewing and work of the drawing classes of the school.

Thus the Academy closes another most successful year, to reopen September 10th for its golden jubilee year, when it will have rounded out a half century of years in training young women to fill whatever post life may appoint for them, in endeavoring to form young women to remember that they owe the world's society the best that they can give, and that best is a true, noble womanhood.

LAND OWNERS JOIN TO PREVENT FOREST FIRES

The spring season for forest fires in Connecticut now seems to be finished although bad fires are raging in Canada and the Lake states as evidenced by the smoke which has been blown over New England intermittently for the past fortnight. In this state 483 fires have been reported which is about half the number reported for the spring season last year. Fire wardens are enthusiastic over the pumps sent out by the state forester, and by using these instead of back firing they have materially reduced the damage done by the fires. The acreage area burned over per fire this season was 25 acres as against 79 acres last year.

The Connecticut Forestry Association asked the general assembly for a biennial appropriation of $100,000 which would have permitted the expenditure of three cents an acre per annum for fire prevention. This is the minimum required for adequate protection according to government experts. The appropriation was approved by the agricultural committee only provides one cent an acre for protection.

The state forester believes that with the small amount available the best results in fire prevention can be secured by encouraging land owners to adopt protective measures. Since forest fires spread so rapidly from one land holding to another, it is unreasonable to expect one owner to patrol his land or make fire lines while his neighbors do nothing. The plan of co-operation which has been approved by the state park and forest commission is to encourage the formation of co-operative protective associations such as have been in successful operation for a number of years in Vermont, New Hampshire and several western states. The theory upon which these associations are formed is that each member has an equal voting power regardless of the area he controls; and that funds are raised by assessing all lands controlled on an acre basis. The amount of such assessment may be determined by the directors, and may vary from year to year.

Such an association of land owners controlling at least 5000 acres and assessing themselves not less than four cents an acre a year will receive financial assistance from the state forester provided he approves of the plan of protection proposed by the directors of the association. This plan may rest upon a lookout system, patrols, fire lines, the purchase of equipment or a combination of these. It is hoped that these associations will eventually go farther than merely protecting their lands, and will take measures for reforesting waste lands, but this is entirely optional with the members.

Preliminary steps have been taken toward the formation of one association of this character in the western part of Hartford county. Persons interested in forming such associations can secure further information from the state forester.

FORMER PALESTINE WORKER ADDRESSES BIBLE CLASS

Seldom has the men's Bible class at the Y. M. C. A. held a more interesting session than Wednesday evening when a good number of men attended. W. C. Cain, a former "Y" worker in Palestine, who is rooming at the local Y. M. C. A. at present, gave a very helpful talk based on the first chapter of Colossians. He emphasized that the kingdom of Christ was a kingdom of life, light and love, and the members of that kingdom should live as though they belonged to it; that there should be absolutely no hatred to any race or nationality, for hatred has no place in the lives of the followers of Christ. He also emphasized the fact that religion was intensely practical here and now, in our daily life, whatever our business or calling might be.

Mr. Cain told the class of some of his experiences in "Y" work in Palestine, which indicated the very practical service the American Y. M. C. A. carried on in that far away place.

After the paper and talk there was a practical discussion on the topic of "heredity and environment" and the part these played in the lives of people. It was brought out that while we do inherit certain things, if these things are wrong we can overcome them, and though our environment is not what it should be we can live above it; not in our own strength but by the power of God Almighty.

It is unusual to continue the Bible study class for men thus far into the warm weather, but by request of the members of the class the studies will continue at least until July, and possibly after that time.

BROKERS BET THEIR BRAINS AGAINST CUSTOMERS' MONEY

Disclosure Made in the Housecleaning in Wall Street—A Campaign Has Been Inaugurated in New York to Close All Bucketshops by Injunction—W. S. Silkworth, Who is to Resign the Consolidated Exchange Presidency, Made the Declaration That "Fraudulent Promotion Schemes Have Cost the Public More Money Than All the Bucketshops That Ever Existed".

New York, June 21.—The housecleaning in Wall street, inaugurated after the failure of E. M. Fuller & Company for $6,000,000 an disclosure that the house was one of scores of bucketshops where brokers bet their brains against their customers' money, brought four important developments today.

1—Inauguration by Attorney General Sherman of a campaign to close all bucketshops by injunction, under the recently adopted Martin act.

2—Announcement that W. S. Silkworth, who has been sharply under fire because of his alleged relations with disrupt members of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, had decided to resign the exchange presidency next Thursday, and that Lawrence Tweedy, vice president, slated to succeed him, would immediately start a thorough reorganization of the exchange.

3—Disciplinary action by the New York Curb market against two members alleged to have committed acts injurious to the exchange. One was expelled and one suspended for a year.

4—Reports that powerful banking interests in the street had inaugurated a series of conferences to seek some sane of stabilizing conditions in the financial zone. In this connection, the statement last night of President Cromwell of the New York Stock Exchange that a movement was on foot to organize a pool to save houses subjected to runs, was recalled.

The attorney general's drive, announced last night, was begun in earnest today when he obtained from Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel temporary injunctions restraining the interlocking brokerage firms of W. W. Wesse & Company and J. H. Dube & Company from bucketing or otherwise dealing in fraudulent stock transactions. Wilfred W. Wesse and Joseph Dube, who recently consolidated but kept both firm names, were ordered to appear Monday to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent. The firms were said to have up direct exchange connections.

While only two injunctions were sought today, the attorney general's [illegible] would be forthcoming from time to time, as the widespread investigation being conducted by the department bears fruit.

The announcement that Mr. Silkworth planned to resign for the good of the Consolidated Exchange came from the president himself. It followed close on the heels of unsuccessful efforts of counsel for creditors of E. M. Fuller & Company to elicit from Mr. Silkworth at a referee's hearing admission that he had received money from tottering houses at about the same time he was advising inquirers that these firms were in good condition.

Announcing his decision to resign, Mr. Silkworth said:

"I feel that I have been a target for personal abuse, and that this fact has reacted to too great an extent upon the exchange itself. In view of the fact that my paramount interest is for the welfare of the exchange I feel that the time has come for me to step out and let a new man take hold. I have had this intention for some time, but I have hesitated in the matter on account of the wishes of counsel to the exchange. They have advised me not to resign.

"In spite of the extraordinary abuse which I have received during recent months, I feel that the past year, since the close of the bucket shop epidemic in 1922, has been a year of extraordinary progress. We have put through on the Consolidated Exchange some of the best protective measures ever undertaken by an exchange. One of these is the resolution controlling participation of exchange members in promotion schemes.

"Fraudulent promotion schemes have cost the public more money than all the bucketshops that ever existed. The Consolidated is the only exchange in the world that has attempted to control these matters. We have also made laws requiring the revelation of the stock position of all houses once every 90 days, and we have created an auditing and accounting department of our own, which is fully competent to protect the exchange in the future from any such difficulties as we have gone through in the last couple of years."

The curb market's action in disciplining members came as the sequel of a promise made by curb officials to the attorney general that they would do all in their power to wipe out improper dealings among their members.

The members disciplined were Benjamin Alexander, of the house of J. G. Hueck, who was expelled for "an act inconsistent with the curb's principles of trading," and A. B. Morley of A. B. Morley & Company, who was suspended a year for "an act detrimental to the best interests of the exchange."

Morley issued a statement declaring the only offense he had been guilty of was failing to answer a summons of the Board of governors, sent after he had submitted his resignation from the curb.

Much mystery surrounded the reported meeting of big banking interests to devise a stabilizer for the street. Most of the bankers interviewed insisted the financial district was sound and asserted there was no occasion for any sort of conferences. Despite denials, however, the reports persisted.

Two bankers interviewed made no bones of charging that malicious spreaders of rumors had done more to impede confidence in Wall street than any actual developments. Most of the failures, they declared, could have been averted had public confidence in the attached houses been maintained.

PLACES RESPONSIBILITY ON NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, June 21.—Charging that the New York stock exchange was responsible for "the present condition and feeling in Wall street," District Attorney Banino tonight asserted its chief officer had fought against constructive legislation that would have been helpful to the brokerage business and had demanded and obtained a law "the enforcement of which will ruin the brokerage business of New York."

DELORME MURDER TRIAL OPENED IN MONTREAL

Montreal, June 21.—Adelard Delorme, former priest, charged with the murder of his half-brother Raoul, lived far beyond his means and was deep in debt at the time of Raoul's death by which he stood to benefit in excess of $100,000, R. L. Calder, crown prosecutor declared as he opened his case today.

One significant feature of Raoul's will was that it discriminated against his own sisters in favor of Delorme's sisters, the prosecutor said, while the former priest was willed $62,000, and revenues from other legacies.

The prosecutor dwelt at some length on the question of the $25,000 insurance policy, which he said he could prove was taken out by the slain youth at the insistence of Father Delorme.

The will of the father of the two men also was called to the attention of the jury. Under it Raoul had been given $70,287 whereas the prisoner received but $15,651. The priest lived like a millionaire, Attorney Calder declared, and went on extensive trips at frequent intervals. On December 31, 1922, Raoul had a balance of his legacy amounting $8,577 due him, while the priest had a deficit of $13,913.

"What I will prove," the crown prosecutor stated "is that Father Delorme was a defaulter to the extent of $13,000 which he took from his brother's estate, to cover up his own defalcations."

Just before he began his outline of the case, Attorney Calder had the courtroom cleared of witnesses, and then warned the jury not to let any clerical rank of the prisoner affect [illegible] guilt or innocence.

Throughout the day Father Delorme maintained an attitude of indifference, writing industriously upon a thick pad.

DISCUSSED LIMITATION OF ENROLLMENT AT HARVARD

Cambridge, Mass., June 21.—The possibility of limitation of enrollment at Harvard was discussed by President A. Lawrence Lowell in an address today after reading the list of gifts to the university at commencement exercises. After declaring that the "idea of a limit has always been repugnant" to him, President Lowell said:

"But still, one may ask himself certain questions in relation thereto. How far can we go, doing the utmost work we can for the students? We are trying rather for quality than quantity. Mind you, I have an sympathy with a college for the intellectual elite, or any such nonsense, I beg the pardon of those who advocate it. The college is not for the intellectual elite. The college is for the people of America.

"But it may come, on the other hand, to be true that a limit in certain cases is necessary. How many men do you suppose have already applied to the college this year? We have had 1,217 applications to take the examinations. Besides those on that list, there are 45 more who have been admitted without examination under the new rule. Let us call it, therefore, 1,262 who have applied. These will not all take their examinations, and of those who do, 25 per cent. fail. There are always a considerable number who will be dropped later, and of course the classes will be smaller as they go up."

VIOLENCE OF MOUNT ETNA SEEMS TO BE DIMINISHING

Rome, June 21.—The fury of Mt. Etna seems to be diminishing tonight, and messages of hope are pouring in from Sicily. The flow of lava, which became slower during the day is now almost stopped, although the volcano is still belching forth smoke, cinders and dust.

Dr. Nicolosi, mayor of Linguaglossa, informed King Victor Emmanuel that the damage amounts approximately to 70,000,0000 lire. Most of the residents of that town and Castiglione have returned to their homes, the panic has abated and conditions in general are becoming normal.

UNEXPECTED DEVELOPMENT IN THE BUZZI MURDER TRIAL

New York, June 21.—Two women at the trial of Mrs. Anna Turo, charged with the murder of Frederick Schneider, today secured William Turo, Mrs. Buzzi's brother-in-law of having threatened to kill Schneider upon several occasions. This came as an unexpected development, after Turo's testimony of yesterday that Mrs. Buzzie had conferred to him that she committed the crime.

The two were Turo's wife, and her sister, Mrs. Sophie Dickie. Mrs. Dickie testified that the Saturday before the murder Turo drew a revolver, waved it menacingly, and yelled:

"I'd like to kill that Hun, Fred Schneider."

Later, on the night of the murder, she said, Turo shouted that Schneider would not be seen after five o'clock. This story was amplified by Mrs. Turo, who stated that many times during the last four years Turo had threatened to kill the wealthy Bronx contractor.

"Schneider made improper advances to me," she said, "and although my husband said nothing at the time, as soon as Schneider left he said I'm going to get that Hun.' The first time he threatened to kill Fred was about four years ago, and he's been continuing ever since."

Mrs. Turo, who was formerly a circus rider, testified that her husband had experienced a great deal of trouble with Schneider, who used to ridicule him for his small stature. She left Turo shortly after the murder.

Mrs. Turo stated several times that Turo was very jealous because of Schneider's advances to her. On one occasion, she said, Schneider took her to Thendara, in the Adirondacks, and implored her to stay there with him, saying "Why don't you get a real man?"

On the night of the murder, she said, when neighbors told her Schneider had been killed, her husband denied it. He permitted in declaring there was nothing in the report, and then taking her to the theatre later asked her to say nothing about it.

Despite Schneider's advances, the witness admitted she remained friendly with him. At one time the murdered man had promised to start Turo in business, she stated, and his failure to carry out the promise disappointed her husband to such an extent that he threatened murder again.

On cross examination Mrs. Turo was asked:

"After you heard Schneider was killed did you say to your husband: 'Willie, did you kill Fred Schneider?'"

She answered that despite his many threats, she had never asked Turo if he had committed the crime.

The bills disapproved proposed (1) to validate the licenses of twenty-three physicians practicing in Connecticut, (2) to establish a preliminary medical examining board of laymen and an advisory commission of physicians before which future applicants for licenses to practice the healing arts would have to appear, (3) to authorize local school authorities to issue vacation work certificates to eligible pupils, and (4) to create a state water commission for regulation of efforts to diminish pollution in Connecticut streams.

House Leader John Buckley and four other members of the legislature had been named by Speaker Nickerson and Lieutenant Governor Bingham, as president of the senate, to serve on the preliminary examining board which was denied an existence by the "pocket veto" of the healing arts bill.

FLEEING MAN SHOT BY POLICEMAN IN NEW BRITAIN

New Britain, June 21.—Policemen Grabeck and McEvoy were patrolling a beat in the north end of the city early this morning when they saw a man dart out of a yard and run. When he failed to heed their shouts, Grabeck whipped out his gun and fired a shot in the air. This having no effect, Grabeck shot at the fugitive, putting three bullets in different parts of his body. The prisoner gave the name of Dineno Savene, aged 28. He is suspected of being a clothesline thief, as a bundle of clothes dropped out from under his coat when the policeman's bullets brought him down. Savene is at the hospital.

Louis Katz and Charles Sabbatino, also convicted, made no application for a writ and were reported as prepared to serve their time in Atlanta.

The four men were convicted of paying $10,000 each to two federal officers for liquor withdrawal permits.

Death Toll of the Torrid Temperature

Fourteen Fatalities in New York, Six in Philadelphia—At Least 12 in Boston District.

New York, June 21.—New York sizzled toward the promised close of its first real hot wave of 1923 tonight with a record of 14 deaths and prostrations that were numbered in the scores.

Freshinging northeast winds, springing up after the mercury had mounted to 93 degrees at 4 o'clock, brought some relief to the sweltering millions, but the asphalt streets and big buildings continued for hours to fight the breeze with their stored up heat.

The forecaster promised that it would be "somewhat cooler" both tonight and tomorrow, but he would not commit himself to a statement that the heat wave was really gone. An earlier promise of possible showers was withdrawn.

HEAT WAVE COST DOZEN LIVES IN BOSTON DISTRICT

Boston, June 21.—New England today sizzled through the third successive day of excessive heat but tonight has promise of relief when a cool breeze sprang up and the weather bureau forecasts lower temperatures. The heat wave cost at least a dozen lives in this district while many persons were prostrated and various industries and schools were forced to close.

Hundreds of city employes today were given their liberty on account of the heat while numerous factories throughout New England permitted their workers to leave their work at an early hour. Plants in Lawrence, New Bedford, Salem, Pawtucket, R. I., among others were shut down while schools in many cities, including Somerville, Everett, Concord, New Bedford, Revere, Woonsocket, R. I., Cambridge, Brockton, Lynn, and Waltham were closed.

The night was by far the hottest of the summer. Only one other June night of the last 53 years of weather bureau records was so hot. Last night 72 degrees was the lowest point the mercury reached. In 1872 that point was reached on a June night. There was no wind during the night and this added materially to the suffering. Many in the crowded tenement districts slept in the parks, in the streets and on the roofs.

All day today the city fire departments provided showers for the suffering children in the crowded North, South and West ends, while all available bath houses in the city and suburbs were running at capacity. The beaches adjacent to Boston were thronged with bathers.

No prospect of rain, now urgently needed by the agricultural industry was held out tonight by the weather bureau. Reports from farming sections indicated that berries have not been developing hay crops have ripened too soon and the ground is dry several inches down. It was hoped, however, that showers within the next few days would save the crops.

Two Deaths in Providence.

Providence, R. I., June 21.—Two deaths from heat prostrations resulted here today when the weather, bureau thermometers climbed to 95 degrees at 3 p. m. Unofficial thermometers registered 106 degrees in the sun at one o'clock. Schools were closed in Woonsocket and East Providence. More than a dozen textile plants suspended operations, while others released operatives in the departments where the heat was most oppressive. Justices in the superior court took the bench without their judicial robes, and jurymen were permitted to sit tieless. Three jewelry manufacturing concerns and many other light manufacturing plants in the city closed for the day.

HOTTEST JUNE DAY ON RECORD IN PHILADELRHIA

Philadelphia, June 21.—Today was the hottest June day the Philadelphia weather bureau ever recorded. The mercury ascended to 99 degrees where it hovered until the approach of evening brought meager relief.

All public schools were closed because of the heat, the first time in the history of the city, such an order has been issued.

The temperature today was the most torrid since July 4, 1919, when the temperature reached 100 degrees. According to weather bureau records, Philadelphia's warmest day was August 7, 1918, when the thermometer registered 103 degrees.

Six deaths resulted from the heat wave within the last 24 hours. Three of of this number were drowned when they sought relief from the heat.

DROP OF MORE THAN 40 DEGREES IN 24 HOURS

Superior, Wis., June 21.—This city, which recorded its maximum temperature of the year Tuesday, reports that straw hats were shelved in a hurry today and overcoats brought out when the temperature dropped more than 40 degrees in 24 hours.

The Northern Rockies report unseasonably cool weather, Salt Lake City, Utah, even forecasting a "cool" reception for President Harding when he arrives there early next week.

While relief is promised in the east, the temperature is expected to continue high in the Chicago territory for the remainder of the week. Local thunderhowers are expected to provide only temporary relief.

MORE THAN TWENTY PROSTRATIONS IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Ills., June 21.—The largest day of the year also was the hottest in many sections of the country and sweltering inhabitants of the present heat belt found it hard to believe that elsewhere in the United States ice had formed out doors during the night.

The oppressive heat spread over Chicago and the middle west Monday and has spread to the Atlantic coast, continued here today. More than 20 prostrations were added to th list of 17 dead and numerous prostrations.

President's Plea For World Court

Tells of the One and Only Existing Agency of Peace—How to Bring About the Desired End.

St. Louis, Mo., June 21 (By the A. P.)—President Harding's special train arrived in St. Louis at 4 p. m.

Leaving the train, the president headed an automobile procession through the central part of the city to the Coliseum where he made a brief talk to Rotay International.

Thousands of persons lined the streets and cheered the chief executive. The procession which was led by mounted police through decorated streets, went seven miles. At mile intervals, Rotary, bands played patriotic airs.

At the Coliseum, immediate members of the presidential party and newspaper men traveling with the president were forbidden by police to enter the auditorium to hear the president speak.

Making the first prepared address of his western trip, the president said that to bring about the end he desired he "would gladly wipe out factional difference," and proposed a reconstruction of the machinery of the international tribunal "to dispose conclusively of all other cited apprehensions of danger from the exercise of any influence, whatsoever, either open or furtive, by the league of nations or by any other organization."

"This could be done in one of two ways," he asserted, "first, by empowering the court itself to fill any vacancy arising from the death of a member or retirement for whatever cause, without interposition from any other body; or, second, by continuing the existing authority of the permanent court of arbitration to nominate and by transfering the power to elect from the council and assembly of the league to the remaining members of the court of justice."

Then anticipating the voice of the doubter," who might inquire whether the 40 nations now represented on the court would consent to these changes in the structure of the tibunal, Mr. Harding answered that "to submit terms which we consider essential to the preservation of our nationality is not an act of discourtesy; it is the only fair, square and honorable thing a great, self-respecting nation can do"

HARDING TO HELP HARVEST WHEAT CROP OF KANSAS

Hutchinson, Kans., June 21.—(By the A. P.)—President Harding is expected to lend a hand in harvesting the wheat crop of Kansas, when his party stops here Thursday morning, on his 15,000-mile Alaskan trip. It is planned to have the president drive a combined harvester-thresher machine through the heart of a Kansas wheat field near Hutchinson to the accompaniment of clicking movie cameras.

One of the largest crowds ever assembled in Kansas is expected to watch the chief executive pilot the giant machine. A number of persons have expressed the intention of coming via airplane.

At 10.15 a. m. the president will speak to the school children. A ride on the new Santa Fe trail, over a paved federal and highway will follow. Six or eight miles from town the party is scheduled to stop at a field of wheat ready for harvest. A short stop will be made at the Hutchinson News, where a solid gold make-up rule will be given the president, who is a member of the typographical union, by members of the local union.

The president's address is to be delivered at the Kansas state fair grounds at 2 p. m.

TO SEIZE ALL SHIP LIQUORS BROUGHT IN FOREIGN VESSELS

Decision Announced by Secretary Mellon Late Yesterday—No Exception for Liquors Brought Into American Waters Under Seal of Foreign Government—When the Liner Berenguria Arrives in New York Today Customs Agents Will Break the British Seals and Take Charge of Her Beverage Liquor—All Future Attempts to Bring Intoxicating Beverages Inside the Three Mile Limit Will Meet Similar Treatment.

Washington, June 21.—Beverage liquors, brought into American territorial waters under foreign government seals, will be seized.

This policy was announced late today at the treasury and when the liner Berengaria docks at New York tomorrow, customs agents will break the British customs seals that guard her beverage liquor stores and take charge of them. Any other attempts to bring intoxicating beverages inside the three-mile limit, it was declared, will be dealt with in the same fashion.

Announcement of the treasury's determination to stand pat on its regulations, issued to carry out the recent supreme court ship liquor decision was made after a day of conferences between Secretary Mellon and his advisers and officials of the state department. It came after Mr. Mellon had made it known that the decision of the treasury would remain confidential until an occasion arose requiring action. It was nevertheless made clear that the decision was unqualified and positive.

The procedure to be followed in the case of the Berengaria, and it is assumed in respect to other ships making like efforts to retain beverage liquors sufficient for homeward voyages, provides for the seizure of sealed stores, their transfer to bonded warehouses, and the issuing of receipts to masters of the vessels involved. No trouble is anticipated, for, in the cases of the Berengaria and the liner Olympic, which is now on the seas bound for New York, the American agents of the lines operating the vessels have been fully informed what the treasury intends to do.

Assistant Collector Stuart of the port of New York conferred with the liner agents today and advised Assistant Secretary Moss of the treasury by telephone that each shipping representative will file a formal protest against the American government's action as soon as it is taken. Such protests, in the natural course, will be forwarded to Washington, for consideration. Neither Mr. Mellon nor Mr. Moss would discuss possible action by the treasury on the protests, the former explaining that such a course was the obvious one for the shipping companies to take under the circumstances.

The treasury was left no alternative in deciding what to do, it was stated officially, although earlier in the day Secretary Mellon had said he regarded as a grave question the right of this government to break the official seal of a foreign power. The secretary, however, explained that he was not a lawyer and would necessarily have to seek legal advice on that phase. He was informed, however, by advisers in his own department that the seals did not constitute a bar to the seizure of commodities held contraband of American law.

Mr. Mellon in making known the department's [illegible] ence with Secretary [illegible] treasury felt certain [illegible] and proposed to [illegible] supreme court's [illegible] eighteenth amendment [illegible] stead law.

There were some [illegible] the seizure of the [illegible] be made the occasion for [illegible] test but these were [illegible] the treasury, where it was expressed that [illegible] seen for court action [illegible] that if any legal [illegible] will be predicated [illegible] ury's administrative [illegible] will hardly embrace [illegible] law itself. SEIZURE OF LIQUOR WILL FORM TEST CASE

New York, June 21.—[illegible] treasury officials revealed [illegible] today when informed that [illegible] Mellon had authorized [illegible] all liquor brought into [illegible] ters, even though made [illegible] foreign ships. Instructions [illegible] received from Washington, [illegible] ported, to make no [illegible] anything dealing with the [illegible] liquor on foreign vessels.

The seizure of liquor [illegible] rengaria, due tomorrow [illegible] would be made by treasury [illegible] it was said, following the [illegible] established several months [illegible] liquor on the French liner [illegible] accounted for on the ship's manifest was taken. Prohibition agents, said, would not be used in [illegible] ures.

Although the reports from [illegible] ington and Assistant Collector [illegible] of New York would direct [illegible] ure on the Berengaria, [illegible] ed out that [illegible] will [illegible] charge of special agents of the [illegible] ury department here and would [illegible] the work. The liquor would [illegible] seized and deposited under bond, it was said, with an interference in the operation of the liner.

Earlier, Sir Ashley Sparks, president director of the Cunard line, said he understood all of the foreign steamships, including Cunarders, were putting out for America with limited supplies of liquor for their own consumption, sealed by customs and excise authorities of their respective governments.

The Berengaria seizure, it was said, would take the form of a test case and all foreign ships would continue with their liquor stores pending decision on the case.

WANTON TREATMENT BY POLICEMEN IN NEW YORK

New York, June 21.—On the eve of a grand jury investigation of charges that two detectives, Martin Price and James Butler, without provocation brutally beat a number of World war veterans last week, District Attorney Banton received tonight from Assemblyman Cuvillier information of four more alleged instances of police wantonness.

Mr. Cuvillier now is defending a suit brought by Police Commissioner Enright charging that the assemblyman libelled him when he made wholesale charges of graft and dereliction of duty against the police several months ago.

In his letter to Mr. Banton today, Mr. Cuvillier said he had been informed that Patrolman Van Sweet of the 32nd street station recently broke an arm of a 12-year-old boy whom he was beating with a night stick because the boy was playing in the street.

He suggested that Mr. Banton investigate the story of a burglar arrested ten days ago, who was taken to the 69th street police station apparently in ordinary health and left it three hours later in a hearse, having died in the police station for causes of which I do not know."

The third case he cited was a Civil war veteran "who while in an intoxicated condition on Tuesday last wandered into a garage near First avenue and 91st street; two detectives filling the tank of their car with water turned their Rome on him and when he protested one of them struck him in the jaw."

The last instance was of a negro elevator boy in an Amsterdam avenue apartment house, who, when he denied detectives' allegations of robbery, was taken into the cellar and "beaten up and two of his teeth knocked out."

FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE

Lawrence, Mass., June 21.—Cyrille Vandenhecke was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury in the superior court here today. The jury was out three hours. District Attorney William G. Clark announced that he would move for sentence next week.

Vandenhecke was charged with the murder in August, 1918, of Gideon Schureman of this city. Schureman was found with two bullets in his body. Vandenhecke after the shooting returned to Belgium, his native country, later going to Canada. He was arrested in Renfrew, Ontario, last February.

The state charged that the shooting resulted from Vandenhecke's alleged intimacy with Schureman's wife. At the trial Mrs. Schureman testified that she had gone to Philadelphia with Vandenhecke because he had threatened to kill her if she refused. She returned to her husband later.

Vandenhecke, taking the stand in his own defense, said he had gone to Schuremann's home to get some clothing belonging to him and Schuremann fired at him, one bullet wounding him in the leg. There followed a tussle, the defendant testified, of which he had no recollection. He said that when his memory returned he was on the high season bound for Belgium.

LARGE CLASS GRADUATED FROM NORMAL SCHOOL

Willimantic, June 8.—The graduating exercises of the Willimantic State Normal school were held in Windham Hall this forenoon, Thursday afternoon at half past 2.

A large number of relatives and friends were on the grounds to attend the exercises. The programme was short but most interesting and pleasing except for the fact that the graduates had been told to be present at Windham Hall at 10 o'clock. However, the testimony of one of the witnesses showed that the order had been modified thus making the time 2 o'clock instead 10. The exercises was then continued until Saturday, June 24, in order to allow time to find out what the properties had to say on the matter.

Impressive graduation exercises were held in the high school Thursday evening, when the class of 1923 of Windham High school were awarded their diplomas. The stage was decorated in the class colors of black and gold and the class motto, "Esse Quam Videre," was also in evidence. The large attendance was comfortable in the large assembly hall which was fanned with a light breeze.

For the first time in many years a change was made in the directorship of the school orchestra, the position being conferred upon Ralph H. Gibson, who succeeded H. C. Helmold. Mr. Gibson, who graduated from Windham High school two years ago, has always been prominently connected with the orchestra of the school and is an accomplished violinist, although only 19 years of age.

Following is the program: Crickets' Serenade, Bendix; The Magpie and the Parrot, Bendix; Commencement Grand March, Hudson, by the orchestra, R. H. Gibson, director; To Greet the Spring, Mendelssohn, high school chorus of 150 voices, C. H. Caswell, director; The Relation of the United States to Europe, Reuben Rothblatt; My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land, Edward Elgar, sung by the Girls' Glee club of 44 voices; Responsoity in Business, Marguerite Trud; Gavotte Moderne, Severn, by the orchestra; Paean to Summer, F. von Suppe, and Fairies, Mattei, by the Girls' Glee club; Come Where the Fields Are Beaming, Kinkel, sung by the High school chorus; Shall America Join a World Court? Christopher Case; class song, words by Marian Taft; presentation of diplomas by Dr. F. H. Guild, chairman of school committee; Alma Mater, words by H. J. Fenton, '94; March, Forde, by the orchestra.

Commencement Grand March is a most beautiful march, having tendencies appropriate with the spirit of commencement exercises.

The class song, the words for which were written by Miss Marian Taft, is one which is unusual in theme and is loaded with beautiful depictions. The entire song strays away from the ordinary class song words, it being in the form of an allegory. The child leaving his classmates and singing his Alma Mater is referred to as the ship at sea, with its dangers and its fears.

Much of the success of the program is due to Director C. H. Caswell, who labored so untiringly for its arrangement.

Change of Life Often Causes High Blood Pressure

Women between the ages of 40 to 50 undergo a great change that causes a disturbance of all the vital organs. Under this condition waste matter that ordinarily passes out of the body is absorbed into the blood poisoning the system generally. Many women during this trying period become victims of High Blood Pressure. Dizziness, nervousness, hot flashes, palpitation of the heart, oppressive fullness in the chest and labored breathing on slight exertion are among the first indications of high blood pressure. If unheeded, the whole system loses tone, one's life is shortened and there is danger that death may come suddenly through apoplexy.

High blood pressure is in itself an indication that the body is clogged and choked with poisonous wastes. Before relief can be had these wastes must be eliminated.

A well-known physician working for years finally discovered a harmless formula that assists Nature in driving out these poisons. With the poison gone the blood pressure is reduced quickly and a general feeling of well being is experienced almost immediately.

This physician's treatment has been so universally successful that it has now been put up in convenient tablet form under the name Bi-o-lin, and is sold by all good druggists with a guarantee to return your full purchase price if the very first bottle does not give you wonderful relief. Rid yourself of these distressing symptoms now. Don't wait. Delay may be fatal. Get the Bi-o-lin prescription today from any good druggist.

Wolves Revered by Indians.

Wolves, up to recent times, were never killed by Indians, as, according to their belief, the spirits of the departed inhabited the bodies of the wolves. When they came too close to the camp the Indians would throw a firebrand or rock at them, and would use a ride only if the dogs were attacked or a child was in danger, if the wolf was killed, the ride was considered useless afterward and thrown away.

Shark Fins as a Delicacy.

The shark carries a delicacy for the Oriental, certain of the fins. These are stripped of the flesh and dried. Later the cartilaginous substance of the "rays" of the fins are separated, soaked in water, and cut up for use in soup. In Hongkong restaurants charge as much as $2.50 paid for a cup of soup made from the fin-class fish.

Hearts Aflame, at the Broadway Theatre

Reginald Barker's latest production, Hearts Aflame, was seen for the first time yesterday at the Broadway theatre, where it more than lived up to the unusually high hopes entertained for it. It proved to be a thrilling photoplay, telling a good story, and with episodes that should remain remembered for a long time by those who see it.

Of course the big thing is the amazing forest fire. Nothing of its kind has ever been done before; it stands alone, and will for a long time, as an example of remarkable directorial craftsmanship as well as superlative photography. Barker has produced an episode that cannot be easily duplicated; and his remarkable achievement, won the applause of the huge crowds which seemed to enjoy it thoroughly.

Nor has the director been satisfied to confine his activity to this one thrill, he has provided two more equally impressive, for the delectation of the theatre-goer. There is the blowing up of an entire hillside, in an attempt to stave the progress of the fire; and the spectacle of thousands of logs, floating down a river, after a dam had been wrecked, is one not soon to be forgotten.

The story that provides for these thrilling situations is Harold Titus' novel, "Timber." It is concerned with the Michigan woods, and the characters that are presented in it are drawn with amazing fidelity. There has been no compromise for the sake of beauty; although there have been few scenes more beautiful than the flaming forest, primeval, in its natural coloring.

"Hearts Aflame" was produced for Louis B. Mayer. The scenario was written by J. G. Hawks and L. G. Wilby. Percy Hilburn was chief photographer and Walter Mann assistant director.

The Camco comedy, "Family Trouble" was very funny. A new closed the bill.

Broad Theatre

William Russell will be seen in a story of small-town politics and big-town romance at the Broad theatre today and Saturday, when the William Fox production "Mixed Faces" will be the featured picture.

Renee Adoree, the dainty and beautiful little leading woman, who was fame in Paris before coming to this country, plays opposite the star. Others in the cast include Harvey Clark, who has been appearing in pictures since the old Biograph days, Hazel Keston and Eliser Cunning.

The theme of the story is based on the remarkable resemblance of Jimmy Gilligan and Judge Granger, who is running for mayor of a small town on the reform ticket.

The trouble that ensues when the judge's political opponents hire Jimmy to pose as the mayoralty candidate and address a mass meeting of the of the latter's constituents, all reform workers, creates entertainment aplenty, according to all advance reports. Jimmy addresses the meeting and comes out for an open town, which throws the gathering into an uproar.

But what follows that, when the judge's fiancee mistakes the likable Jimmy for her husband-to-be, and falls in love with him changed manner, will give pleasure patrons a new type of amusement, from all indications.

Clown Interprets Circus Phrases

For generations, people not familiar with the technicalities of a large circus, have said that circus folks speak a language all their own. Much like every other business, the circus has many phrases of unique, slang exclusively applicable to the town affairs. Pete Mardo, a prominent clown with the Sparks circus, which will exhibit in Norwich next Tuesday, who has had long experience as a circus performer has compiled a glossary of circus terms.

"To those 'on the outside' on the tented world these phrases may be interesting and a few of the most common of them, together with their meanings are given as follows:

"The governor, the press proprietor; ...kers, performers; ...hammers; ...hustling; ...ter keys; ...trained; punks, youngsters; ...s, elephants; cats, lions and other small animals of the feline tribe; ...ns, clowns; big show, side show, ...ment drivers; big top, main canvas tent; chewwagon, the ticket wagon; lemonade, ...quests, locals, ...passes; the trick, the entire show; the ...s, where show is unloaded; a buster, an accident; mailing, ...; ...hold top of seats; paper, ...; band wagon; ...; ...; ...

YALE FAVORITE TO WIN OVER HARVARD IN ROWING CLASSIC THIS AFTERNOON

New London, June 22.—(By the A. P.)—Rowing rivalry that has extended 50 odd more than half a century of historic competition will be renewed tomorrow when the crews of Harvard and Yale match speed and endurance over the picturesque Thames river course in their 56th annual regatta.

Three races are on the regatta program, the freshman and junior varsity eights racing over the upper two mile course in the morning while the varsity boats will contest for supremacy in the long four mile pull in the evening.

Major interest, of course, is centered in the varsity struggle and tonight Yale, for the first time in three years, ruled a strong favorite over its crimson rival in this blue ribbon classic of American rowing, the most gruelling of all present day tests of oarsmanship.

Perhaps the blue might prefer to be otherwise than the favorite, for it was triumphed for the past two years when second choice, but there is no lack of confidence in the Eli camp on this account.

Ed Leader, Miracle Man

The New Haven crew—home bred and home taught by Ed Leader, young University of Washington product, who has achieved something of a rowing miracle in his first year as Eli coach—faces its big test with a clean slate. The blue proved itself virtually invincible this season at lesser distances, conquering Cornell, Princeton, Columbia and Pennsylvania in two triangular regattas in these contests, Yale demonstrated that it had speed and racing courage and since it has been training for the longer pull the crew has satisfied experts that it also possesses the requisite stamina.

Yale Has Made Fast Time

Reports of phenomenal time trials have helped largely to boost Yale's stock among rowing men. While secrecy for the most part has surrounded the Eli training quarters at Gales Ferry, reliable sources have vouched for several remarkable practice performances, one crediting the blue with covering the four mile course in 20 minutes, 3 seconds, but one second slower than the Thames river record established by Harvard in 1916.

Old Yale men, enthusiastic over this year's rowing achievements, see in the possibilities of victory tomorrow a return under Leader's regime to the long sweep of Bob Cooke, the first mentor to establish Eli supremacy on the water.

Harvard Hoping for the Best

Harvard, as Yale did last season, hopes for a victory tomorrow that will redeem a year of rowing disappointments. The Crimson has been beaten in every start so far, losing to the Navy, Princeton and Cornell. But with its faults apparent Head Coach Frank Muller, who like Leader also is in his first year at the helm of Cambridge rowing has produced steady improvement, in the opinion of those who have closely watched the crimson at Red Top. Muller himself admits that his 'varsity is "lengths better" than when it was beaten earlier in the season.

The fact that past performances have proved valueless as a barometer when Harvard and Yale meet has served to encourage crimson supporters. They point out that time trials have been worked in practice by a crew that trailed dismally in the race. Then too, what Yale accomplished in 1921, and 1923 may be repeated by Harvard, they declare.

Both Crews On Edge

Both 'varsity eights were declared by their coaches tonight to be on edge. Today was occupied with practice of starts under the direction of W. A. Meikleham, of New York, the referee and short exercise spins.

New London, meanwhile, has taken on the holiday appearance that always attends Harvard-Yale regattas. Hundreds of enthusiasts, sweltering under a broiling sun, arrived throughout the day by automobile, train and boat. Myriad pleasure craft added to the picturesque river scene. Continuance of fair and warm weather was predicted for regatta day.

GREB-SMITH BOUT MAY BE PREVENTED

Atlanta, Ga., June 21.—Three legal ways in which the Harry Greb-Jeff Smith boxing match scheduled for July 11 may be stopped were presented to Governor Hardwick today by Attorney General George Napier. The governor requested this information after receiving a statement issued by J. Edgar Masters, grand exalted ruler of the Elks, expressing opposition to any prize fight during the national convention July 9-14.

The attorney general suggests injunction proceedings, prevention of the fight by county authorities, or action by the legislature, which convenes two weeks before the date set for the bout.

The promoters planned to stage the show just outside the city limits, an ordinance preventing it being held in Atlanta.

SWANEES TAKE MEASURE OF EAST END TEAM IN CLOSE TWILIGHT GAME

George Farrell's Swanees had the better of an eight-inning battle over the East Ends Thursday night at the Fairgrounds and came out of the fray with a 4 to 3 victory tucked under their belt. The Swanees played the best game of any since the league started and gave Tennant the best of support. Tennant pitched a brand of ball that had the East Ends completely bewildered and the few times they did hit the ball sensational stops by the Swanees cut them down.

The East Ends played a good game but errors at critical times gave the Swanees the advantage. Harris pitched for the East Siders and had a large number of strike outs to his credit but hits with men on bases beat him. He had one bad inning, the sixth, when the Swanees bunched hits behind errors for two runs and the game.

The Duwells were at the game en masse rooting for the representative team of the East Side and were conspicuous for their generosity when Manager Farrell passed the hat. It is rumored that the Duwells have retired from the league leaving the East Side representation to the East Ends. Who the Duwells, made strenuous protest against at the beginning of the league. The score by innings:

Tonight's Game

The game tonight will be between the Professional Men and the Whirlwinds. This game is advanced from the 27th by the consent of the managers. The Professional Men have lost only one game and the Whirlwinds have yet to be beaten so this game should prove one of the most interesting of the series. Should the Professionals win they stand an excellent chance for the league pennant.

There is no evidence that a pharmacist, as now known, existed in America preceding the Revolution. The first American pharmacopoeia was issued in 1778 by William Brown at Lancaster, Pa. It was a little work of 32 pages for the use of the military hospital of Washington's army.

Falsehood's Many Faces.

Eskimo Houses.

The dwellings of the Eskimos are of two kinds: In summer they live in tents, or tupiks, made of sealskin; in winter they live in igloos. Some are built of stone, chinked and covered with moss and banked with snow. Some are made of wood, and some are made of blocks of hard-packed snow.

Bird Well Named.

We are told that Pliny named the ptarmigan Lagopus owing, it is thought, to the close resemblance of the bird's feet to the feet of the hare; the legs being thickly covered with short feathers right to the very claws. This thick, warm clothing of the legs increased in winter, is in direct adaptation to the need of a bird, most of whose life is spent on mountain snow field or cold plains.

THE PRESIDENT ON THE COURT

In making the first speech on his trip to Alaska President Harding dwelt upon the permanent court of international justice and in view of those who have spoken at St. Louis against it it was a fitting place to do so.

In advocating the joining of the court by this country the president made the most of the opportunity to state that he was as strongly opposed to the league of nations as ever and he was confident in his belief that the country is of the same mind. As for the court he does not condemn it because it was started by the league. He sees in it what is good for the world and this country, what is for peace and against war and he put forth suggestions that would if adopted lift it away from league influence of any kind.

Two coditions of our participation he set forth must be that it is a world court and not a league court and that the United States shall occupy a place of perfect equality with every other nation.

The president took occasion to restate his position on the league and for the purpose of getting a world court and not a league court suggests that the court be made self perpetuating without interposition from any other body, or by continuing the authority of the permanent court of arbitration to nominate, and transfer the power to elect from the council and assembly of the league to the members of the court of justice.

President Harding showed his conviction as to the character of the court, and he at the same time made it clear that in joining the court he would give full support to the idea of adequate protective reservations, but he was also emphatic upon the point that he did not insist upon his method being adopted as the only possible one, or that it must be his way or nothing.

The outstanding feature of his address was that we should be a member of the court, that it could be accomplished and that in his opinion the other countries would entertain the suggestions offered without resentment considering the high purposes for which they were made. The address set forth certain views which may have been the basis for the statements that have been made by others in the past several weeks to the effect that there would be no split on the question of joining the world court.

THE FRESH AIR FUNDS.

If there has been no weather up to this time this season to cause sufficient thought to be directed toward the many fresh air funds that are always raised each year, that of the present week has changed the tide of thought.

Many have been the reflections that if it is so hot as this in roomy homes, on spacious piazzas or in elevated ground it must be next to unbearable in the crowded tenement house sections of the bigger and the biggest cities.

Such views are unquestionably right. It is in those small, poorly ventilated, crowded and stifling tenement house districts that unknown conditions prevail. They are driven to the roofs, the sidewalks, the fire escapes, the alleys to get the semblance of anything less than torrid heat. It requires experience under these conditions to know just what the situation is, or observance of the sufferings to appreciate what the summer months mean to such people as are obliged to live there and have no means of obtaining relief.

It is for the purpose of dealing with such conditions, affording a bit of comfort and doing something in behalf of better health, that the fresh air funds are raised. Some may do more than others but they all have their work cut out and serve their particular purposes provided they are under good management.

A visit in the country, such as is provided for in many instances, is a wonderful experience. It means a closure from the hum-drum life of the big city streets and alleys, a chance to get the benefit of good air, rest and sleep, which are difficult enough under ordinary conditions but next to impossible during the heated term.

BAD PRACTICE.

Whatever be the desire for publicity that prompts certain individuals to offer glaring falsehoods concerning certain mysteries, there cannot fail to be a feeling of indignation at such acts and demands for the administration of proper punishment.

Much interest has been manifested in connection with the disappearance and death of Leighton Mount the Northwestern university student, whose body was found under a pier at Waukegan, Ill., lake front. A [illegible] has pretended to have [illegible] the circumstances. Just [illegible] every player in [illegible] fury that it was a [illegible] there is no way of [illegible] is now [illegible] his story [illegible]

Further test to intercept [illegible] they guess and speaking of [illegible] who will put little [illegible] ...ter to find prayer [illegible] the hands of the messengers if there were such, and at best they only would postpone and place obstacles in the way of finding the guilty.

If such individuals are weak minded, or if they are practical jokers, they deserve to receive the attention of the authorities. There should be sufficient law to cover such cases. Every penny of them are inspired by what others have done in the same way there is no way of telling, but an effective way of putting a stop to such dangerous work is to give them a taste of the punishment that is possible. Should it be a case that they are weak mentally and are prompted to such acts because there of, it doesn't appear that they should be turned loose on the public to do their worst and to inspire others by comment false tales or send the authorities on wild goose chases. Such publicity stunts deserve to be promptly checked.

HEADED FOR A TEST.

The ruling by Secretary Mellon to the effect that all beverage liquor brought within the three-mile limit of this country is in violation of the laws of the United States and orders to the effect that all such liquor be seized brings to a head this question of the Volstead act within the territorial limit.

It is a ruling that comes not before but after a decision of the United States supreme court. If the beverage liquors of foreign ships are seized, even though they are under seal, it will mean that a test case will be made of the matter and another feature of the case will find its way to the highest court of the country.

It has been contended, however, that it was not the intention of congress that the law should apply to foreign vessels and that the enforcement of it to the territorial limit on the water was not planned. That being so congress will have an opportunity to speak for itself. Its action has been interpreted and now if there are changes to be made in that action it remains for congress to do it. No one else has the authority.

Seizure of beverage liquor on foreign ships will permit of a test case being started. There seems to be little likelihood that any final decision on such a test could be obtained before congress has a chance to act if it desires to and make modifications that will undoubtedly insure respect for prohibition within the three-mile limit. There is the possibility, however, that some lower court might be found to act on some phase of the matter in such a way as to upset the ruling but the secretary of the treasury is being guided by the law as it stands and not by what some might think it ought to be.

PENNSYLVANIA'S FIGHT.

A situation has arisen in Pennsylvania not so different from that which has frequently developed in other states. It is a case where the legislature has passed certain legislation but has neglected or refused to provide for the necessary appropriation to carry it out. In this instance it is refusal, and the legislation concerns the strict enforcement of prohibition as urged by the governor.

Without the funds needed to get the enforcement it was figured that the governor's hands will be tied, but supporters of the governor's attitude and those who are lined up at all times in behalf of prohibition have hit upon the idea of raising the necessary funds.

That presents a new phase and the question arises as to whether the state can accept such funds. According to its attorney general it can and that means the opening not only of an active campaign for the raising of such money but a renewed fight against prohibition in that state, for the resort to this method of getting over the obstacle which the legislature thought it had placed in the way, bids fair to furnish the basis for a bitter struggle.

It will mean the utilization of private funds for the performance of a public duty. The W. C. T. U. has offered to raise the quarter of a million in the interest of law and order. Instead of winking at the dry law enforcement such as will be admitted to be enforcement is the plan. The legislature at least seems to have been caught at its own game, and yet if remains to be seen whether Pennsylvania can give such an exhibition of enforcement as the governor might be proud of.

The Book of Daniel.

Mr. Editor: The book of Daniel has always been an interesting study to me, and as I more and more understand its great truths, which are a type of things being worked out now in our day; I wonder if there are many who see as I do the fulfilling of this prophecy? Daniel was a young Israelite taken captive to Babylon with others and later became God's prophet. King Nebuchadnezzar had an impressive dream which on waking he could not recall. His "Wise Men," could not help him. Finally Daniel, guided by the Lord, told both the dream and its interpretation, Dan. 2:1, 5, 26-36. The dream and its interpretation interests and concerns us today as much or more than it did Nebuchadnezzar. In his dream the king saw a great image: its head was gold, its breast and arms silver, its belly and sides brass, its legs iron, and its feet iron mingled with clay. Then the king saw a stone cut out of the mountain without hands and hurled at the feet of the image. The image fell, ground to powder, and the wind carried it away. Then the stone grew until it filled the whole earth. Dan. 2:31-35.

The divine interpretation of the dream, given through Daniel, explains that the head of the image was the Babylonian kingdom, the breast and arms the succeeding Medo-Persian empire, the belly and sides of brass the Grecian empire, which followed, and the legs the succeeding Roman empire. The feet represented the "Holy Roman empire" and its successors: the iron of the feet the civil power, the clay intermingled and smearing over the iron pictured the ecclesiastical power of our day. Thus men, we are living in the days of the ten toes, or divisions of the image. The stone represents God's Kingdom, which the clay on the feet of the image imitated. The stone represents God's elect church, gathered out from Jews and Gentiles, and from every nation and denomination, to constitute Messiah's kingdom. Shortly this kingdom will be established in power and great glory, and the kingdoms of this world will disappear as if by magic. Messiah's Kingdom will then grow until it fills the whole earth and brings ill things under its control, every willful sinner being cut off in the second death. (Everlasting destruction of which fire and brimstone are a type.) Rev. 21:8. Even death and hell (the grave) are to be destroyed in this way. Rev. 20:14. (Indifference to time prophecies is clear evidence of lukewarmness. See Rev. 4:16, and especially Luke 19:44.)

BE LOYAL!

Be loyal to God and your country,
To your innermost self be true,
But don't forget there's another debt,
To the Boss be loyal, too!

He has paid for your time and your labors,
You have given your promise to work;
It's up to you to be honest, true,
And it's hardly the square thing to shirk.

It is easy to knock down the minutes,
To clip off an hour here and there,
And none may know you are doing so,
But ask yourself now, is it fair?

He has taken you on as his servent—
Stenographer, bookkeeper, clerk—
He expects from you what you're paid to do—
To be loyal to him and to work.

Would you cheat playing cards, dice, or checkers,
Deceive any man in a game;
In a moment rash steal jewels or cash
And think you were never to blame?

Most certainly not! You'd assure us,
You're honest, you'd pridefully say;
Yet men like you who boast proudly too,
Will go down the boss every day.

It's cowardly, despicable, yellow,
To your innermost self be true,
But don't forget there's another debt,
To the Boss be loyal, too!

CONCENTRATING POWER.

"When are you going to get a new suit?" remarked one of the [illegible] with whom I was lunching [illegible] "I am [illegible] with your appearance [illegible] my boys are [illegible] and I am [illegible] and you look all right [illegible] I am going to get a new suit [illegible] Saturday. [illegible] the boss wants to [illegible] and he is [illegible] to [illegible] ...ness and [illegible] business because the buyer hasn't got a white collar on inside his coat or wears a derby hat."

"Of course he may be well breshed and courteous young man and yet have do without a stout whalebone brush and toothbrush, and I thoroughly brush this suit every morning in order to be an example to the punch in my office. There is a fine distinction between a well-brushed shabby suit and a dusty ready-to-wear web of clothes, to which I would invite your attention.

"Besides, I am comfortable in this suit. It fits every bump and curve of my form and I can dismiss it from my mind the moment I am inside it, where as the weather of a new suit is a constant annoyance and distraction. No matter how much you have paid for your suit, no matter whether the tailor is the kind that gives you appointments with the air of King George handing out a knighthood, the minute a man slumps into his easy chair and the vest of that suit tickles his chin and his family is going to yell at him to pull down his vest forseven's sake and why can't he wear clothes stylish like other men.

"I do wish," says his wife peevishly, "that you would stop that silly habit of jamming your hands into your pants pockets the minute you get a new suit on and wrenching your coat back that way! Just look at the way its edges are all rolled under this minute!"

"In order to escape all this criticism and irritating espionage and thus leave my mind free for weighty matters such as how can I pay the coal bill or what to do to secure that contract, I refuse to be hampered by clothes. In this suit I can forget myself. I have looked at myself in it in the glass so often that I have become hardened—ossified, I might say—to the sight and it doesn't disturb me any more than a bunch on the end of his nose disturbs a man who has become resigned to it and thus totally oblivious. I can wear this suit all winter!"

"Well," his wife said him with a glint of triumph in her eye, "I was sure you'd act like this, Archibald—so today I phoned your tailor to cut out a suit of that imported cloth you always choose and he said you could have a fitting Thursday at 3 o'clock! Don't forget it!"

"If Benedict Arnold had done a thing like that they would have hanged him twice!" declared the busy business man in startled dismay. "Men haven't a lick of a chance so long as there are women on earth, I'm telling you!"—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

News of the secret marriage of Richard N. Pettigrew, the aged ex-senator of South Dakota, has served to recall one whose name has not appeared on the front page much in late years, but who in the 90s was nationally prominent as a leader in the radical Populist element. Brought up in the republican party, and affiliated with it during all of his earlier political career, Mr. Pettigrew left it in 1896 and supported Mr. Bryan in that campaign, and again in 1900. In 1898-99 he became one of the most pronounced opponents of the acquisition and retention of the Philippines by the United States, and ran counter to public opinion by the comfort he gave to the "anti-imperialists," as they were called. The senator is a Vermont-born pioneer, who, after getting his collegiate training in Wisconsin, settled in Dakota, at a time when it was a territory, helped to frame its state constitution, and then went to Washington to represent the state, first in the house of representatives and later in the senate.

Wives of Famous Men

Anne, Wife of Wendell Phillips.

"Everything that I am I owe to my wife." There is no actual record that these words were said by Wendell Phillips, great orator and champion of the black race, of Anne Terry Greene, the slender, frail, aristocratic girl who married him and filled him with a burning determination to free every slave in America. Yet it was Miss Greene who changed him from a mildly "conscientious objector" to an inspired fighter in the cause of liberty.

Phillips, a high-born, well-educated Boston gentleman, engaged in the practice of law, first met Miss Greene a little while after the mobbing of Garrison near the Liberator office in Boston. Anne Greene, an ardent abolitionist, although a wealthy property owner, struck Wendell Phillips as rather strange. But he gave little thought to the matter until several weeks later when, having occasion to visit Greenfield on business, he met Miss Greene, who with friends was also going to Greenfield.

The two-day journey was made together. At first the four young people were very gay. After a time, however, Anne managed to bring the conversation around to abolition. During that jolting stage coach ride she talked so earnestly so inspiredly, that she made of Wendell Phillips a blazing soldier of freedom.

In October, 1837, they were married. Boston in those days frowned down upon abolitionists. Phillips found that his law practice, because of his newly acquired views, was approaching zero. But they had enough money for their comfort, they had their great love, they had their cause, so the world was well lost.

All America knows that Wendell Phillips rode to fame on the crest of his great speech on the Lovejoy mobbing. But all the world does not know that it was Anne Phillips who not only inspired that speech but also incited her husband to make it.

Some Suggestions Anyway.

After the commencement season is over we shall know a great deal more of the advisability of entering the World Court, possibly.

Folks say: "Never knew a player-piano could be played like that!"

Stories That Recall Others

Understanding Dimmed.

An intoxicated man was ejected from a motion picture house. The manager accompanied him to the door. "Don't you ever come into this theater again in this condition," the manager said.

The intoxicated man bowed to the ground in a pompous, reflective way, and then asked, hesitatingly, "Those conditions?"

Ann Wondered.

Ann, aged four, was shopping with her mother for a pair of shoes. The obliging clerk had brought out three or four pairs and Ann had duly tried on one shoe of each pair. Finally her mother decided on the pair she wished and told the clerk she would take them. As the clerk started away Ann called out:

"Mother, don't we get two?"

Thrift Teaching.

With almost regular frequency one reads in the newspapers of the heavy losses of funds sustained by large numbers of persons who have not been prudent in the administration of their personal affairs.

More and more events emphasize the greater need of thrift education. Our public losses through various varieties of fraud reach high into the hundreds of millions of dollars each year. These figures do not include those instances of losses where the victims have, with open eyes, assumed a reasonable chance of loss. The stupendous sums referred to represent only such losses as are incurred in schemes where the whole plan was nothing better than a swindling process.

While the courts eventually administer punishment to those engaged in these nefarious pursuits the only eventual remedy for the economic malady lies in education.

To begin with there should be a broader ground work of thrift taught in our public and private schools. This is a question that has been discussed by educational bodies for many years. In August, 1916 the National Education Association, while in session in Oakland, Cal., took official notice. Since that time this national body of educators has considered the matter of thrift education, and in many parts of the country thrift has been included in the curriculum.

But education in thrift still lacks effectiveness.

Thrift should be encouraged continuously, not intermittently. In our schools and Sunday schools, in our churches, theatres, business houses, newspapers and through every other possible medium, interesting and appropriate encouragement to thrift should be given.

That these things are done, [illegible] financial losses sustained by those who have not yet learned that money making is a steady, methodical process, which cannot be counterfeited by waving of a magic wand.—American Society for Thrift.

A feature of a recent musical festival in London was the singing by combined choirs from the mothers' clubs of the metropolis, many of the choristers being more than seventy years old.

ALEX PASNIK ANSWERING HIS FATHER'S CALL

Alex Pasnik, the enterprising Main street merchant, is to answer the call of filial duty and has completed plans to visit his father in Poland, following the receipt of a postal card a week ago from his father with the brief message: "I want to see you. It may be the last time."

From previous letters Mr. Pasnik had known that his father's health was failing, so that when the postal card came he at once made preparations to drop all his business activities in order to hasten to see his father in Poland.

He was fortunately able to arrange for passports and the necessary Polish, Belgian, French and English vises. Then it was a question of steamer passage, but this difficulty was smoothed out in New York where he saw an employe of the Cunard line who was reminded that it was largely through the efforts of Mr. Pasnik that a large sum was raised for the widows and orphans of sailors, when the Norwich man was a passenger on the steamship Berengaria on a trip across two years ago. Accommodations, first class ticket, were found for him on the Berengaria's trip leaving New York next Tuesday.

While he is away, Mr. Pasnik has plabed his extensive business connection in four stores, new building operations and his patent salt-cellar in charge of James B. Jones.

Thursday evening at the Venice, members of Rose of New England lodge, No. 898, B'nai Brith, gave Mr. Pasnik a farewell send-off in which they expressed their heartfelt admiration of response to his father's call and their good wishes for his trip. Those present were Max Hanover, M. Sussman, A. W. Silverberg, Dr. P. A. Schwartz, Max Rabinovitch, Hyman Schwartz, A. Abelman, Samuel Abelman, Charles Jacobson, Josiah Greenstein, Harry Dworski, A. H. Manes, Abner Schwartz and James B. Jones.

LAW OBSERVANCE LEAGUE SPEAKER AT CHRIST CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Empringham who is to speak on behalf of the Law Observance League at the morning service at Christ church on Sunday next has done brilliant, original work as an analytical chemist in Europe before entering the ministry of the church. He is now director of Jumel laboratories for scientific research in New York.

Dr. Empringham has had remarkable success in making clear to the ininitiated the results of modern scientific discoveries in bio-chemistry. Subjects that are usually considered dry and uninteresting are made of absorbing interest by his lucid methods. His exposition of the alcohol problem from the standpoint of an analytical chemist is recognized as one of the most useful contributions to this much amused subject. The subject of Dr. Empringham's address will be The Fallacies of the Prohibitionists, a sermon which has received the fullest commendation of thoughtful prohibitionists everywhere.

APPEAL CLAIMS JURY WAS MOVED BY PREJUDICE AGAINST DEFENDANT

The jury in the suit of Henry Marx against Alex and Bany Lopato, all of this city for $500 damages to the Marx automobile by a collision with the Lopato car at Taftville early on the morning of Sunday, Oct. 29, heard the charge of Judge C. B. Waller in the common pleas court here Thursday morning. In 30 minutes they returned with a verdict for Marx of $450 and costs.

Attorneys for the Lapotas lost no time in filing notice of appeal. Late Thursday afternoon Attorney Roderick M. Douglass for the defendants, with Attorney Aaronson of New Haven, filed their perfected appeal.

Besides alleging that the verdict was excessive and against the law and the evidence, the grounds of appeal claim that the amount of damages in the verdict was illegally and improperly assessed by the jury, that the jury failed to understand and apply the principles of law as given them by the court, and that the verdict against Alex Lopato was given by the jury because of their prejudice against him, wholly disregarding the evidence in the case.

DISAGREEMENT REVEALED IN WOMEN'S FARM MANAGEMENT

Hartford, June 21.—The resignation of Miss Anna M. Petersen, as superintendent of the state farm for women in Lyme, was followed today by an offer of five members of the board of directors to take similar action if Mrs. Helen W. Rogers, of Hamden, would also retire from the board. This would wipe out the entire board except Mrs. Anna Rogers Minor, of Waterford, who is out of the state on a vacation.

The proposal for wholesale resignations was made at a conference which the board of directors and the members of the state department of public welfare had today with Governor Templeton. It brought sharply to a head a serious disagreement which has been brewing in the board of directors of the state farm for women for several months and which resulted in the sudden resignation of Superintendent Peterson, on April 18, news of which leaked out today.

From evidence brought out at the governor's conference it was apparent that the other members of the state farm board felt that Mrs. Rogers was responsible for the resignation of Supt. Petersen, whose loss they appeared to feel keenly. Mrs. Rogers has differed with the rest of the board on several matters of policy.

In several instances it was brought out, Mrs. Rogers without consulting the rest of the board had arranged with delegations of various social workers to visit the farm and make inspections with respect to certain phases in which she was interested. Apparently Superintendent Peterson became uneasy and the uneasiness spread to the majority members of the board who felt that Mrs. Rogers was embarrassing the administration of the institution.

REPORT SPEED LAUNCH EXPLODED IN SOUND

New London, June 21.—It is believed that several bodies were lost in the sound tonight when an unknown speed launch is reported to have exploded off Saybrook Point shortly before 11 o'clock. Dr. Ayres of Glen Cove, Long Island, bound from Glen Cove to New London on the launch Shadow with a party of friends to attend the Yale-Harvard races here tomorrow, reported upon the arrival of his boat in the harbor here that when the Shadow was passing Saybrook he observed a speed boat approaching from the eastward and when a short distance from the Shadow the launch exploded.

Dr. Ayres ordered life boats put out and the crew of that boat made a search in that vicinity for half an hour. They were unable to find any sign of the bodies but did find a quantity of rubbish. Failing to find any sign of bodies the Shadow continued to the harbor here. Dr. Ayres and his party went to the Hotel Griswold. Upon his arrival at the hotel he reported the accident by telephone to the New London police. Inquiry at the office of the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Wrecking company here brought the information that no report of the accident had been received by the company.

All Hands Saved.

Saybrook Point, June 21.—A motor boat was burned at the mouth of the Connecticut river here this afternoon following two explosions on board. All hands were saved by a passing boat and taken to New London. It is not known here who they were or how many were in the party.

MIXED-UP TELEPHONE CALL HAD FIREMEN GUESSING

At 41.20 o'clock Thursday morning the fire department received a telephone call for a supposed fire at 46 Roath street, owned and occupied by William Steinkewicz. Headquarters received the call as coming from 46 Broad street owing to the fact that the person who sent in the telephone summons did not speak plainly. The address as received at the other end was repeated back over the wire and the party at the other end evidently being somewhat excited thought the fireman on the phone said Roath street.

Squad A went to Broad street but as there was no No. 46 immediately got in touch with headquarters and it was learned that the correct address was Roath street. The Greeneville company and Engine No. 3 were despatched to the Roath street address as soon as the correct address was learned and the squad wagon also responded.

When the firemen reached the Roath street house it was learned that there was no fire. A pan of milk placed on the stove had boiled ever and filled the house with smoke, giving the impression that there was a fire.

LOUIS A. FRAZIER HAS THOUGHTS ON HOME TRIP

Chief George Linton of the local police department has received an interesting letter from Louis A. Frazier, formerly of Norwich, who is now located at Pasadena, Cal. Mr. Frazier writes that Pasadena is a very progressive city and that considerable money is being expended to the city attractive.

He expects to return to Norwich a year from this month for a visit of three months.

THURSDAY HEAT MARKS HIGHER THAN WEDNESDAY

Norwich sweltered Thursday with the mercury touching the hundred mark in the shade. The day was one of the hottest June days on record and was about two degrees hotter than Wednesday. The heat was oppressive and there was little or no breeze stirring until early evening when the air cooled off somewhat. About 10.30 o'clock there were signs of a thundershower in the heavens with an occasional flash of lightning, but up to an early hour this (Friday) morning the hoped for shower had not put in an appearance.

In spite of the burning atmosphere of the last two days there have been no heat prostrations in this city as far as can be learned. The Backus hospital reported Thursday night that no cases of heat prostration have been received at that institution.

Mill hands suffered considerably from the heat. At the Airlie mills in Hanover the mercury read 96 in a number of the mill departments. Other mills in this vicinity report abnormally high temperatures. In the fire room of one local plant the temperature Thursday was reported as nearly 120.

In the business center of the village of Baltic the temperature was 100 in the shade Thursday. Wednesday the mercury got only as far as the 98 mark.

Soda fountains and soft drink emporiums did a thriving business all day Thursday and late into the evening. Many Norwich people sought relief from the heat at the beaches and shore resorts. Throughout the evening there was a steady stream of automobiles on the New London turnpike, many motor parties being bound for the shore.

It is alleged that on November 7th, 1922 the parties to the suit agreed on the sale of the farm and the plaintiff paid $100 and was willing to sign a morrgage for the amount of $2,900 but the defendants are said to have declined to dispose of the farm.

DANIELSON

Warden W. A. Burrows is staying out frightfully late at night. This may be violating a confidence and then again it may not, for the reason, as far as is known, has not asked anyone not to say they saw him, so this paper is going ahead and tell about it.

At the outset it may be asserted that there isn't any scandal attached to the affair. Quite the contrary. In these days of streaming traffic and terrific heat one has to select a quiet hour if one wants to do certain things without being called upon to dodge a motor car every fifth of a second or answer foolish questions twice as often. And it is a general known fact that the temperature in hot weather is usually lower once after midnight than it is just after the noon hour.

All of which considered and other things taken into account may have had something to do with the fact that the warden at the hour of 1 A. m. Thursday was out with Ira A. Warren as an assistant painting traffic dandings on the pavement at the junction of Main and Reynolds streets and taking measurements at other points along Main street in the business section where there are intersecting streets.

Mr. Burrows is a worthy warden.

Stripped down for action, he and Mr. Warren were doing a good job when a few people, strolling or riding about rather than go home to bowling rooms for a sleepless night came upon them while they were engaged in their interesting occupation. The incident, however, is illustrative of the interest the warden takes in borough affairs and of his willingness to get right out and hustle in the interest of the community, which pays him not a penny for the public service he is rendering and has so admirably rendered as a member of the court of burgesses for so many years. It is for such reasons that The Bulletin does not hesitate to tell about his playing out so late at night. The public ought to know and the warden on his own account does not indulge in self-laudation.

Once more class day and graduation exercises held the interest of hundreds of Killingly people as the class of 1923 was graduated on Thursday from Killingly High school. Exhaustingly hot weather might have acted as a deterrent in keeping people away from ordinary functions but not so with graduation, which holds for Killingly people an especial charm and for many a recollection of other graduation days when they were members of Killingly High school classes or bound by some close tie to those receiving diplomas. The usual pretty decorations about the stage and other settings of the town hall, where the exercises were held, were much the same this year as at other graduations of recent years.

The program at the class day exercises in the afternoon, those attending being guests of the class and of the faculty, was as follows: Music by the High school orchestra; prayer, Rev. Albert Jepson; music, Daybreak, classes of the school; address of welcome, Richard William Varney, honor essay, Tut-Ankh-Amen's Leap to Fame, Janet Mathews Paine; music, Sleep, Baby Mine; girls' sextette; honor essay, the Girl of Today and Yesterday, Miss Frances Geer; class history, Irma Christine Perry, singing of class song, class of 1923; prophecy, Max Eric Bretschneider; essay, Highways and By-Ways of Windham County, Emily Pike, read by Pauline Remington; music, Who Knows What the Bells Say, school; presentation of gift, Lawrence Edward Kilpatrick; music, Star Spangled Banner, chorus and audience; benediction.

At the graduation exercises in the evening the address was by Rev. N. Masses, D. D. The opening prayer was by Rev. Walter B. Williams and the presentation of diplomas by F. E. Bitgood, member of the town school committee. The exercises closed with the singing of America and benediction.

Scientific course—Max Eric Bretschneider, Lawrence Edward Kilpatrick, Clarence James Koons.

General course — Lauretta Mary Brodeur, Arthur Henry Bryzette, Mildred Gardiner Bumps, Harry Milton Cornell, Susan Verna Hilton, Frank Wallace Kimball, Frances Mary Lannon, Theodore Millahn, Bessie Irene Page, Byron Edgar Parker, Isabella Cecelia Paine, Theodore Abel Reeves, Edward Russell Pinkham, Theodore Oliver Simoneau, Richard William Varney, Waldo Wright Wood.

Once more this time in real earnest—the campaign is on for the removal of a row of shade trees along the southerly side of Davis park in Reynolds street. A petition was in circulation Thursday asking that the selectmen of the town of Killingly call a special town meeting that they may take the necessary action for requesting the state highway commissioner to remove the trees. The petition early Thursday afternoon had been signed by the requisite number of petitioners, so if may be anticipated that this meeting will be warned in the near future.

By those interested in their removal, the trees in question are regarded as a menace to the safety of all motor traffic passing through the narrow section of Reynolds street between Main and Broad street. The question of their removal has been seriously discussed before, but now that they line the side of a street that has become the very mouth of one of the most important trunk line highways in eastern Connecticut—the Danielson-Providence route—always swarming with traffic they are regarded as doubly dangerous and likely to cause automobile accidents in a section where there is constant threat of a serious happening every day of the year. Removal of the trees would permit of widening the street and recurbing it, giving a greater freeway.

Among those who advocate the removal of the trees are many who are great lovers of them, but they feel in this instance that sentiment should give place to practicability. They point too, to the fact that the imposing elms are overshadowing another row of trees, set some score of years ago a few feet within the park purposely to replace those now wanted removed and that the beauty of the street will not be seriously impaired by carrying out the proposed operation. Few people, love trees as they may, will want to accept responsibility of having been a party to opposing removal of the trees if by that action lives are lost sooner or later in motoring accidents that are bound to come if the trees are not taken down. Times have changed. This pretty street once amply accomodated horsedrawn traffic, but as it is it is altogether too narrow for nowadays trucks and heavy pleasure cars to pass each other in real safety. This point is beyond dispute if one cares at all about the principle of safety first.

Announcement was made Thursday that Rev. J. W. Hoch has resigned as pastor of the Baptist church, in which capacity he has served since 1921, being retained here on December 1 of that year. His resignation will become effective September 23 and he will enter Columbia university to continue his studies.

At the Wood home at Main and Academy street Wednesday evening Miss Marion L. Wood, daughter of Mrs. Carrie L. Wood, was united in marriage with Herbert J. Barnett, son of Mrs. Flora L. Barnett, Rev. Walter E. Williams of the Congregational church performed the ceramony. Mr. and Mrs. Barnett left immediately for a motor trip to Canada. They will be away about ten days and will make their home in Danielson.

Byron W. Larkin, only survivor of his family, has sufficiently recovered from an illness that threatened his life and kept him in the Day Kimball hospital for a long time to be discharged from the institution and is visiting here with Percy Hammond.

Arrangements are complete for the shore dinner to be served Sunday at Alexander's lake by King George Jacques for the members of Rev. Daniel Mullan assembly, K. of C., with headquarters in Norwich.

Curling Iron Kills; Simerine Improves It

Many a woman loses the shiny, fluffy and brilliant appearance of her hair through habitual use of the curling iron. Certain it can do the hair no good to dry up its natural oil, singe the life out of it, making it harsh, brittle and dull. And there's no excuse for that, now that it is known what can be accomplished by the simple simerine method. Liquid simerine really preserves the life, lustre and beauty of the hair, and the curliness is perfectly natural looking and more captivating. If you've never tried it, by all means procure a few ounces from your druggist and apply a little with brush just before doing up your hair. Liquid simerine is neither sticky nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use.

PUTNAM

One more class of graduates of Putnam high school received their diplomas at Thursday evening's commencement exercises in the Bradley theatre and, after this evening's class reception, will join the ever increasing throng of alumni who have gone out into the world to test themselves against its prospects—its chances of achievement and its dangers of defeat.

There was for many who sat through the exercises much that was impressive in the graduation of the class of 1923—one of the largest classes in the history of the institution. Predominating was the thought that Putnam High school has come to be a splendid educational institution and that the town of Putnam has gone a long way to provide superior educational facilities for its young people and for the students who come to the school from surrounding towns. The interest on Putnam's investment is such a fine group of graduates as received their diplomas Thursday evening, and the year's will compound this interest as success comes to these young people and they make acknowledgment of what Putnam High school did in shaping their careers and in fitting them for real service in a great nation.

Thursday evening's was an interesting program, it being herewith presented, with a list of the graduates and class officers:

A novelty in the way of boosting the Nurses' home fund of the Day Kimball hospital was outlined Thursday by John J. Whitehead, directing the drive, when he announced that arrangements are far advanced for a street fair that is to be held in this city about mid-July. Plans are to close Pomfret street from where it leaves the center of the city to the bridge over the Quinebaug river at Cargill falls. Putnam lodge of Elks has generously agreed to loan its booths for the street fair and the booths will be set up along the section of closed street referred to. The tentative plans call for a two nights' fair, with band concerts, dancing, a special illumination of Cargill park and Cargill falls and many of the attractive features that go with a big fair of this nature. Details of the arrangement will be given out later. Mr. Whitehead said Thursday afternoon that the Nurses' Home fund is now in excess of $6,000 in paid in pledged, this being approximately one-third of the sum to be raised.

Included in a statement issued relative to the annual meeting of the chamber of commerce and what the organization has achieved during the past year the following is included:

Reports of the president, secretary and treasurer were listened to with interest. The secretary mentioned briefly some of the projects furthered by the organization during the past year, including the dollar days, community Santa Claus, spring opening, public band concerts and other accomplishments which he felt had been of benefit to the city.

The president called attention to the fact that the chamber had taken up the public health campaign after the first attempt to secure funds for its continuance had proven an almost complete failure, and had succeeded in putting the service on a firm footing for another year, at least. The chamber had "put across" a public appeal for funds which had been in large measure successful, notwithstanding the failure of the previous attempt; and had then asked and received appropriations from the city and town governments for support of the work of the public health nurse. The president also mentioned the placing of signs for the direction of motorists as a distinct benefit. Although this had not been stressed in previous reports, he had heard many comments from nonmembers, all of whom agreed that it was a job well worth doing, and well done.

The meeting authorized the appointment of an entertainment committee, to be instructed to make out a program of regular meetings of the entire membership, to be held monthly during the cooler months.

The plan provides for programs for the different meetings to be outlined as far in advance as possible, speakers secured, and the main topic to be taken up for discussion at each meeting determined in advance, so as to secure a crystalisation of opinion and a basis for definite action on each project brought to the attention of the organization. It is also planned to serve luncheon at each of these meetings, and to make them real neighborly "get togethers" in the fullest sense.

Former employes of the Manhasset company who are on strike again discontinued their daily meetings Thursday on account of the excessive heat and also withdrew their picket line, which will be re-established, however, as soon as mode moderate weather conditions return. There was no change in the strike situation.

County Investigator W. E. Jackson of Willimantic was a visitor in Putnam Thursday.

Several cases of heat prostration during the past two days were reported in Putnam Thursday, but none of these were announced as being of a serious nature.

Workers on strike from shoe factories in Lynn, Lawrence and other Massachusetts cities have come into this territory and taken work in other lines of endeavor.

Announcement made at Danielson Thursday afternoon shows that the net receipts last Friday evening from the boxing bouts for the benefit of the Nurses' home fund of the Day Kimball hospital amount to $448.25, which amount has been turned over to Frances E. Storer, Killingly chairman.

The Putnam W. C. T. U., will hold their annual flower meeting with Mrs. M. G. Leonard of South Main street this (Friday) afternoon.

Members of Quinebaug lodge of Masons will attend service at the Second Congregational church Sunday morning, a special communication of the lodge being called for that purpose.

At noon next Tuesday at the Congregational church in Thompson Miss Mary Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Elliott, will become the bride of of Charles Van Brunt Cushman, who is now visiting in Pomfret.

John J. O'Brien, principal of the Israel Putnam school, is to be a student during the summer vacation period at the Harvard summer school.

In Foresters' hall Thursday evening there was a gathering of Modern Woodmen of America from Putnam and surrounding towns. State officers were in attendance and a class was adopted. Refreshments were served.

STONINGTON

The people of Stonington, experienced one of the warmest days of the season on Thursday, the thermometer registered 12 at the upper pharmacy on upper Main street. Near the point ,where the sea breeze is enjoyed the thermometer registered 85. This was at the noon hour, later in the afternoon a little breeze sprung up, which made the day a little more comfortable. This is the hottest time recorded here in many a day.

The first rehearsal of the steamers newly organized drum corps, was held Thursday evening, and all turned out to try their luck at playing the drums and piccolo. Many new pieces were tried, and the members who belonged to the old Stonington Drum corps, were ready to assist the new ones.

MYSTIC

The intense heat of Wednesday and Thursday, made it very uncomfortable here, for with the thermometer registering 100 at nine o'clock in the morning, and hovering around 103 near the sea shore, for the past two afternoons makes one feel as though summer had arrived in good time, only those who were obliged to sit down town did so during the warm spell which has prevailed over the village. Strawberries, in the country districts, are ripening fast and have to be picked in the boiling hot sun, in order to get them into the market before they spoil. This is the hottest spell, remembered here for many years.

The funeral services for Elmer E. Judd, were held at his home Thursday afternoon at 2.30. Elder Robinson, pastor of the Advent church, officiated. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery.

Many traffic officers on their motor cycles, passed through here on Thursday, in an effort to keep the roads clear. Speeding during Thursday, and Friday, is apt to cause disaster, as there is so much traffic over the State roads during boat race days. This is the direct route from Boston ton New London.

NEW LONDON PREPARING TO TAKE CARE OF LARGE REGATTA CROWDS TODAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 21—The little interest manifested in the Yale and Harvard races that will take place on the river here tomorrow afternoon is the surprise of the year. As yet there are but few strangers in town, indicating that the crowd will come by autos tomorrow and that they will get away as soon after the races as they can make their departure. The varsity race will take place just before sundown, but that will give the autoists opportunity to get to their home before dark unless they reside further away than Boston or New York. In recent years the auto has been the favorite way for patrons of the races to reach New London. Of course many will come by train, but by far the larger number will make the journey by automobile. William Rockefeller and wife and party arrived today and are at the Mohican and Frank Hunt of Bridgeport reached here this evening with a party of eighteen, they having a floor at the Mohican. The yacht Corsair, J. P. Morgan's palatial steamer, is in the harbor and about that splendid vessel are huddled a score of smaller yachts. The fakers line the streets with their souvenirs of the race, and all train this evening have added to their number. The number of state police in the city is larger than has ever been present at a Yale-Harvard race, but this is attributed to the fact that there are more officers wearing the state police uniform than ever before. If the plan is well represented by police the city is less guarded against crooks than has been the case in other years. No detectives have been hired by the city and no supernumerary officers are on duty as a measure of economy. Whether the move shall prove to have been economical remains to be seen after the races are rowed and the record of crimes has been made. It is understood to be the plan of the city management to bring into the center of the city the officers whose beats are on the outskirts thus leaving a considerable portion of the city unprotected.

The municipal pier was this evening the liveliest spot in the city, for there the sailors from the base were landed and they gave a picturesque touch to the scene. Al the boats from the yachts likewise made the pier their place of landing and departure.

At least ten prohibition enforcement officers have arrived in New London for the purpose of detecting liquor being transported into the city tonight and watching for its sale tomorrow. Most of the places, however, that make it a practice of dispensing liquids of alcoholic strength have shut down business until after the races so that their will be no change of detection.

The police this afternoon received a clue as to the whereabouts of Alice Curran, 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Curran of No. 89 Potter street, who ran away from home two weeks ago with a sailor from the submarine base. From what appears to be reliable information the police are informed that the girl reached Hartford a few days ago, where she was taken into custody and committed to the House of Good Shepherd, an institution for wayward girls. The mother of the girl has been informed of the possible whereabouts of the girl and has taken steps to cause the return home of the runaway if she has become an inmate of the institution.

Boys who persist in bathing the city's reserve reservoir, Lake Brandegee will find themselves in serious trouble, for it was made known to George E. Watters, superintendent of the water and sewer department today that several boys were constructing a raft and which it was intended to use for bathers, at the edge of the lake. Supt. Watters caused the police to be informed and three patrolmen were sent to the lake.

The New London police are maintaining a watch tonight for Antonio Sammatara of No. 58 Shaw street, who escaped from the State Hospital for the Insane at Port Point this morning and who it is believed, may come to New London where his wife continues to reside. Particular heed is directed towards Sammatara's apprehension is because he may go to his home and kill his wife, a threat he has made and his arrest and commitment to the asylum was the result of an attack upon Mrs. Summatara.

Miss Elizabeth A. Donohue, of No. 351 Huntington street has requested the police to keep a watch of her home a few nights as she fears molestation. Miss Donohue's fears were brought about by the appearance of an automobile, bearing two men at her home about 1 o'clock this morning and when one of the men alighted from the machine and rang the doorbell. Miss Donohue did not answer the alarm, but made a request that the police watch the place when she communicated her information of the occurrence the night before. Patrolman Henry Hick was sent to the Donohue house this morning, but Miss Donohue was not there to be interviewed. A neighbor, however, informed the officer that about 10 oclock, a man appared at the Donohue house and when interrogated he stated that he desired to see Miss Donohue.

The neighbor was ordered from the veranda of the place and the fellow and the neighbor engaged in harsh words. It is understood that the automobile bore the registration of 126,177 and it is believed of Connecticut issue.

The Pease house, located at Saybrook point and which has been the rendesvous of the social set, including many from New London the past year or two and particularly since prohibition, was raided last night by prohibition enforcement agents, when five of the chasers of the illegal sellers of alcoholic drinks swooped down on the place. The raiders entered the place without ceremony and at once started to conduct a systematic search for liquors and they were successful, for going to the roof of the hotel they located a case containing nineteen quarts of gin and from the bar was obtained a container in which there were several quarts of whiskey. The liquor was seized and brought to New London, where it was placed in storage. The proprietor of the hotel, Frank Brennan, of Hartford will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Edward Lynch at New Haven next Monday. The Pease house has been raided by enforcement agents and state police several times before and in each instance a quantity of liquor was found there.

The past two days has been the hottest this city has had in many years even later in the season the temperature not being as high as it was Wednesday and today. Workers in sections of the city were compelled to quit their labors because of the excessive heat today.

All trains into this city late this afternoon and this evening were late because of heavy travel and tardiness in making connections from other roads.

Daniel J. Lucy is suing Robert Wheeler for damages for the death of a dog which Mr. Lucy owned and which was entrusted to Wheeler to care for. Wheeler was prosecuted here some few years ago and then was found guilty. Mr. Lucy attached real estate Wheeler owned in Waterford but he was never able to recover and it is this suit that is now to come to trial.

Jacob Efron, a New Yorker, is suing Joseph Birenbaum in the city court here to collect a bill of $25 for goods which the plaintiff sold to the defendant, but which the latter refused to accept when the goods arrived here. The trial will take place Saturday before Judge Prince.

The greatest crowd of the season was at Ocean Beach this evening, the heat driving all who could get away to the shore that they might experience whatever breese was to be had from the sound.

County Detective William E. Jackson arrived in the city this evening for special duty.

William J. Burns, head of the government secret service, accompanied by Mrs. Burns and members of their family, arrived here from Washington tonight to witness the Yale-Harvard races tomorrow. During their stay in New London Mr. Burns and family will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Dorsey of Ocean Beach.

F. M. Atkins of Hartford has arrived at Ocean Beach for the remainder of the summer.

Chester Haines, aged 54, of Blackhall, where he operates a farm, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, having been remodeled to the institution this afternoon suffering from a fractured fore arm. Haines sustained the injury when he was thrown from a farm truck being hauled by a pair of oxen on the farm. The animals became unmanagable and in their flight caused the truck to be overturned and Haines thrown out, landing in such a manner as to fracture the arm.

Frederick C. Anderson of No. 190 Montauk avenue, died at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital this afternoon where he had been under treatment several weeks for paralysis. Mr. Anderson was about 63 years of age and is survived by a widow. About two months ago he sufferee a shock and when his condition did not improve he was transferred to the hospital. Mr. Anderson was for many years employed as a messenger by the Adams Express Company and later by the American Railway Express Company. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

William Connors of Mystic, Miss Ruth McCashlin of Cleveland, Ohio; Miss Ethel Hunker of Niantic, Mrs. Frank Sheldon of Westerly, Ella Martini of Groton and Miss Hazlill Alter of Montauk avenue, were patients discharged at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital today.

James O'Neill, son of the late actor of the same name and who has been under treatment at a local private hospital several weeks for an extreme nervous condition, was transferred yesterday to a sanatorium at Paterson, N. J. Mr. O'Neill's condition is considered serious.

The funeral of Miss Helen M. Brutzman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brutzman, of No. 33 Williams street, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger. The bearers were Joseph Harris, John McManus, Thomas McCarthy, John Sheedy, Joan Daly and Daniel Doyle. During the services Edward Murray rendered "Lead Kindly Light". The floral tributes were many and handsome and, in a measure, testified to the high regard Miss Brutzman was held in by her many acquaintances and the

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

PRESENT BALANCE OF CITY AND COUNTRY IS WHOLLY OUT OF TRUE.

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

A contractor is building some three or four miles of cement road in my town for the state.

I have not heard what wages he pays his skilled workmen, those employed running engines, mixing cement, etc. But he began operations a month ago by offering 60 cents an hour for common, unskilled labor, the kind that can use a shovel and pick and, perhaps, a wheelbarrow. This was $4 for an eight-hour day. Soon after these laborers demanded $4.80 and got it. Now, I understand, they are going to strike if the contractor won't raise them to 65 cents an hour, or $5.20 a day.

As the state pays the contractor, and the taxpayers can, apparently, be "soaked" any desired amount by the state, they'll probably get their $5.20 a day.

They're the sort of men who, ten years ago, would have found some difficulty in finding rural employment at a dollar a day. They are not intelligent nor even capable workmen. They are not the kind whom any careful farmer would permit to hoe his corn or milk his cows.

But now they can get from $4.80 to $5.20 a day out of a state-financed job.

In the meantime, I personally know of more than three thousand acres of good farming land in this same town which are growing up to weeds and bushes, simply because the owning farmers can't get help to continue cultivating them. That is, can't get help unless they will outbid the state-financed contractor by offering bigger wages for an equally short day.

A resident of the near-by village tells me that he has taken a steady job as carpenter in a city ten miles away, at 65 cents an hour for eight hours and pay-and-a-half for all overtime. His past experience has been as all-round handy man, as section hand on the railroad and as sheep-shearer. His present "kit" of tools consists of one hammer and one three-foot rule. But he is reckoned good enough carpenter to be taken on at 65 cents an hour and to be promised speedy admission to the union.

In this same town within the last two weeks I have met and talked with five old farmers who tell me they are selling off their stock and most of their tools, and cutting their farming to just the small amount they can do, alone and unaided. They all report the same fact, i. e., that they can obtain only about the same prices for their products which they got ten years ago, while they are asked to pay four times as high wages and from two to four times as much for everything in the way of tools, supplies, clothes, groceries, etc.

From the southern end of the county, which has been for more than a century a famous dairy land, comes word that the farmers are selling off their cows for almost any price offered, because they can't get enough for their dairy products to pay feed costs and labor wages. I hear of cheese factories closing down because their supply of milk is shut off; of creameries constricting their output for the same reason.

As a matter of fact, I know of but two farmers in this whole agricultural town who are employing any help. One of these is trying his hardest to sell off two-thirds of his holdings, so he can get rid of the wage and tax demands which are impoverishing him; the other is reputed to have a goodly capital behind him and not to be dependent upon profits from the farm for a living.

It is not to be supposed that the three thousand acres of good farm land which I personally know about as having been abandoned by its owners is all such in even this one town. It is not to be assumed that the five old farmers with whom I have personally talked are the only ones in this small town who are compelled to restrict their work to the few petty jobs which are possible to them in their old age. It is not reasonable to argue that the dairy farmers of this one county are the only ones in the United States who are selling off their milch cows in order to avoid a money loss.

It is more than likely that the very narrow bit of country which falls under my observation is a fairly good sample of the rest. There is no reason to suppose that it is being worse hit than other parts. In fact, reports of the last two or three years from the west all agree that farmers out that way have been and are catching it worse than we are.

The papers are full of optimistic editorials and "ha-ha" cartoons about the "return of prosperity." So far as I can make out, this enthusiastically welcomed "prosperity" is evidenced to the minds of its fuglers and barkers by various increases in wages in various manufacturing industries, necessarily accompanied by increases in the prices of the products of these industries.

Instead of regarding this as proof of growing prosperity, it should be classed as warning of an approaching panic.

Instead of considering it a healthy growth it should be treated as a peculative bloat.

Instead of being something at which to "point with pride," it is something truly to be "viewed with alarm."

The greatest soldier that ever lived gave ten times as much thought to his army's commissariat as to the cut and color of its uniforms. His remark that "an army travels on its belly," has become a proverb in military circles.

It is just as true of civilization that it travels on its belly as it was of Napoleon's grand army. Cut off the rations and the army will neither march nor fight. Without fuel the fire faileth. Without food the life wasteth. With nothing to make steam for the boiler the engine slows down and stops.

It is a truism so old, so trite, so hackneyed that it would seem as if even the most brash and blatant agitator must know it, that the food which nourishes civilization, and the fuel which drives its chariot, all come originally from the farm-lands. The farmer and his products are at the bottom of all progress, all prosperity, all life, even.

Won't the time ever come when the hordes of the cities will comprehend that no temporary advantage they can gain will ever compensate the world for the balancing loss it causes to the farmers?

Won't they ever comprehend that robbing Peter to pay Paul is simply wearing out the currency without increasing anybody's real wealth?

Won't they ever learn that it doesn't pay to kill even a goose while it is laying golden eggs?

Can't they see that reckless wasting of the water at ten thousand city faucets is no way to keep the reservoir full, back in the hills?

Apparently they can't. Apparently they won't.

With their flivver already driven beyond the speed limit, they throw the throttle still wider open and, with both feet on the accelerator, roar forward on the wildest "joy-ride" of the ages.

They don't seem to know or care whom they run over, no what catastrophe of self-destruction they are themselves aiming at. So long as they can give the other fellow their dust and get there—get somewhere, get anywhere—ahead of him, that's all they ask.

"Tomorrow?" Who cares for tomorrow? Sufficient unto the day are the gobblings thereof. Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die. After us the deluge. Whopee! Hit 'er up faster, you there in front! Never mind the old hayseed in the road. If he can't keep out of our way toss him into the ditch and teach him his place."

That seems to be about the spirit of the times, as manifested in the doings of both labor and capital in the cities which are becoming, if they haven't already become, the masters of our ship of state.

Thus far the farmer, by greater use of machinery and by resort to economies which his fellow-laborers of the city would consider stinginesses, has managed to worry along. The big markets have as yet felt no real shortage of food supplies. The highly paid city workman has been able to find meat and bread and fruits and vegetables enough to keep his internal combustion engine functioning.

But, when the time arrives—as it already has in this vicinity—that the money the farmer gets for milk and cream and butter and cheese won't pay the feed and wage costs of producing them, and he sells his cows to keep himself out of the poor house, what will the city dinner table or dinner-pail be filled with?

When the farmer has to stop raising any more grain or vegetables than he can attend to with his own work for his own eating, how will that city dinner table and dinner-pail look?

When the flood of food supply which pours in unstinted volume from rural fields to city markets is shut off at its source because farmers can't afford to maintain it, of what avail will even the highest of wages be to the hungry hordes who cannot find food to buy with them?

"Oh rats," I hear some of you say, "that time will never come." There'll always be farmers enough to raise things to feed the cities with."

Well, perhaps, I'm no more of a prophet than you are. We shall both be wise to avoid too dogmatic assertions about what will or will not happen in the future. "Heaven from all creatures hides the book of fate." And those who venturesomely seek it out and try to open the interdicted pages are quite apt to read them wrong as right.

But all the evidence which is obtainable serves to show that the present balance between city and country is wholly out of true. While the prices of manufactured goods are usually so high as to permit manufacturers to pay gilted and exorbitant wages, the prices for farm products are so low, at the farms, as to forbid farmers to pay anything higher than pre-war wages. This is shown by every investigation made into price conditions. And it is personally known by every working farmer.

As a result of this farmers everywhere are compelled to narrow their fields of operations, to restrict their out-put, to cease selling unless they are willing to sell at a loss.

If they could sell their potatoes for $4 or $5 a bushel; if they could get 25 cents a quart for their milk; if they could be assured of a dollar a pound for their butter and a dollar a dozen for eggs; if pork and beef and lamb brought them 35 cents or forty cents a pound—all on the farms, then they, too, might afford to pay wages equal to those offered in city shops or on state contractor's jobs. Nor would such prices be high in comparison with those of other goods.

They can't get such prices. They can't afford to pay such wages. It is, therefore, highly reasonable to assume that the trend which is so sadly manifest in my little bishopric is country-wide. That trend is towards abandonment of all but the most simple and fundamental and self-centered farming operations; the restricting of farm-plantings and the reduction of farm output.

What can be the effect of such a movement, nation-wide, but to produce a shortage in supply? There is a limit to the extent that machines can substitute for hand work. That limit seems to be about reached. But there seems no limit to the height of laborer's wage demands or profiteering's graft demands.

Is there nothing but disaster capable of checking them? Must greed be given unbridled rule till it meets up with starvation, mouth to mouth? Will nothing less drastic stimulate its dormant brains to their proper action?

THE FARMER.

Eclipse of the Moon.

When the moon passes into the shadow cast by the earth (which extends in the direction opposite to the sun) it is eclipsed, for then the direct light of the sun is shut off.

Stray Bits of Wisdom.

Life is like a sleep. Old men are those who have slept the longest time; when they wake up they find it is time to die.—La Bruyere.

Origin of "Good-by."

The meaning of "good-by," though sometimes erroneously given as "God buy—or redeem—you," is undoubtedly "God be with ye," and as such has been clipped into its modern form.

True repentance has a double aspect; it looks upon things past with a weeping eye, and upon the future with a watchful eye.—South.

profound sympathy that is extended the bereaved family. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Earl Parks, of No. 200 Connecticut avenue and employed as driver by the B. B. Gardner Storage Company suffered a compound fracture of the right fore-leg this morning, when a cask of lard he was unloading from his truck in front of the Zepp bakery on Main street fell upon him. After receiving emergency treatment, Parks was removed to Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital. The accident occurred when Parks attempted to transfer the cask from the truck to the sidewalk by the use of skids. As the cask was being glided down the skids Parks lost control of it and he fell to the sidewalk pinning Parks beneath it.

Mending With Rivets.

Many things that cannot be soldered, can be mended with common copper rivets. These may be bought at any hardware store in assorted sizes for a small sum. A galvanized wash tub can be mended easily with a copper rivet, unless the leak is on the seam. It is possible that even then a rivet might hold the leak.

Art Is Workmanship.

Once more let me make it clear that by art, instructed thinkers do not only mean pictures or quaint and curious things, or necessarily costly ones, certainly not luxurious ones. They mean worthy and complete workmanship, by competent workmen.—W. R. Lethaby.

Wonderful Feather-Lined Nest.

Dealing with birds and their habits, an English naturalist says that among common British birds the one which built the most wonderful and the most beautiful nest was the long-tailed tit, which used 900 feathers to line its nest.

From an English boy's examination paper: "When the duke of Monmouth fled from the battle he changed clothes with a pheasant and was afterward discovered laying in a ditch."—Boston Evening Transcript.

The little bunny climbed up.

telephone rang, and pretty Lady Love asked in a worried voice: "Uncle Lucky, is my little bunny boy with you?"

"Of course," laughed the old gentleman bunny, "don't worry about your little rabbit boy. He knows how to take care of himself, and if he doesn't his uncle will."

This so comforted Lady Love that she hopped back to her little kitchen and baked a lovely apple pie, knowing that Uncle Lucky would be over with her little son that afternoon.

"Well," said Uncle Lucky, after he and his little bunny nephew had eaten their breakfast, "What shall we do now?"

"Let's look at Mrs. Sparrow's little birds," answered Little Jack Rabbit.

Uncle Lucky at once hopped out to the tool house and returned with a step ladder which he placed on the front porch and climbing up to the little nest, he looked in. The tiny mother sparrow wasn't frightened a bit. She knew the dear old gentleman rabbit wouldn't hurt her little birds, not for the whole world and all the stars above it.

When the old gentleman rabbit came down, the little bunny climbed up to take a look and opening his knapsack, he took out some cracker crumbs—nice, sweet cracker crumbs you know, and gave them to the little birds, making them very happy.

MARKET RALLIED.

New York, June 21. — Supporting orders placed at the opening of today's stock market started a rally [illegible] reached fair proportions before the end. [illegible] extension of such [illegible] assumed aggressive short covering operations an dthere was strong evidence of buying by so-called "bargain hunters."

Recurrent liquidation of impaired marginal accounts resulting from yesterday's smash in prices gave the market a spotty appearance until the final hour when practically the entire list turned upward. Feeling in the financial district undoubtedly changed for the better in the early hours because of the evidence of substantial support and some of this strength was transferred to the weaker shares.

Today's rise was confined to no particular class of stock but extended throughout the list, with here and there a share falling off because of some development affecting it individually. Baldwin moved up 4 1-4 points, American Locomotive 3, American Can 4, Studebaker 3 1-8, Pan American 2 3-4, U. S. Steel 2, and Kelly Springfield 2 1-2.

Railroad shares shared in the upward movement, gains ranging from a point to more than four points. Delaware & Lackawanna gained 4 1-2 points, and half a dozen others advanced one point or more.

Sugar shares reflected the improved outlook in the commodity market, Amerdcan Sugar, American Beet, Punta Alegre, and Cuba Cane preferred rising one to three points.

Foreign exchanges ruled slightly lower. Demand sterling slumped 3-4 to $4.61 3-15 and French francs fell off 5 1-2 points to 6.19 cents. German marks held relatively steady at .0007 1-8. Most of the other European exchanges were easier than yesterday.

Call money again held steady throughout the day at 5 per cent. The time money market was dull, being confined almost entirely to renewals. Quoted rates were unchanged at 4 3-4 to 5 per cent. for the shorter maturities and 5 per cent. for the longer terms, a small amount of Commercial Paper changed hands at 5 1-4 per cent but the rates were steady at 5 per cent for prime names and 5 3-4 for exceptional ones.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 21.—The bond market today failed to participate to any pronounced extent in the strength shown by stocks. At intervals during the morning selling pressure was applied very persistently against a varied list of domestic issues and foreign bonds, losses running in some instances from 1 to 3 points.

In the last half of the session the complexion of the market underwent a decided change for the better, much of the earlier declines being reduced to small proportions, while many popular liens sold materially above yesterday's final figures.

It is becoming more generally recognized that considerable of the recent pressure arose from selling by interests who had to sacrifice their holdings to bolster up speculative committments in stocks. In addition there is always a considerable volume of short selling in active issues which commonly move in unison with the course of stocks with which they are identified.

Signs that much of the recent selling through causes of a specific nature were completed were not wanting in the closing dealings, when the more active issues were moving up in a spirited fashion. Relatively little change occurred in U. S. government obligations, a loss of 1-32nds in the Liberty 2 1-2s and a rise of a similar amount in the treasury 4 1-4s furnishing the extreme movement.

Total sales (par value) $11,405,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 21.—Export business estimated at more than 1,000,000 bushels gave fresh strength to the wheat market today after both the September delivery and December had touched a new low price record for the season. Wheat closed firm, 3-8 to 1c net higher with September $1.04 3-8 to 1.04 1-2 and December 1.07 to 1.07 1-2. Corn finished 3-8 to 1 1-4 up; oats 1-8 decline to 5-8c gain; and provisions lower by 5 @7 to 15c.

Wheat started with an upward tendency that was ascribed chiefly to buying on the part of previous sellers. Besides, estimates were current that the probable yield of wheat in Europe this season had been reduced 25,000,000 to 40,000,000 bushels owing to unfavorable weather. The initial bulge here, however, attracted rather free selling which, with a temporary pause in demand, led to a somewhat sharp setback forcing September and ecember below the season's minimum level and dropping July to 7 3-4c under Saturday's finish.

Buying to remove hedges against sales for export came into evidence at this stage, and the market developed a decided upward swing. Prices were said to be on a full export basis. Forecasts of showery weather in the southwest likely to interfere with harvesting likewise were of some effect as a bullish influence, as was noticed of black rust in Minnesota.

Corn was strong all day reacting at times with wheat but invariably running into good demand. The outlook was that the supply of corn July 1 would be extremely small. Oats averaged a little higher in line with other grain.

Weakness of hog values had a depressing effect on the provision market.

PLAINFIELD

A pretty June wedding took place at the home of Emory R. Davis on Bradford Hill when his daughter, Mildred Pearl Davis was married at three o'clock to Charles Davis Rundall, Rev. William C. Prentiss, pastor of the First Congregational church, officiating. During the playing of the wedding march, the bride and groom were met in attended by the maid of honor, a sister of the bride, Miss Evelyn Davis, and the best man, a brother of the groom, Ralph Rundall. The single ring service was used. The bride wore silk georgette trimmed with Spanish lace, wearing a bridal veil with orange blossoms and pearls. Her traveling dress was of canton crepe with hat to match and she carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid, Evelyn E. Davis, was gowned in grass canton crepe, carrying pink roses.

Following the wedding ceremony, a lunch was served and reception held. The immediate family and a large circle of friends were present. The mother of the bride, Mrs. Mary Davis, and her daughter, Gladys, were present from Willimantic and also Mrs. Mary VanNess of Willimantic, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Davis of Pawtuxet, William Davis, an uncle of the bride, of Danielson.

There were many lovely gifts of cut glass, linen, silver and a purse of gold.

After a short wedding trip to New York and Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Rundall will reside with the parents of th groom, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Rundall on Bradford Hill.

The funeral of Miss Emelia Vezina was held on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. John's church, where a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated. Rev. R. P. Morrissey was the celebrant, assisted by Rev. J. J. Tyler of Jewett City as deacon and by Rev. L. Paradis of Voluntown, as sub-deacon. Miss Vizina was a member of the Children of Mary society and four girls, members of this organization, carried ribons. The bearers were a brother of the deceased, Joseph Vezina and five brothers-in-law, P. X. Coutu, Azarie Furcotte, Omer Fournier, Leo Fournier and Joseph Fournier. A French parting hymn was sung by Victor Cloutier, assisted by Alcide Fournier at the close of the service. The accompanist was Miss Teresa Sullivan, organist. There were many relatives and friends attending the service, the two nurses were present who attended Miss Vezina in her illness, Mr. and Mrs. Deojane Boulley and Mrs. Ernest Gauche, of New Bedford. Burial was in St. Marys cemetery in Lisbon.

S. Harold Greene of Boston was a guest at the Lawton inn on Wednesday.

Mrs. Julia Dean was calling on Mrs. Robert L. Dawley after attending the Rundell-Davis wedding on Bradford Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lovett of Norwich were week end visitors at Mrs. Harold Barstow's.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin R. Tait of West Warren, Mass., visited her father, John Inglis, on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Tait, John Inglis and family called on Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pellette of Westminister.

The public are sorry to learn that there are those in our midst who are bent on destruction. Policeman Probo discovered recently on a Sunday night two men attempting to burn some of the property of Antonia Geroa. This is not the first discovery of this nature in the village and Mr. Probo must be assured that the public stands back of him to round up such undesirable citizens.

Miss Ethel Dawley, who formerly worked for J. F. Hart, has taken the position as bookkeeper in the store of Arthur C. Tillinghast.

Wolverine Trapper's Enemy.

The wolverine is the greatest enemy of the trapper, and an Indian will often give up a trapline, when he finds a wolverine on his trail. The animal follows his tracks, visiting all the traps, eating or tearing up everything caught in them, besides breaking into camps, from which it carries away utensils and food alike, decding what it cannot carry or what is nailed down.

Duty Always Possible.

It is, of course, much pleasanter if one is naturally fearless, and I envy and respect the men who are naturally fearless. But it is a good thing to remember that the man who does not enjoy this advantage can nevertheless stand beside the man who does, and can do his duty with like efficiency if he chooses.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Wonderful Physical Development.

On the high Andean plateau in Bolivia live dwarfs with the chests of giants. These men are Bolivian Indians, and, living as they do at a height of 12,000 to 14,000 feet above sea level, they have developed immense lung power, to enable them to breathe properly in the rarefied air of those regions.

Truly a Sad Situation.

The village grocery assembly was discussing the sudden death of a neighbor who had left a rather helpless family. "And the worst of it is," said old Uncle Bill, "that there Ain't one of those boys that has the head to fill the old man's shoes."

Optimism takes a day off now and then but the pessimist never.

RESOLUTIONS.

Masonic Temple Corporation.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of The Masonic Temple Corporation, held Thursday, June 21, 1923, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

By the death of Arthur H. Brewer Masonry in Norwich loses its most prominent member and one in whom it owes more than to any other. For over fifty years he has been actively identified with it; giving of his time, his means and of his remarkable executive ability that the honor and dignity of the institution might be upheld in this community.

In the preliminary meetings leading to the formation of this Corporation he was the chairman of the committee and the leading spirit, and to his wise foresight the building of the Masonic Temple was due.

He was elected as the first President April 19, 1892, and has been continuously re-elected ever since. During all this time his services had never been invaluable. He took second pride in the organization, but never have we taken greater pride in him, and his name will ever be honored on our rolls.

FREDERICK W. LEFFERT,
Secretary.

OVERWORKED MOTHERS

We all know them. Mothers who, in their anxiety to keep their homes neat and attractive and their little ones as well dressed as their playmates, toil on day in and day out, sweeping, dusting, mending and cooking, often suffering from backache, pain in side, headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and symptoms of more serious ailments. Thousands of such women have found relief from such suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as is evidenced by the letters of recommendation continually being published in this paper. For nearly fifty years this old-fashioned root and herb medicine has been restoring ailing women to health and strength.

MACHINE JUMPS BRIDGE INTO YANTIC RIVER

A Ford touring car owned and driven by Harvey A. Tibbells went through the railing of the wooden bridge across the Yantic river at the junction of Sherman and Asylum streets at the Falls Thursday morning about 45 o'clock, landing in the river.

Mr. Tibbells and his son, Leon Tibbells, left their home on Lover's lane, New London turnpike, shortly before the accident, bound for their work at the Bradford & Armstrong mill, in Greeneville. As he was driving across the bridge Mr. Tibbells said that either one of the front wheels of the Ford collapsed or the steering gear went wrong and the machine crashed through the railing and went into the river.

When the machine went into the river Mr. Tibbells succeeded in getting out of the machine and his son also freed himself from the car. Both shouted for help and a neighbor who heard their calls pulled them out of the river with a rope.

The machine is out of sight under water and it is not known just how badly it is damaged. Mr. Tibbells expects to have it dragged to the flats near the bridge and then to have it pulled up the bank. He escaped injury but his son received a cut finger and was slightly injured about the back.

AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS DOME

Although the street illuminations for the Shriners' Convention in Washington are said to have surpassed the candle-power record for such displays, this majestic, flood-lighted dome of the U. S. capitol shows above the myriad bulbs like a mighty beacon, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

The noble proportions of the great dome even stood out in intaglio clearness above the festoons which roofed historic Pennsylvania Avenue with a great canopy of dazzling light.

The story of this dome is related by Gilbert Grosvenor in the course of communication to the Society entitled "The Capitol, Wonder Building of the World," as follows:

"During the darkest hours of the Civil War, while the Capitol basement did service as a military bakery, Lincoln insisted that there be no suspension in the building of its dome.

"District volunteers, enrolled to defend their homes and Capital, heard reports of plots to burn the flour mills in Georgetown. They instantly pressed into service every vehicle to be found on the streets or in stables, loaded them with flour, and all day there proceeded along Pennsylvania Avenue the most curious procession which ever traversed that street of countless parades. The flour was stored safely in the Capitol's vast cellars and Washington's home baking habits were revolutionized. Tradition has it that French and Vienna loaves gained vogue from the U. S. Capitol bakery.

"While bakers kneaded war loaves below, hammers were busy every working day on the giant dome above.

"Today the veriest layman pauses as he climbs the steps for every day in the year, to its lofty platform, to admire the engineering skill which bolted, girded and clamped and trussed the two mammoth metal shells that form the majestic inverted bowl. Aloft the mechanics are forgotten in the beauty of the panorama of the city, the river, and the Virginia hills beyond.

"From that vantage point the visitor looks down upon the main axis of the city's artistic development, past the Grant Memorial across the restful, green Mall, to the sky-piercing shaft erected to the memory of Washington, and then to the impressing Lincoln Memorial, with the Acropolitheatre-crowned heights of Arlington in the background, and instinctively knows that here urban beauty and civic dignity approach their highest expression.

"It is as if Venice thought to walk through the Rotunda knowing that nearly 9,000,000 pounds of metal are hanging over one's head. There is no need to alarm. Only a terrific earthquake or the rust of ages can assail the fixity of this airily woven iron fabric. The Capitol's superintendent guards against the latter incursion by mixing 4,300 pounds of paint and employing 35 men for about three months when the dome needs a new coat.

"The bronze figure which surmounts the dome alone weighs 15,000 pounds and is 3 1-2 times as tall as an average man. It has been compared to an Indian, and miscalled the 'Goddes of Liberty'; it is a statue of Freedom, typifying armed liberty by its helmet and breastplate. This representation seemed appropriate when it was put in place in 1863."

Superhouse, as It Were.

"You can't imagine, my dear," said one maid to another, "the number of young men who paid attention to me at the dance." "But that's quite useless, my dear," responded her friend, "when you have already imagined them yourself."

YALE MADE CLEAN SWEEP IN ANNUAL REGATTA WITH HARVARD ON THE THAMES

The Eli Crew Was Victorious in the Varsity Race by Fully Six Lengths—The Cambridge Crew Hung to Their Rivals for Nearly Two Miles, Then Made One Thrilling But Fruitless Effort to Forge Ahead—From the Two Mile Mark the Race Was a Procession—Official Time, Yale 22.10, Harvard 22.35—Yale Freshmen Eight Won by Four Lengths, and the Yale Junior Varsity Led Their Opponents by Five and a Half Lengths—Yale Men Give Coach Leader Credit for Winning Races.

Regatta Course, New London, June 23.—(By The A. P.)—Sweeping to rowing glory that it has not known for nearly a decade, Yale's powerful varsity crew capped the climax of a remarkable come-back this season under American home-bred coaching methods, with a smashing, spectacular victory over Harvard as dusk was settling this evening over the picturesque Thames river course.

Flashing across the finish line fully six lengths ahead, of a gallant but badly beaten eight, the blue shell closed the 1923 season with an undefeated record and gave the Elis their first clean sweep since 1916 in the annual rowing struggle with their ancient rivals.

Official time was: Yale 22.10; Harvard 22.35.

This morning the Yale freshman and junior varsity eights added their measure to the blue tinge of triumph that settled tonight over the 56th annual regatta between the two universities. The Eli subs sprang someone of an upset in their way by walking away from the Cambridge yearlings to win by five lengths while the New Haven junior varsity, led by Capt. R. K. Pelly, stormed even more decisively over the crimson second crew, leading the way by five and a half lengths.

Yale, as its long and brilliant rowing history has tasted many of the sweets of triumph, but it is doubtful whether upon the happiest days of Bob Cooke's coaching the bulldog scored as decisively over its traditional foe as it did today.

Yale's signal victory in the varsity race came as no surprise to followers of rowing who had watched the sensational performances of the blue all season. But where, in previous races, the Eli had demonstrated their superiority over shorter distances today they were called upon to test their mettle over the long four-mile pull that ranks with the most gruelling tests of athletic endurance.

The confident manner of their triumph, the smooth, pace-defeating form they displayed over the entire race, stamped them without question as one of the greatest eights in America this season.

For nearly two miles of the premier event of regatta day, the rival crews raced practically neck and neck, with the blue tipped oars holding a slight advantage but as the half way mark was reached, Harvard's final, desperate bid for the lead failed and from that point on, it was a procession for Yale. The crimson gave its all in that one thrilling challenge but it was not good enough to match the rugged power of its opponent.

Unfavorable wind conditions delayed for an hour the start of the varsity race and it was shortly after 6 o'clock, daylight saving time, when they were sent away. Harvard, as it had done in the two morning races, got the jump at the start and clung to a lead of a quarter of a length for several hundred yards. Yale drew up to even terms at the half mile, rowing a smooth 34 strokes to the minute to the choppier 36 stroke beat of the crimson. The blue shell shoved its nose out in front soon afterward but the best it could gain was a half length as they went past the mile flag.

Then came Harvard's challenge. Inch by inch, the crimson shell, urged to a fighting pitch, crawled up on Yale, until it seemed that the two eights were battling practically stroke for stroke on even terms at the mile and three-quarters distance. But here Yale gave its answer. The blue, almost imperceptibly deepened its catch, put more drive into its long sweep and forged slowly but surely ahead. There was no denying that powerful, space eating stride and Harvard, struggling gamely but in vain dropped steadily behind.

Open water showed between the shells for the first time at the two and quarter mile mark. Yale was adding more than a half length as each quarter mile passed by, leading by three lengths at the three mile post, more than four at three and half miles and on to a margin of six lengths in a spectacular sprint down to the finish.

The droning of airplanes over head, shrill sirens of myriads of gaily bedecked pleasure craft that lined the course, and the thousands of spectators that occupied the shore, bridges and observation trains—all raised a mighty chorus of tribute to the prowess of that blue eight.

And back of the impressiveness of Yale's victories today was of the most unusual triumphs for the American coaching system in the history of rowing records. For tonight, Yale's man of the hour, the "miracle worker" of oarsmanship, was young Ed Leader, product of the far west, who in his first at the helm raised Yale to rowing heights it has seldom known in recent years.

No trace of the English system that has ruled Eli aquatics for so many years remained today. From coach to oars pins the blue was typically American. The long, sweeping stroke, with which Leader achieved so marked success as coach of the University of Washington's crews, has revitalized rowing at Yale.

For the first time in many years, Yale has as a result of its victory march this season may far claim to the American college rowing championship. Experts who views its triumph today he'd the blue shell as the match of any in the east. But whether or not Yale can assert titular honors depends upon the outcome of the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie next June.

Scores of the intercollegiate entries—Pennsylvania and Columbia—trained the blue this season and gained triumph on the Hudson. [illegible] might well establish a claim to supremacy. But in the event Washington or Syracuse looks the way at Poughkeepsie, title laurels will be in dispute.

1924 Crew Captains Elected

New London, June 23.—Harvard's varsity crew this evening elected B. McK. Henry of Rosemont, Pa., to be captain of the 1924 crew.

New London, June 23.—L. S. Rockefeller of Greenwich was elected captain of next year's crew by the Yale varsity men this evening.

CREDIT FOR WINNING GIVEN COACH LEADER

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 23.—Credit for winning the races on the Thames today was to go to the men in the boat, Coach Leader told the victorious Yale crews at their banquet held in quarters tonight, shortly after the varsity had turned in the third blue victory of the day over Harvard. He said that he was very much pleased with his work.

Chairman Allen, of the Yale rowing committee, on behalf of the committee expressed gratitude to Mr. Leader for the work he had done and the success of the crews this year. Mr. Allen said it was the most perfect and harmonious season Yale has ever had. The crews broke up after the banquet and will leave for their homes tomorrow.

EFFORT TO PROVE ALIBI FOR MRS. ANNA BUZZI

New York, June 23.—Efforts to prove an alibi for Mrs. Anna Buzzi on trial for the murder of Frederick Schneider, Bronx contractor, were centered by the defense today on the testimony of witnesses that the woman answered telephone calls at her apartment shortly after 5 o'clock on the day of the slaying. Schneider was found dead in his automobile shortly after 5 o'clock.

Street car inspectors testified it would take approximately 18 minutes actual running time for a person to leave the spot of the murder and reach the Buzzi apartment house, without including time for transfers. They also said that on the day of the murder, February 20, the running time would have been increased several minutes due to rain and slippery tracks.

Raymond W. Conway, a surety bond agent, said Mrs. Buzzi had called the home of Mrs. Billingsley, where he was a guest, shortly after 5 o'clock and told him Schneider had met with an accident. He also said that he and Billingsley had gone to the home of William Turc, Mrs. Buzzi's brother-in-law, and he had become greatly excited when told of Schneider's death. Turc, in his testimony, said he had given a pistol to Mrs. Buzzi and that she told him she had killed Schneider. Turc later had gone to Mrs. Buzzi's apartment with him to comfort her, Conday said, and had remarked while on the way that one of Schneider's Italian laborers might have killed him.

The case was adjourned until Monday at which time the defense counsel said that Mrs. Buzzi would take the stand.

STEVEDORES AT DOCKS IN NEW LONDON STRIKE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 22.—About 100 stevedores employed at the wharf of the Central Vermont railroad at East New London, went on a strike this morning when an increase in wages was demanded by the men and refused. At the present time the railroad's steamers are hauling a vast amount of freight and it is believed that the stevedores realizing that their services were badly needed decided to attempt the obtaining of more wages now than later. The railroad has frequently been subjected to labor troubles, the stevedores being dissatisfied often and demanding more compensation. Supt. Edward J. Guthrie states that the increase will not be granted the stevedores, at least not at this time. The men have been receiving a daily wage of 51 cents per hour, but they demand an increase of six cents an hour. It is understood that the railroad will attempt to fill the places of some of the strikers by offering employment to high school students now on their vacation and who have performed laborious work at the state pier.

LEVIATHAN CREATES A NEW STEAMSHIP SPEED

Aboard the Steamship Leviathan, June 23.—(By wireless to the Associated Press)—The reconditioned Leviathan, returning to New York on her trial cruise, today set a new steamship speed record of 22.04 knots an hour. The previous record, held by the Mauretania was 27.5 knots an hour.

The record was made after passing Jupiter light, off the Florida coast, and the high speed was continued for a run of 75.7 miles.

Officials aboard were jubilant, declaring the giant liner's engines had behaved perfectly under the speed test.

S. P. GILBERT RESIGNS AS UNDER SECY OF TREASURY

Washington, June 23.—The resignation of S. Parker Gilbert, jr., as under secretary of the treasury was announced by Secretary Mellon tonight, prior to his departure for a "two months' vacation in Europe. Mr. Gilbert will leave the treasury post as soon after Mr. Mellon's return as conditions permit, probably in October, to return to the practice of law.

Mr. Mellon, in correspondence with Mr. Gilbert, made public with the announcement, said the under secretary's resignation was the occasion of "extreme regret." He said he desired publicly to express his sincere appreciation of the valuable services rendered by Mr. Gilbert to the country and the treasury.

Coming to Washington in the midst of the war, Mr. Gilbert, out of law school only a few years, was the "baby" of the treasury staff. He is now 30 years old.

During his five years with the treasury, he served first as a member of the war loan staff which managed all of the loans to America's associates in the war. Upon the resignation of Assistant Secretary Leffingwell, Mr. Gilbert was appointed to succeed him. The youngest man ever to hold that post. When congress in 1921 provided for an under secretary he was given the place by Mr. Mellon. As under secretary Mr. Gilbert has complete control of the treasury fiscal operations. His administration of the job has won many commendations.

During the absence of Mr. Mellon from Washington, Mr. Gilbert will be acting secretary of the treasury.

PHONE OPERATORS STRIKE SET FOR NEXT TUESDAY

Boston, June 23.—A strike of telephone operators in New England was unexpectedly called today for 7 A. m. Tuesday, daylight saving time, next Tuesday. Members of the local connected with the telephone operators' department, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, declared themselves in favor of a strike by a vote of 6,466 to 1,433 in a referendum last Tuesday, many of whom are not members of the union.

Union officials had planned to have the strike date set at a meeting of the joint district council of the organization in this city next Sunday.

The state board of conciliation and arbitration has offered its services as mediator, but no definite reply has yet been received from the union or the company.

The union sometime ago presented demands for an advance in wages and changes in working conditions which included a seven-hour working day. On May 29 the company announced rejection of the demands on the ground that working conditions were considered fair and wages were at war-time levels. A poll of the union operators resulted in favor of a strike referendum. At a further conference the union's demands were again rejected and the strike vote followed.

MANY REGATTA CARS IN NEW LONDON STREETS

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 23.—The local police had a comparatively easy time of it today in the handling of the crowd and the management of the automobiles. The rush of traffic did not come till late in the afternoon and then the autos scattered so that they did not congest any section of the city. Main street was a continuous line of machines from Church street to the section above the bridge and all the intersecting streets were also filled. Federal street to Broad was lined with autos as were all the other streets running west from Main, Bradley, Water, Atlantic and Potter streets never saw so much traffic as they experienced late this afternoon. In Groton, Thames street and all the streets running east from it were thronged with autos, and many a resident of that village found an easy dollar in allowing autos to park in the yards. Members of the state police force were stationed along the highway so that traffic was well regulated there. The railroads have suffered from the loss of traffic by automobiles, for the major part of the travel to the race today was by auto. The observation trains were made up of 30 to 35 cars each and they were well filled. The old-time folks were treated to some sights they never expected to witness on these trains for they beheld women of "society" smoking cigarettes and lounging in very unbecoming positions. Indeed, our grandmothers would have blushed at the sights that were to be witnessed among the fashionable set.

In consequence of the attack on the Belgians, the most severe penalties have been laid down for the towns of Marl and Buer. Six hostages have been taken, including the burgomasters of the towns. The use of telephones has been barred for two weeks, there will be no street cars for three months, all coffee houses, saloons and restaurants will be closed for three months, no one will be allowed on the streets from 6 p. m. until 6 a. m. for one month, and the moving picture theatres will remain closed.

Sum of $1,350,000 Figures in Morse Trial

Washington, June 23.—Summaries prepared from the books of the United States Transport Company were offered today at the Morse trial by the government in an effort to show that the company, a Morse concern, failed to account for approximately $1,350,000 of revenue received from the operation of thirteen steamers for the shipping board.

The summaries were prepared by H. T. Fielding, an expert accountant in the employ of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The defense objected to them on the ground that they represented solely the witness' interpretation of the books and counsel for the Morses are prepared to subject Fielding to a long and sharp cross-examination when the trial is resumed on Monday.

Eight of the ships operated by the transport company were built by the Morses for the government at Groton, Conn., and the other five were built at the Morse yard at Alexandria, Va. Fielding's summary with regard to the operation of the Groton ships purported to show that the company failed to account for $406,895, representing the difference between total operating income of $1,128,928 and actual operating expenses of $721,933.

The total operating income of the Virginia ships was placed by Fielding at $1,780,487, of which amount he claimed $938,760 was expended for accounts other than that of ship operation. The books indicated, he asserted, that most of this amount was used to pay bills contractey before the transport company entered into the operating agreement with the shipping board.

Prior to entering into this agreement, the Morses undertook to purchase ships, but the shipping board took them back on the ground that the purchasers had failed to make the cash payments.

POTHIER IS ORDERED DISCHARGED FROM CUSTODY

Boston, June 22.—In a unanimous opinion handed down here today the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ordered the discharge from custody of Ireland R. Pothier, of Central Falls, R. I., who has been held for removal to the state of Washington for trial on a federal indictment charging the murder of Major Alexander P. Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, Washington, in October, 1918.

Pothier, who has been in jail for nearly nine months, asked for release on the ground that the United States held no title to the Camp Lewis military reservation until a year after the death of Major Cronkhite. This contention the appellate court upheld, reversing the order of District Judge Brown in Rhode Island who denied Pothier's petition for a writ of Habeas corpus and directed his removal to the state of Washington. Pothier appealed from this decision to the United States Supreme Court and that tribunal sent the appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

POWERFUL BANKERS COME TO AID OF N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, June 23.—Wall street, shaken to the depths by the string of failures and the resultant loss of public confidence which followed disclosures of widespread bucketing of customers' orders, breathed its first long breath in a week today when powerful banking interests stepped into the breach to stabilize the market.

While the banking support was confined to brokerage houses holding membership in the New York stock exchange, the strength infused into that market carried prices up on both the consolidated and the curb exchanges, and a marked spirit of optimism prevailed. The rushing to cover by shorts aided in the strengthening process.

RULING BY UNITED STATES LABOR BOARD

Chicago, June 22.—The U. S. labor board today ordered the bridge and building employes of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company, and the Central New England Railroad company to take a new ballot in conformity with a provision of the transportation act, which provides that no carrier need deal with representatives of their employes chosen in part by non-employes.

The case was the result of an election held on the roads' question as to who should have the right to make an agreement covering working conditions of bridgemen, bridgemen helpers, carpenters, carpenter helpers, mason and mason helpers, painters and oils drivers

Cold Wave Follows Mt. Etna Eruption

ERUPTION DOES NOT TAKE THE FORM OF CATASTROPHE

Rome, June 22. (By the A. P.)—The situation growing out of the eruption of Mount Etna, "though grave, fortunately does not take the form of a catastrophe," says the semi-official Stefani News agency today in scoring some of the Italian newspapers which, it declares, "continue to publish exaggerated accounts and even faked photographs of the eruption."

There has been no loss of life, adds the statement, "and only a few houses and cultivated fields through which the lava flowed have been destroyed. At Castiglione the station alone was destroyed and railway communication interrupted. Though at Linguaglossa some houses were burned and the town may still be threatened the lava stream is more than a mile away.

It is expected that the lava flow from Mount Etna will continue, as the volcano is now at its period of greatest activity, but happily the lava's advance is slow."

Pope Pius has sent 25,000 lire more to the bishop of Acireale for relief work.

CREIGHTONS ACQUITTED BY JURY OF MURDER CHARGE

Newark, N. J., June 22.—Mrs. Mary Creighton and her husband, John, were acquitted by a jury late today of the murder by poisoning of Charles Raymond Avery, Mrs. Creighton's brother.

The jury was out but an hour, returning at 4.46 o'clock to deliver its verdict before a large crowd which had awaited the outcome of the case.

The defendants awaited the verdict with tense impatience, Mrs. Creighton clutching nervously at her handkerchief. She fell sobbing into her husbands arms when the verdict was read, and it was several minutes before either could recover sufficiently to acknowledge the congratulations of their counsel and friends.

Mrs. Creighton was taken back to Essex county jail to await trial on another indictmnt charging her with the murder of her mother-in-law, Mrs. John F. Creighton, who is alleged to have been poisond several years ago. Creighton was freed.

In addition to the murder charge, Mrs. Creighton must face trial on an indictment charging her with obtaining goods under false pretenses from a local department store.

Colonel George P. Vickers, counsel for the accused, told the jury in summing up that the state had failed to prove that there was apparently nothing wrong with Avery's physical condition. He also said the state had failed to show that Mr. and Mrs. Creighton had slowly poisoned the youth, as was charged.

The trial, which began Monday, is one of the most extraordinary murder trials on record here in that counsel for the defense failed to put in any defense, announcing yesterday after he state rested its case that no defense was necessary and that none would be offered.

The barrel proved of no avail today however, when a drum head blew out and he was seriously burned about the body and face by the contents, sulphuric acid.

ACTED AS A "FENCE" FOR STOLEN BONDS

Tulsa, Okla., June 22.—Closing on an alleged powerful gang, which, it is charged, has acted as a "fence" for bonds in all parts of the country, federal officers today arrested Ed Mank, of the Bank of Shidler, at Shidler, Okla., and Dell Williams, of Pawhuska. King is alleged by the officers to be the leader of the gang.

CANADIAN GOV'T DECLINES TO RETAIN RUM-LADEN SHIPS

Has Informed the State Department of Its Inability to Adopt the Suggestion That Papers be Declined Vessels With Cargoes of Liquor Destined to Ports in the United States—Liquor on British Liner That Arrived at New York Yesterday Has Been Undisturbed—Officials of Custom House Announced That Seizure Would be Made This Morning.

Washington, June 23.—The Canadian government has informed the state department, through a note from the British embassador here, of its inability to adopt the suggestion put forward by the department last March that clearance papers be declined to vessels with cargoes of liquors destined to ports in the United States unless a permit authorizing its importation was presented.

The department is announcing today receipt of the note explained that it had addressed a note to the British ambassador for transmission to the Canadian authorities drawing their attention to the difficulties experienced in enforcing the prohibition laws of the United States along the Canadian border. It was pointed out that the Canadian authorities permitted small motor boats to take on cargoes of liquor and to make regular customs clearances to ports in the United States, thus complying with the Canadian law which prohibits the sale of liquors to persons in Canada but allows the exportation to a foreign country.

It was suggested that since the importation of liquor into the United States without a permit was illegal the Canadian officials might be disposed to decline clearance papers to vessels with cargoes of liquor destined to ports in the United States unless permits authorizing importation were presented.

The reply of the Canadian government through the British ambassador, received Tuesday, stated that the export of liquor from Canada was not prohibited and there existed no provisions in the customs laws or regulations warranting refusal of clearance papers to vessels carrying liquor destined for a foreign port simply because its entry without special permits is prohibited.

LIQUOR ON BRITISH LINERS UNDISTURBED

New York June 23.—(By The A. P.) —Two ocean liners flying the Union Jack steamed into New York harbor today with excellent stocks of liquor for the trip home, despite the fact that Uncle Sam had said they must cross the three mile limit bone dry.

All day long the watertront waited to see federal agents pounce on the liquor, breaking the British government's seals with which the lockers were stamped and carrying away the wet goods. But late this afternoon the liquor remained untouched although officials at the custom house announced that seizures would be made tomorrow morning.

If this is done—and tonight there was every indication that it would—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who promulgated the dry ruling, may learn of his orders being carried out before he sails for Europe tomorrow on the Majestic. He is expected from Washington at any time.

One of the British vessels to defy the American dry edict and force a test case was the Cunarder Berengaria. She was expected. The fact that she intended to carry liquor across the three-mile line had been well heralded and treasury agents in New York had been deluged with orders from Washington up to just how to act.

The other vessel was the White Star liner Baltic. She took the waterfront by surprise. Shipping officers —except her own—were ignorant of the fact that she contemplated a show-down.

Both Berengaria and Baltic were allowed to pass through quarantine unmolested and proceed to their docks. Then came from the custom house word that nothing would be done until the captains had appeared with their manifests and applied for permits to retain enough liquor for medicinal purposes. After this, it was said, any surplus would be seized.

It was learned that at least in the case of the Baltic, which beat the Berengaria into port, the manifest had been presented and the medicinal liquor permit obtained. It was stated authoritatively that there remained aboard the vessel a substantial surplus of liquor and that federal agents would move on the two vessels in the morning.

Davy Jones stowed away many quarts in his locker as a result of the treasury department's ruling, however, for the Berengaria and Baltic both, tossed overboard at the three-mile all the liquor provided for the westbound voyage which the passengers could not drink. This was done with appropriate ceremonies Aboard the Berengaria, for passengers lined the rails at midnight with bowed heads and lowered into the deep a bottle of champagne wrapped in crepe and inscribed "To The Three-Mile Limit."

Further contributions were received by Davy from the decks of the United American liner Reliance, flying the Panama flag, which arrived bone-dry after tossing overboard her last six bottles. Passengers on the Lapland, a Red Star liner, succeeded in emptying the last before the limit was reached.

With two wet Britishers already set their hands, custom officials tomorrow face another deluge. Due in port is the French liner Paris. Before she set sail it was announced that she carried in her hold many a cocktail-shakeful for the homeward voyage and that on this select locker had been placed the seal of the French government.

And after tomorrow—more deluge for the ships arriving today confirmed reports that following in their wake were many other foreign craft, all anxious to test the decision of the United States government.

Newspapermen massed at quarantine early this morning to see what Uncle Sam would do to the west Berengaria, were permitted after they had received from their astonishment at the Baltics arrival, to view her liquor cargo.

CONVICTED OF BRIBING ENFORCEMENT AGENTS

Newark, N. J. June 22.—Samille H. Con'e, former chief of the field prohibition enforcement staff of New York, was convicted by a jury today of bribing enforcement agents to give protection to saloonkeepers and bootleggers.

There are five other indictments pending against Con'e and it was reported about the federal building after the jury came in that he would not be sentenced until one or more of these bills, involving several other persons have been pressed.

Con'e was tried on a charge of offering bribe money to Wilbert B Isey and Milton E. Swackhamer, prohibition agents of his office.

The charge against the former Dry Agent Grew, it is alleged, out of a plot in which seven Middlesex county saloon-keepers were to receive protection by the payment of $750 to be made in monthly payments of $100. It is alleged the saloon-keepers were to have been "tipped off" to the movements of the dry agents.

DEPUTIES WERE ACCUSED OF COMPLICITY IN RUM CASE

Mineola, N. Y., June 22.—District Attorney Weeks of Nassau county today began presentation of evidence before the grand jury in connection with the dismissal from office of Charles W. Hanson, Lafferty Williamson and Arnold Youngen, deputy sheriffs, by Sheriff Augustus D. Kelsey last Monday.

The district attorney indicated that the strongest evidence in his possession was a note addwrit by State Trooper Frank Kober, accusing the three deputy sheriffs of participating in a plot to land liquor in Freeport.

Governor Smith will be asked to investigate an alleged "massive bootleg ring" on Long Island, friends of Hanson said today. Neil Vanderwater, his attorney, said Hanson was ousted because "he performed his duties too well."

ENORMOUS SEIZURE OF ALCOHOL AND STILLS

New York, June 23.—Fifteen thousand gallons of denatured alcohol, 13 stills, 29 barrels of wine and thousands of counterfeit labels and revenue stamps were seized by prohibition agents in a raid in West New York, N. J., tonight. Four men were arrested by the dry forces, headed by R. G. Merrick, division prohibition chief of New York and northern New Jersey.

FIRST LIQUOR SEIZURE MADE ON FOREIGN SHIP

Mobile, Ala., June 23.—The first seizure of liquor under recent decision of the United States supreme court holding foreign ships could not bring liquor into ports as ship stores, was made here today when customs officials seized liquors aboard the Norwegian steamers Sousua and Smaragd. Ten quarts of gin and whiskey were taken off the Sousa, and two quars off the other vessel. The liquor seized on each vessel was listed on the manifest.

SPECIAL COAL INVESTIGATING COMMISSION OF BAY STATE

New York, June 23.—A special coal investigating commission of nine Massachusetts legislators conferred with W. H. Williams, president of the Hudson Coal company, today regarding obtaining a winter's supply of coal for their state. Since the passage by the Massachusetts legislature of the "pure coal bill" recently, which provided for condemnation of below standard fuel brought into the state, it was said many operators had threatened to refuse shipment to Massachusetts.

Owing to the difficulty in obtaining coal, Chairman Halels said indications pointed that the state would have no reserve supply of fuel as late as August 1.

Baking Powder Biscuits

Use level measurements. Sift flour one time before measuring. The liquid should be added slowly. A soft dough patted out with the hands will give a flakier biscuit than a stiffer dough rolled out. To mix the fat with the flour, cut in with knives or a biscuit cutter, or coat the hands with cold water and use the tips of fingers.

2 cups of John Alden Flour.
4 teaspoons of baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
2 tablespoons shortening.
1 cup milk.

(Skimmed milk is used instead of sweet, use ½ tsp. of soda and only 2 tsp. baking powder.)

Sift the baking powder, salt, and flour once, if it is used, with the flour. Cut in the shortening, add the liquid, and pat out on a floured board to about one inch in thickness. Cut with a biscuit cutter. Bake in a hot oven 12 to 15 minutes.

HAGEN SAYS HE WILL NEVER PLAY IN ENGLISH TOURNAMENT AGAIN

New York, June 23.—Openly unsportsmanlike tactics adopted by officials and the gallery at the British open golf championship tournament at Troon have caused Walter Hagen, to resolve never again to play in England unless he is assured of better treatment, he declared today on his arrival on the Berengaria.

"They vented in spite so badly that they acted like bad sports," said Hagen, who failed by one stroke to retain the British open title which he won last year. "What happened at Troon never has happened on an American course and probably couldn't happen. I probably am off British tournaments for life," he said.

"The feeling at Troon was most unpleasant and it was easy to see that every possible technicality which might have hampered us was freely resorted to."

The most glaring example of bad sporting tactics, Hagen said, was the eleventh-hour prohibition of the use of "punched clubs."

"The British authorities," he declared, knew long ago that we all, both British and American players, used punched clubs, and that the Americans, more partial to the use of clubs so treated had little time to prepare for play in which the punched clubs were banned. Yet, late Saturday afternoon before the Monday morning play was to begin, we saw a bulletin posted prohibiting our pet clubs and we had no chance to practice Sunday. If that wasn't bad sportsmanship, I'd like to know what was."

Hagen declared his belief that the course was a real test of good golf despite very unfavorable weather. He said his play in the preliminary round had been abominable but that he had picked up in the final.

The greatest handicap, he asserted, was the attitude of the galleries which, throughout the tournament attempted to bother the Americans. Every time an American player made a poor effort, he said, the galleries would break into derisive applause.

Y., June 22—The gold and blue oars of the navy eight and substitute four oared shells dipped into the Hudson at five o'clock this afternoon, fifteen minutes after the arrival of the Annapolis oarsmen at Highland on the west shore and down the river on a five mile spin. Coach Glendon sent his sweep-swingers, who are the last to reach here in training for the intercollegiate regatta on June 28.

On the return trip down stream to the boat house which the navy is sharing with the varsity and freshman eights of Washington, Glendon set his varsity sprinting against a wind which kicked up choppy water. For a mile Glendon held his varsity to a swift pace which spoke eloquently of the speed and endurance of the middies.

ART WILSON FEATURES AS HILLIES LOSE

Springfield, Mass., June 22.—Springfield broke Pittsfield's winning streak here today, winning 5 to 4. Fortune had the better of Webb, who was very wild. Oberc, in the first inning, hit his sixth home run of the season and his third in four games here this week. Mike Wilson was put out of the park for rushing Umpire Kuhn when picked off second in the fifth. Manager Art Wilson took his place and hit a double and home run, the latter coming with a man on base in the ninth. The score:

Pittsfield	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	3	—4

Webb and Wilson; Fortune and Davis.

NAGLE'S DOUBLE IN 11TH WINS FOR WORCESTER

Hartford, June 22.—Nagle's double in the eleventh with the bases loaded and two out gave Worcester a 4 to 3 victory over Hartford here this afternoon. Stryker kept Hartford's hits scattered in all but the fourth and eighth innings. The score:

Worcester	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	2	4	8	3

New York, June 22.—The New Jersey boxing commission today notified the New York athletic commission that it would suspend Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, unless he fulfilled his unexpired contract to meet Charlie White. The New York commission will consider the matter at its next meeting Tuesday.

The Leonard-White match was called off after the champion received an injury to his mouth which kept him out of the ring for some time. Meanwhile his manager, Billy Gibson, has matched him to Lew Tendler at the Yankee stadium July 23. White wants Leonard to box him first.

Gibson claims that his charge's contract with White last October was revokable at the champion's pleasure, but the Chicagoan denies this statement.

Tex Rickard, who is promoting the Leonard-Tendler mill, is supporting Leonard, but at least one member of the New York commission is reported to be siding with White.

NORWICH TOWN

The two graded schools at Norwich Town held impressive graduation exercises Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, which were attended by parents and friends. In all 50 boys and girls were graduated from this district. At the West Town Street school, Miss Florence M. Bennett, principal, the class numbering 12, included eight boys and four girls. This class presented to the school a framed picture of General John Pershing. A few weeks ago the class presented Miss Bennett a large May basket heavily laden with fruit, flowers and a box of choice candy; and it was from this same basket that the class members received their diplomas, which were tied with red, white and blue ribbon. At the exercises on Thursday Miss Bennett received a box of cut flowers.

The room was trimmed with red, white and blue crepe paper, and a large flag formed the background for the dramatized reading lesson entitled, The Man Without a Country. The flag was loaned through kindness of P. T. Connell, same as in former years.

In the gymnastic exercises, the girls wore white middies and dark skirts; and the boys wore light blouses and dark trousers.

Miss Hazel M. Cruthers, a former graduate, was pianist.

At the Town street school, William G. Tarbox, principal, a class of 18 was graduated, including 10 girls and 8 boys. The class motto was Work and Win.

Mrs. Richard Quinn was pianist during the exercises, which were attended by more than 75 people. The room was decorated with laurel, roses, daisies, peonies and evergreen.

The diplomas were tied in the class colors, green and silver. The honor pupils in their order of rank were Beatrice Sage Leonard, Evelyn Alice Brosofske, Jean Selbie Peck and John Everett Dodge. The class officers were: president, James Frederick Jones; vice president, Francis Mullen; secretary, Jean Selbie Peck; treasurer, Gwendolyn Virginia Jones.

At the close of the public exercises a very pleasant feature was introduced by the graduating class, when its members and teachers of this school, enjoyed a fine supper in the kindergarten room from about 5.30 to 7.30. The menu consisted of salads, sandwiches, olives, pickles, cake, ice cream and punch.

Those who served were the teachers of the school, Mrs. Samuel Lathrop, Miss Bessie M. Grant, Miss Elizabeth Lynch and Miss Susie Whitlesey, Principal Tarbox being a guest of honor.

The class presented Mr. Tarbox a fine automobile robe as a testimonial of the esteem in which he is held by its several members. This was the first time in the history of this school that a supper followed graduation festivities.

On Saturday the senior class from Town Street school, went on the annual pilgrimage to Hartford, chaperoned by Principal Tarbox, who with John Huntington, Dr. E. J. Jones, and W. W. Leonard, provided automobiles to convey the class. The party went by the new state road through Colchester.

After reaching Hartford the class had a most enjoyable time sightseeing, which not only was interesting, but instructive and historical. The class went to the State Library and Memorial, where they saw the original charter and state constitution; the World war collections; the picture of George Washington, painted by Gibbs-Stuart; pictures of all the governors of Connecticut, also the famous collection of coins.

In the capitol they saw the battle flags and other objects of interest and climbed to the top of the dome.

They also visited the Wadsworth Atheneum and the Morgan Art Gallery.

On the return trip they stopped at Highland Park and saw the cataract and Old Mine Hole where there was once a copper mine.

The entire party drove through Prospect street, and enjoyed the wonderful view of Hartford and the Connecticut valley, also drove through Elizabeth park.

For a number of years Principal Tarbox has indulged his senior class in this way, by giving of his time and interest in spending a day in real pleasure, with those who for a few years he has been associated with in their labors, to fit themselves in one of the important steps in their lives-times.

It is expected that Rev. [illegible] Thomas, pastor of Grace Memorial Baptist church, (colored) will conduct the Sunday afternoon service at the Sheltering Arms. The choir of that church will furnish the singing. This will be the last of the regular religious services held each week on COMING BACK TO NORWICH.

Norwich has had its Old Home weeks and taken great delight in welcoming back those of its former sons and residents who were able to return and join in the festivities. It has often been felt that it would be a delightful arrangement if some such affair could be planned for every five years. It offers one of those grand opportunities for renewing old acquaintances and giving the town some wholesome advertising that is missed if such affairs are held only each half century.

For the first time today Norwich will be given the opportunity to extend the cordial hand of greeting to that robust organization of former Norwich men now located in New York city, the Norwich club of New York. Whether they come singly or as a body they can always anticipate a welcome. We are always glad to see and hear them, to glory in their success and be a bit proud of the fact that they are representatives of the Rose of New England still, though they live and do business in the biggest city in the world.

This Norwich club idea is an excellent one. It not only permits of the getting together of the sons of Norwich who are living in one community but it keeps alive that interest in the old home town which is most commendable.

It would be a capital idea if those in other large cities where the number is sufficient might follow the same plan. There is a common bond of relationship among all former residents and especially among those who were born and brought up in this city. There is an interest that is whetted by just such an instrumentality. Happy would Norwich be to entertain many Norwich clubs of different cities at one time or at different times throughout the year as they might find it feasible to make such pilgrimages as is being inaugurated today by the Norwich club of New York. The visit for the week end is an excellent idea and Norwich asks for nothing better than it might become an annual fixture.

DANGERS FROM FIREWORKS.

For a number of years now strong emphasis has been laid upon the importance of safe and sane Fourth of July celebrations. The propaganda has been sound and it has made such a favorable impression that Independence day celebrations have greatly changed in character. There is not necessarily any less feeling or display of real patriotism, but there is a noticeable and an appreciated reduction in the number of fatalities incident to the celebrations. The good work of the safe and sane Fourth idea has been noted on every hand. It is a grand good thing.

There are nevertheless those who are being claimed as victims of fireworks either on that day or others.

Norwich has already had one case of serious burns because of clothing catching fire from a sparkler, claimed to be harmless.

Providence reports its first fatality from fireworks, a child having received such burns that she died after a companion had held a chemically treated stick, alleged to be perfectly safe, against her clothing.

These are probably only two of many instances of the kind at this date from just such causes. It indicates that certain fireworks are apparently being tolerated by parents under the impression that no harm can come from them, either to the children or to property. Regardless of the claims these are glaring examples to the contrary. The danger is clearly established, and if we are to judge by these cases it would appear that the particular types of fireworks used in these instances are being badly misrepresented.

The good results of the safe and sane movement having been experienced it becomes apparent that there are some danger spots which call for careful attention on the part of parents. There is nothing worse than an article branded as perfectly safe which is the direct cause of a fatality. Likewise it emphasizes the fact that in all things there should be reasonable care.

DORMANT ACCOUNTS.

Considerable attention is being given at the present time to the fact that there has just been discovered a bank account of the late Ira D. Sankey in a Brooklyn bank, where it has remained untouched for a considerable period of years which had not been included in the settlement of the Sankey estate and which might have remained there indefinitely but for the fact that the banks are required to publish the list of those which have not been added to or claimed within a certain number of years.

What has happened in the Sankey case, now that his wife and children have died and the amount called for by the book, $7,150, must go to a grandchild, is no different than happens in numerous cases, though the amount may be larger.

For some reason the bankbook seems to have disappeared. Whether it was lost, thrown away or destroyed by accident no one knows. Probably no different course was followed by the evangelist in connection with this account than with any other, except that when the time came to carry out the provisions of his will there was no record anywhere of that account and seemingly none of the family knew of it.

Each year there are lists of dormant accounts published by banks, because the institutions are out of touch with the owners. Sometimes those in whose name the books are taken out are unacquainted with the fact and they never have reason to keep in touch with them. Many are the reasons for the sleeping accounts as investigations invariably discloses, but the wisdom of requiring the lists of such accounts to be published at stated periods is accentuated every time such lists appear.

Likewise there is shown to those who take a lesson from what they read the benefit that is derived from the placing of savings in a bank and allowing the interest to accumulate. They may be dormant accounts but they are accumulating more interest each year.

THE THAMES RIVER SURVEY.

Recognition of the need of improving the channel of the Thames river to the extent of authorizing a survey to determine what work should be undertaken is given by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors. This outcome of the local efforts must be regarded as a satisfactory response to the appeals made by the local chamber of commerce in behalf of the commercial interests of Norwich and vicinity. It is one of the steps preliminary to any government expenditure in behalf of a wider and deeper channel between Allyn's Point and this city, but it is a step that gives hope of a realization of the much desired and needed betterment.

This deepening and straightening of the channel means much to this city. It is through it that it will be able to get the full benefit of its water facilities. Handicapped at the present time by a narrow and shallow channel which restricts the type of craft that can be employed, water transportation is limited. It is unfair to take the amount of water transportation at the present time as a basis for judging the advantage of such service to the city. Utilization of it has been restricted and business that would have been handled by water has been forced into other channels.

Plenty of other instances show what has resulted from river and harbor improvement, and Providence is an interesting example. With a channel that will accommodate the vessels in the coal and lumber trade and boats in regular passenger and freight service for the benefit of industries in Norwich and vicinity and there will be a greatly increased tonnage. That is the aim of the survey, and the improvement which it is hoped will follow in due time.

RUNNING AMHERST.

Much has been said in regard to the situation at Amherst college where the resignation of President Meiklejohn has been asked and given, and yet in spite of all that has been said and done there has been no clear statement as to just what the rumpus is all about. In general it is made clear that the president is out of tune with the trustees. He has likewise had his troubles with the faculty, but that hinged, it would seem, upon his unwillingness to acknowledge the fact that his guidance of the institution should be in accord with the views of the majority of Amherst trustees.

President Meiklejohn has said that the higher institutions of learning will not be run right until they are run without trustees. That doesn't give much hope, according to his view, that they will ever be run right.

There has been no question as to his value to the institution as an educator but it is of course an intolerable situation when the head of a college takes the position of virtually defying the majority of those who select him and who are entrusted with vital duties in running the college.

Perhaps President Meiklejohn is right and that there should not be any trustees, but until that time comes he should either submit to the system that exists or go where there are no trustees. He might do just as he pleases in regard to his own school or college, but that is not the situation that existed. He hoped to do that in an institution for which others were responsible and he was endeavoring to go contrary to the majority views.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Yesterday was certainly a great day for the blues.

Amundsen is not a quitter. He is not foolhardy but knows enough to say "no" when "no" is called for.

Norwich will be pleased to welcome today those New Yorkers who haven't and cannot forget the place of their birth.

When it is announced that there's a cure for rheumatism it will interest a great number, but it will also reveal many skeptics.

Swelter there days and no doubt you'll have plenty of company. Keep cool and you'll be lonesome or in front of an electric fan.

New York decides that its old High bridge is all right if it is somewhere else. How nice if all problems could be settled that way.

We are beginning to understand why the shore resort keepers felt so sure of a good season. Did they feel a hot wave coming?

That those aboard are skipping the sizzling heat ashore will make those critics of the Leviathan's trial trip all the more disgruntled.

An auto crash in New Hampshire was heard half a mile away. The lesson of such affairs should be heard across that and many other states.

Mussolini has a chance now to show what influence he has upon Mt. Etna. And yet a better test could have been made in preventing any eruption.

No sympathy can be wasted on those twelve students who refused their degrees at Amherst. They were fully entitled to them, earned them and won them under the Meiklejohn regime to which they are so loyal but no one is being hurt in refusing them except themselves.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

There was not what one might modestly call a conspicuous display of flags on Flag day. It is the opinion of the rank and file evidently. Be as it may and the little contribution she may add to the glory of her country is not on a par with the labors of Washington, Lincoln and others. In this respect doubtless the rank and file do not err in judgment. Still it is true that this patriotic woman's gift, and what may since eventuated from these small beginnings are worthy of some form of general observance. The flag has always stood for something with the American people. It may be that Americans and other hyphenated Americans think we make a fetish of it. There may be some nations that think our respect for the flag borders upon the idolatrous because our attitude in this respect differs a good deal from theirs. At any rate, it is worth while on Flag day to make a generous display of flags.

"Shoemaker, stick to your last," is an old saying, and one of very significant application. It is another way of saying "Jack of all trades is master of none." One, however, can hardly help wondering if there are not spots of weakness even in this good old orthodox saying. This "last" to which a "shoemaker" is supposed to "stick" is variable in size. At one time he is trying to peg all around a clod-hopper's brogan, and the area is considerable. It can be estimated only by long measure. At another he is stitching a lady's dainty kid slipper, but he has to use a different "last." The shoemaker has to work for different people, on different sizes of shoes, of greatly varying quantity and quality, and then, after all, the "shoemaker's last" is very elastic. Yet it serves to remind us that we cannot spread ourselves over too much territory without getting thin—at least in spots.

Notwithstanding the above criticism, which possibly may border on the finical, the writer fully believes that the old adage "Shoemaker, stick to your last" has practical application. It never applied to any one person more absolutely than to William Jennings Bryan, and to no subjects ever handled by the human mind than those of science and theology so tragically mishandled by this supposedly prominent man. This "shoemaker" is nothing but a cobbler, and the "last" he ought to "stick" to is law and politics. But even with these he cannot be said to have been an unqualified success. Having failed to make a great name in statecraft, with which he had some acquaintance, he has recently posed as an arbiter in theology, in which he knows next to nothing. This was an unwarranted departure from the "shoemaker's last," but when he tried to force his temperance gag on every Presbyterian it was the "shoemaker" himself committing suicide.

Is there anything in liberal female education that is detrimental to motherhood? This statement is not made with the least prejudice to college education for women. There is no reason why the girls of the family should not have the same high privileges that are accorded to the boys. The nineteenth amendment to the federal constitution puts a serious obligation upon parents who can afford it to prepare their daughters for the duties of citizenship as well as the sons. Where the children have the desire and ability to profit by college instruction, it is difficult to see why the question of sex should enter at all. And yet the survey of the birth rate among educated women is not reassuring. I will not say that it is alarming, but it certainly makes us thoughtful. This survey shows that the graduates of some of our female colleges have only one child for every three graduates. Is this patriotic?

One of the mental states back of graduation is thoughtfulness. If it is every present in the real of the subconscious. It isn't often present on the surface; neither is it worn like the boutonniere as an exterior ornament. But is is always there, just beneath the surface bobbing up often enough to make the graduate a bit uncomfortable. "Am I to justify the expense paid by my parents for my education? Am I quite sure what these four long years of college training have qualified me for? Am I to make a fiat failure of this game of life, or shall I attain to some measure of success? After all, will not the main issue be determined by my own personal initiative? If I follow the ministry, law, medicine, journalism, teaching, or what not, will not my career lie chiefly in my own hands, and not in another's?" Now these are questions that the graduate cannot easily avoid. If he does avoid them it will be fatal. Success is never imposed upon us from the outside.

Nations, like individuals, are likely to be swept by waves of emotion. It has always been so, and probably it always will be. Of course a nation is something more than the sum total of its inhabitants, yet it is an aggregation of individuals and as such it has many of these individual characteristics. In our early political life there was the wave of indignation over the tyranny of the mother country. Decades later this wave took the form of disgust with the institution of slavery. Then temperance had its inning, and still later the right of women to vote. Sociologists are calling our attention at present to a crime wave that is moving over the country and is trying to point out its cause and offer its solution. But neither is the cause nor the solution perfectly clear. Some have put the blame on foreignism, but foreignism is not prominent in the south where crime is most rampant. Why should such an old, staid Presbyterian city as Memphis have such a frightfully high record of crime, while Portland, Oregon has a clean slate, with Hartford and Worcester nearly so. What is the explanation?

While some people are not so quite cock sure as others just what Jesus would do under the complicated conditions of modern life, there is no question as to some of the things. He would see and comment on. He would see that blindness was not confined wholly to ancient Palestine. With the history of two thousand years from which to gain experience, it is reasonable that Jesus would wonder why men and women would be doing about the same foolish things that they did in His day. He would still find them "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel," instead of a camel, he would find them swallowing something worse, i. e. booze. He would find them making a fuss over the impurities of drinking water, and yet drinking what they know may make them blind. Blind men are still here.

The annual flood of baccalaureate addresses, or sermons, for the most part have come—and gone. One notices in all of them no attempt whatever to be profoundly theological or philosophical, which was once expected of a college president, who was generally an orthodox minister, who seized upon the commencement season as the time to deliver the truth "as it was once delivered to the saints" from all heretical teaching. Today there is a sort of suspicion that the truth is self defensive, and that man-made theology is not absolutely infallible. It is refreshing to hear the modern president put emphasis where it belongs; that is, applying the principles of the spiritual life to every form of human activity. They thunder as truly as old Isaiah did against the nation that forgets God and the moral law. They are sounding the right note.

FIRST HALF CENTURY OF THE TYPEWRITER.

The eighth Anniversary of the invention and manufacture of the first practical writing machine falls this [illegible] and is to be observed by the Herkimer County (N. Y.) Historical Society.

The invention of this machine was largely due to the patience and persistent labors of Christopher Latham Sholes, printer, editor and dreamer. In February, 1873, soon after he had obtained his letters patent, Sholes sent a model to Ilion, in the Mohawk Valley. There later in the year the first typewriter was manufactured.

The typewriter has today such an essential place in human activities that it must appear remarkable to the present generation that it is only fifty years old. Men less than that age can recollect when it began to be a factor in business life. The first typewriter was a crude affair compared with the machine now in use. It had no shift key mechanism, it wrote capital letters only, and the thing that struck the most casual observer was its obvious sewing machine influence —"in fact, it had sewing machine written all over it."

Sholes was not by any means the first man to conceive the idea of a writing machine. The records of the British patent office show that in January, 1714, a patent was granted to an English engineer, Henry Mills, for "an artificial machine whereby all writings may be engrossed in paper or parchment so neat and exact as not to be distinguished from print." Mills left no model, drawing or description of the machine. None is known to exist. He wrote himself down in history, however, as the first person known to have conceived the great idea.

The first American patent on a writing machine was granted in 1829 to William A. Burt of Detroit. The only model of this machine was destroyed by a fire in the Washington patent office in 1836, but a replica of it was made from documentary description and exhibited at the Chicago world fair in 1893. Other writing machines were invented by Americans, among them Oliver T. Eddy of Baltimore, J. M. Jones of Clyde, N. Y., A. Ely Beach and Dr. Samuel W. Francis of New York and John Pratt of Centre, Ala.

The usual description of these machines was "it did good work, but it was too slow." It was evident that even in this stage the outstanding merit of the writing machine lay in its time saving service. The typewriter did not enter the practical stage until a machine was invented which far surpassed in speed the utmost possibilities of the period. Every year more men were becoming conscious of the need of a practical machine, and more men of inventive minds were turning their thoughts to the matter.

In the winter of 1866-67 in a small machine shop in the outskirts of Milwaukee began the acquaintance and association of the three men who invented the machine to be manufactured six years later at Ilion. These men were Sholes, Carlos Glidden and Samuel Soule. Sholes was the central figure of this association. He never faltered in the face of difficulties and discouragements and he never abandoned hope of ultimate success.

In one of his fits of despondency he wrote: "You know that my apprehension is that the thing may take for a while, and for a while there may be an active demand for it, but that, like any other novelty, it will have its brief day and be thrown aside." A typewriter a novelty! But there was the same speculation in the early days of their use regarding the railway, the telephone and the automobile. Sholes did not know until the last years of his life how well he had really built.

Twenty-five or thirty experimental models were built by Sholes and his associates between 1867 and 1873. The first model, now in Smithsonian Institute, the patent of June 23, 1868, is a machine so crude that it would hardly be recognized as a typewriter. The last model of the series was the one which was taken to Ilion in 1873 and shown to the Remington Arms Company, where the contract for its manufacture was made.

Sholes called his invention a typewriter, the name which has become universal among English speaking people. It was the first use of the name! Burt called his machine a "typographer", Francis called his a "printing machine", Beach called his an improvement in printing instruments for the blind." Jones gave to his machine the name of "mechanical typographer" and Pratt called his a "pterotype". Those who came before Sholes seemed to have failed as much in finding a proper name as they did in their inventive efforts.

The introduction of the typewriter was beset with many discouragements. It is a curious thing that the early catalogues indicate that the first in the list of prospective users was the court reporter. Next in order were lawyers, editors, authors and clergymen. The business man was apparently considered the poorest prospect, for at the end of the list we find "The merchant, the banker, all business men, can perform the labor of letter writing with much saving of valuable time." The typewriter made its initial bow to the public at the Centennial. "Curiosity there was in plenty," it was said, "but it was curiosity mingled with some ridicule and very little serious interest." Few machines were sold; about the only revenue derived by the exhibitors was from samples of typewriting sold as curios for twenty-five cents apiece.

Sholes is said to have sold his royalty rights for $12,000. "This was the only reward, so far as we know," says the biographer, "that he ever received for his priceless invention and the years of labor he had bestowed upon it." He died in 1890. When near death some one told him he had done a wonderful thing for the world. He replied: "I don't know about the world, but I do feel that I have done something for the women who have always had to work so hard. This will enable them more easily to earn a living."

The knowledge that he had rendered service to the world of womankind seems to have given to this modest, gentle, kindly man the greatest happiness which he derived from his invention. Another man close associated with the history of Herkimer County, General Francis E. Spinner, treasurer of the United States from 1861 to 1875, was the first to advocate the employment of women in the government departments at Washington. At the end of his official career he said that this fact "gives me more real satisfaction than all the other deeds of my life."

The introduction of the typewriter and the admission of women to business came about in the natural course of events. The civil war had cost so dearly in the lives of men that at its end the employment of women became necessary. The typewriter appeared when it was demanded by the increasing volume of business and more expeditious means of communication. Woman's help was needed in the offices of the [illegible] writer became an important medium by which through her [illegible] and ability she won economic freedom and a place in the business world.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

According to reports from Washington the selection of the democratic floor leader to succeed the late Claude Kitchen, apparently is as good as settled. The office is expected to go to Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, in many respects one of the ablest democratic members of the house. Entering congress eighteen years ago, as the representative of the Ninth Tennessee district, he has remained there ever since, and is now an experienced parliamentarian and a man with mastery of lawmaking technique. Mr. Garrett is a lawyer by profession, as so many of the southern political leaders are. Born in Weakley county, Tenn., in 1875, he received his schooling at Bethel college in his native state. Before taking up the study and practice of law he had had experience as a country newspaper editor and as a school teacher. His first experience in politics and office holding was as a master of chancery.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE

The best commentary on the Bible the world has ever seen is a holy life. He who said, "I am the Light of the World" also said "Ye are the light of the world". The source of the world's light in either case is the same, for ours is a derived, a reflector light. Our graces of character are like the rays which illumined the face of Moses when he came down from the mount of God; they are but a reflection of the light of the knowledge of the glory of God shining in the face of Jesus Christ. Our graces come from His grace. Like the stars, planets our lights come from looking upon the glorious face of the sun. If we have any power to illuminate the path way of life, it is because the Son of Righteousness hath risen upon us with healing in His rays.

We grow in grace, in all grace, in all graces, as we grow in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. He that hath the Son hath light as well as life for in Him was life and the life was the light of men. The light which shines from Christian character reaches the heavens from which it came, A Christian shining on earth tells of a Savior reigning in Heaven, and filling all things. We are a spectacle unto angels as well as unto men. "To the intent that now unto principalities and known by the church the manifold wisdom of God." The Church is God's prism in which shows the manifold grace no less than the manifold wisdom of God.

Our Lord never bids His disciples to let their light shine until He had shown them the seven-fold rays which make the white light of Christian character. Humility, contritions, meekness, mercy, purity, Peace, Endurance. Each is blessed, Peter, who heard the sermon on the Mount reproduced it in a sentence when he said "Finally, be ye all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender hearted, humble-minded, not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling, but contrawise blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye might inherit a blessing.

It is this inherited blessing which we are to share with the world and which blesses him that giver as well as him that receiver, if the unanswerable argument against unbelief in the life of the believer. Ye are living epistles known and read of all men, not in tables of stone, but in tables that are hearts of flesh. The stars no more tell us that, the sun is shining somewhere than there living epistles tell of a light that never was on sea or land save as it shines in the face of Jesus.

No marvel that city hath no need of the sun or the moon to shine upon it for the Lamb is the light thereof. There can be no night there where each face is bright with the joy of the Lord. Our Lord's first and last command on the mount of Ascension was to let the light shine. Ye shall be witnesses unto me. It is by letting the light shine the world is to be known the truth of Christianity, the last time our Lord was seen by mortal eye was when He was walking amid the golden candlesticks Rev. 2.1. to see if this command were obeyed. The churches are His golden candlesticks whose office it is to send afar the light, the beautiful light of God.

OBITUARY.

Edward Clarke Potter

Edward Clarke Potter of Greenwich, the distinguished sculptor died on Thursday evening at the Hotel Mohican in New London after an illness of several weeks.

Funeral services were held on Friday afternoon conducted by Dr. D. T. Marshall, president of Connecticut College and the interment will be at Enfield, Mass. Mr. Potter's summer home.

Following the traditions of his scholarly family Mr. Potter entered Amherst with the class of 1882. After college he began his art studies in Boston and later in Paris.

In 1891 he joined the notable company of architects, sculptors and painters who created the Columbia exposition held in 1893. Mr. Potter's standing as a sculptor of the first rank was established by the work done by him for this greatest of all the world's fairs, especially by the beautiful quadriga which crown the peristyle and which was afterwards reproduced in bronze for the state house of Minnesota.

Among the many equestrian statues executed by Mr. Potter are the mounted figures of Washington in Paris and of Hooker at Boston done in collaboration with Daniel C. French. Grant of Philadelphia, Slocum at Gettysburg. His latest work was the memorial to Col. Boiling at Greenwich, the first in the aviation service to fall in the world war.

In his private life Mr. Potter was a man of great simplicity and personal learning. He possessed a genius for friendship and his death will bring a keen sense of loss to a wide circle.

Mr. Potter, who was 65 years old is survived by Mrs. Potter, the daughter of Gen. Du Mont of Washington, D. C., and three children Mrs. Henry Bill Selden of New London, Miss Ruth Potter of Greenwich and Nathan D. Potter of New York.

FUNERALS.

Arthur H. Brewer.

With a very large attendance of relatives and friends the funeral of Arthur H. Brewer was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock from his home, No. 57 Broad street. In attendance were representatives of the civic, banking and fraternal circles of the city. The Episcopal funeral service was conducted by Rev. Richard R. Graham, rector of Christ church, assisted by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church, who read an Episcopal hymn, Peace, It Is I.

The honorary bearers were Oliver L. Johnson, Nathan A. Gibbs, Charles R. Butts, Henry A. Tirrell, Frederick W. Lester and Arthur M. Brown. Burial took place in the family lot in Yantic cemetery, Rev. Mr. Graham conducting the committal service. The casket was covered with a pall of orchids and lilies of the valley done by Mr. Brewer's three daughters and Mrs. A. H. Chase.

Undertakers Church and Allen had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The Thames National bank, Norwich Savings Society and The Edward Chappell Co., with all of which Mr. Brewer had been associated, were closed Friday afternoon.

John B. Porteous

The funeral of John B. Porteous was held Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from his home, 23 Carleton street, Portland, Me., with a very large attendance. Practically all of the employees of the Porteous, Mitchell and Braun store on Congress street, of which Mr. Porteous was one of the founders, were at the funeral.

The service was conducted by Rev. Henry Stiles Bradley of the State Street Congregational church. There were a great many beautiful floral forms. Burial took place in Evergreen cemetery, Portland. The bearers were C. S. Judson of California, Mr. Porteous' room mate at Yale, Charles E. Chrain, George A. Hinkley and Fred C. Hussey of Portland, Stuart Webb and Belcher Waugh of Boston, George Mabee of New Haven and Alfred J. Sweet of Auburn.

The Porteous & Mitchell store in this city was closed Thursday afternoon.

In its issue of Thursday the Portland Evening Express, the leading paper in Portland, said of Mr. Porteous:

He came here at the time the business of Porteous, Mitchell & Braun Co., was organized in 1906 and devoted his best energies toward building up the establishment. He was secretary of the corporation at the outset and became vice president as well as secretary in 1910. Cooperation on the part of Mr. Porteous and Mr. Braun was reinforced by the loyalty and best efforts of the store employes. The policy was that the business is a big partnership and those relations were estimated equally by both men.

The store was closed today and will remain closed tomorrow. It is a house of mourning and there is no thought of business or the ordinary day's routine in the face of a bereavement that has struck in the family circle of every person associated with him, whether for a long or short period.

Until forced to undergo a serious surgical operation a year ago he had been very active and found time to become associated with many leading clubs here, to become interested in many social activities and he was a most popular host as well as being a welcome guest in scores of Portland homes.

Despite the precarious state of his health Monday, he enjoyed the many felicitations on his 62d birthday and outwardly gave evidence that he would be restored to health.

Mr. Porteous was one of the summer colony at Prout's Neck and was a member of the Prouts Neck Country club, Portland County, Cumberland, Portland Athletic and Portland Yacht and Purpoodock clubs, Chamber of Commerce, Portland Lodge of Elks and Cumberland County Fish and Game Society.

He was one of the directors in the Portland Industrial Development Co., which acquired a tract of land in Deering several years ago and where the American Can Co., factory was built.

THE CHURCH JUST AFTER THE FIRE

RESTORING NORWICH TOWN CHURCH THAT WAS BURNED EASTER SUNDAY

The work of restoring and rebuilding the Sacred Heart church at Norwich Town, which was badly damaged by fire on Easter Sunday, is proceeding with all the speed possible although the contractors are being considerably delayed by the non arrival of needed material.

The brick wall of the church remained standing after the fire and will not have to be rebuilt, but a complete new roof will have to be put on and the interior is to be remodeled, according to the plans that have been made. The work will be so extensive that it will probably call for all of the $40,000 which was the goal in the building campaign a short time ago.

One of the principal changes to be made will be in the front entrance. This will be through a large central doorway, instead of through the tower as before. The doorway will open onto a vestibule from which doors to the right and left will open into the auditorium. Over the main door will be a rose window in beautiful colored glass.

The tower doorway will serve as an additional entrance and a safety exit. The stairs to the choir gallery, which were formerly in the main auditorium, are to be placed in the tower and the high choir gallery is to be dropped somewhat. It will be necessary to install an entirely new organ as the old one was completely destroyed by the fire.

There will also be stairs from the tower into the basement and there will be two other exits from the main auditorium at the altar end of the church. The rector, Rev. C. W. Brennan, has been particularly solicitous that the new plans for church should provide means for emptying the building quickly in case of need from fire.

The roof will be replaced in the same general form as before and will be of slate, but a change will be made in the ceiling of the main auditorium, which was formerly of metal and followed the shape of the peaked roof. The new ceiling is to be arched and will be of plaster, panelled in the natural wood, cypress being used for the interior work.

The sacristies at either side of the altar, one for the priests and the other for the choir boys, will be restored as before and there will be a confessional arranged at the front of the church to the left of the main entrance.

Art glass will be provided for the large windows at the sides of the church and for the small arched windows in the clear story under the eaves. Offers to put in half a dozen of these windows have already been made to Father Brennan and it is expected that many of them will be provided as memorial windows by members of the congregation.

It is hoped that much of the beautiful white marble Gothic altar that was thoroughly smoked and scorched by the fire that raged hottest there can be cleaned and restored. However, the marble cross at the top of the altar was broken to pieces by the falling roof and many of the carved and decorated parts were chipped and broken, while the Mexican onyx columns at the front of the altar were badly affected by the fire and it is not known what success will follow an attempt to treat the marble and the onyx.

It is hoped to have the work finished in time to enable the congregation to re-enter early in the fall if not sooner. Carroll and Fenton have the general contract on the building, the plumbing contract has been let to Patrick McMahon and figures are being received on the electrical contract.

SMALL BOY DROWNED IN THE YANTIC RIVER

George Pilewacik, nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Pilewacik, of 54 Spring street, met death by drowning in the Yantic river Friday afternoon shortly after two o'clock while learning to swim under water. The boy with his brother, Louis, and several other boys was wading in the river off Falls avenue near the Central Vermont tracks. It is said that the boy said he could swim under water, and a few minutes later his brother and the other boys saw him crawling near the bottom trying to regain his depth, as he was being carried out into deep water by the current. He could not get back to shallow water and was carried out beyond his depth.

Employees of the Standard Oil company office notified police headquarters of the drowning and Officers Michael Carroll, Daniel J. O'Neil and Hugh McAvoy were sent to the river bank. Securing boats the officers dragged the river and the boy's body was found in about four feet of water by Officer Carroll who brought it to the surface with the aid of a rake. Artificial respiration was resorted to but the child was beyond aid.

The child's parents were notified and his father arrived at the river bank shortly after the body had been recovered. The child is survived by his parents, two brothers and two sisters. Medical Examiner C. C. Gildersleeve and Coroner J. J. Desmond were notified of the drowning.

SEDGWICK RELIEF CORPS MADE GIFTS TO PRESIDENT

A farewell to its president, Mrs. Jayne K. Seed, with gifts and good wishes for a pleasant voyage made an unusual feature for the meeting of Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, No. 16, at the Buckingham Memorial Friday afternoon. Mrs. Seed is to sail in a week for England and will remain there until the first of September in the interests of her health.

In the business part of the meeting circular letter No. 2 was read and one new member initiated.

Following the business meeting, the 76 members present formed for a grand march into the dining hall, with a lot of good natured fun at the expense of Mrs. Seed, who was given the post of honor at the tables where the following menu was served: Crab salad, rolls, pickles, assorted cake and coffee.

After a recitation by Mrs. Grace Manning a purse of gold was presented to Mrs. Seed by Mrs. Clara Burns, senior vice president, and there were many individual gifts besides that will be useful to Mrs. Seed upon her trip and stay abroad.

WEST SIDE TURNOUT FOR 15 MINUTE SERVICE

At the next meeting of the court of common council there will be a public hearing on a petition of the Connecticut Company for permission to install a turnout on West Main street near the junction of Mt. Pleasant St. Manager Samuel Anderson of the local division of the Connecticut Company said Friday that the proposed turnout is for the purpose of providing a fifteen minute service between Franklin square and the West Side during rush times, such as Labor Day and holidays.

The turnout, if constructed, will be a great convenience to the traveling public, especially on the three days of the New London County fair as it will enable the trolley company to move the crowds faster as fast as in the past. The plans call for a turnout large enough to accommodate five or six cars.

THREE DIVORCES GRANTED TWO DECISIONS RESERVED

Three divorces on the uncontested list were granted here in the superior court by Judge George E. Hinman Friday and in two other cases he took the papers and reserved decision.

George E. Ratelle of New London was granted divorce from Lillian Bireau Ratelle, now in parts unknown. The ground was desertion from Nov. 29, 1918. They were married at Hudson, Mass., on May 4, 1914.

Rebecca Crandall and Peter Vlae gave testimony in the case.

Esther M. Gehrman of Boston was given divorce from August V. Gehrman Jr., of Colchester on a cross complaint, in which desertion from May 1, 1916 was alleged. She was given the custody of their six year old son. They were married at Manchester, Conn., Dec. 4, 1915, the wife's maiden name being Macdonald. The husband had brought a divorce suit on the ground of desertion on Sept. 16, 1916. There was an allegation of intolerable cruelty in the cross-complaint.

On the ground of intolerable cruelty since Jan. 1, 1919, Mary Tyler Brown of New London, was granted divorce from Walter Brown of parts unknown whom she married at New London on February 21, 1918. She was granted change of name to Mary Tyler.

Mrs. Brown showed that her face is disfigured from treatment by her husband. Corroborative testimony was given by Mary Burke and Mrs. Frances Carter.

Judge Hinman took the papers and reserved decision on the suit of Theodore Martin of New London against Josephine Grinson Martin for divorce on the ground of adultery since July 1, 1922. The couple was married June 5, 1917. The husband seeks the custody of two sons, aged 4 and 2 years.

In the suit of Frank Gianchini, a New London barber, against Mary Crapa Gianchini of parts unknown adultery was alleged. The couple was married in 1917.

Counsel for the petitioner showed letters in the case written to the wife by another man and also the wedding rings sent back to the husband by the missing wife. The letters were read to the court.

The husband told of a relative coming to live in the family and that seemed to start the trouble. He also told of tracing his wife to Willimantic and Springfield.

Judge Hinman took the papers.

The case of Mary De Sylvia vs. Joseph De Sylvia was postponed as was the case of Annie Grose Stevens of New London vs. Benjamin Stevens of Rockland, Me.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Another real estate transaction of interest and just completed is the purchase by Trinity Greek Orthodox church of the tenement block at the southeast corner of Water and Cottage streets from the Taunton Cotton Mills company, which is affiliated with the Connecticut Mills Company.

George P. Perris, a member of the church, said Friday that the structure will be moved back along the line of Cottage street and away from Water street later in the summer and will be remodeled to suit the purposes for which it is intended. The building is to come into use as a rectory and community house. Rev. Stephen Demopoulos, the pastor, will occupy the second floor of the building as a rectory, while the lower floor will be arranged for use as a community center, for business and social gatherings and for a school wherein Greek children of Danielson will study Greek two hours each day in addition to their work in the public schools.

Tenants now occupying the building will be given ample opportunity to vacate before the work of moving the building and remodeling it begins. The building is to be moved primarily to obtain more ample and sightly grounds about the church, which is next south on Water street from the building just purchased.

Trinity parish has progressed materially since the church building was erected a few years ago. It is not so strong financially as yet, however, to carry out the projects it has in mind without the cooperation of the public and an appeal may be issued in the near distant future in aid of the parish and the work it is doing for the Greek residents here and hereabouts.

Friday morning the funeral of Mrs. Natalie Lefevre was held from her home in Dayville with funeral services at St. Joseph's church in that place at 9 o'clock, Rev. Ignatius Kost being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. There were many relatives and friends in attendance. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. Mrs. Lefevre's sons and sons-in-law acted as bearers. Louis E. Kennedy was the funeral director.

Announcement was made Friday of the resignation of James Bacon of Goodyear as a member of the board of selectmen. Mr. Bacon a republican member of the board, is going to locate/acate in New Jersey, where he has business interests, and where he has been much of the time for months past. He has been a resident of the board of selectmen. His departure will b regretted by he many friends he has made here.

Mr. Bacon is succeeded on the board by Napoleon P. Gingras of Dayville. Mr. Gingras is engaged in business at Dayville and is an active and progressive young man, much interested in public affairs and with the promise of being an efficient official.

A call, as printed elsewhere in this paper today, has been issued for a special town meeting to be held on Friday evening of next week for the purpose of passing upon a matter of which there was mention in this paper Friday morning—requesting the state highway commissioner to remove a row of trees in Reynolds St. The selectmen have been prompt in responding to the petition filed with them for the meeting and those who have promoted the matter are likewise equally anxious to dispose of the matter as soon as may be possible in the interest of preventing serious accidents that may occur at any time on account of the trees.

Commencement week with its various interesting activities came to a close Friday evening with the usual formal reception tendered by the Killingly High school Alumni association in the state armory to the senior class, graduated Thursday evening. As is the invariable rule this most important of the summer social functions in Danielson attracted a large attendance, including a very numerous representation from classes of other years. Following the reception there was a period of dancing, which came to an end shortly after midnight.

Lower temperature came Friday as a welcome relief from the withering heat of the three previous days, deliriously, the strain had become so great that many were being made ill or affected by exhaustion. The recording thermometer at Woodward's store showed the maximum reached during the heat wave as 96 degrees—attained on Wednesday—and duplicated within a fraction of a degree on Thursday. In the territory hereabouts not a drop of rain fell during the period of torridity, though neighboring communities found some relief in showers.

That carrier pigeon that appeared at a local market one morning this week and after inviting itself to a feed loitered about all day resting from what may have been a very long flight is still in town. For the past two or three days it has shown an inclination to take a course in bookkeeping or to land in some political berth, for it has been a self-invited guest of Arthur A. Dean, clerk of the board of selectmen, and has made its headquarters in the selectmen's office in the town hall building. Mr. Dean has regularly fed the pigeon and it appears content. Friday afternoon it was perched on a window ledge of the selectmen's offices waiting to be allowed to enter. Included in the pigeon's activities has been its investigation of the interior of the sedan of Irving W. Davis. Observers saw the pigeon fly through an open window of the car and perch on the back of the seat, where it remained in apparent contentment. As a care free, friendly bird, this pigeon holds the record hereabouts.

Of general interest to the public and to former service men who have been overseas is the announcement by the Brooklyn Library association that it will have on exhibition at the library in Brooklyn Friday of next week a series of prints of soldiers of France and devasted areas in France. The association has arranged these prints for exhibition next Friday evening and cordially invites the public of all this territory to view them as guests of the association. The pictures are exceedingly interesting and Danielson people will find it well worth while to view them.

Keeping up the splendid effort that is being in town hereabout in aid of the Nurses Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital, ladies of Brooklyn have arranged a lawn party for Thursday afternoon of next week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Fields in Brooklyn. John J. Whitehead, director of the campaign, is to make an address during the afternoon.

At the home of her parents in Pawtucket this (Saturday) evening Miss Lulu Soule of East Killingly will be united in marriage with Herbert Reynolds of Thompson. A number of East Killingly people will attend the wedding.

Rev. Luther W. Smith of Newton will conduct the Sunday morning service at the Baptist church.

The principle Elton knight of the Danielson graded school is making satisfactory progress toward recovery undergoing an operation for appendicitis this week at the Day Kimball hospital.

Raymond A. Preston will give a short organ recital at the union service to be held at the Baptist church.

A possible presidential ticket: Henry Ford and Georges Chevrolet. Also suggested: Babe Ruth, Ben Turpin, Pancho Villa or Madame Fatima. There's nothing like going the limit and having it over with.

Proctor Aldrich, organized of the parade to be given Fourth of July at East Killingly, is going to have the greatest array of decorated cars in line ever seen in that community. Motorists are cordially invited to enter.

At the Methodist church in Oneco Saturday of next week the wedding of Miss Edith May Hill, granddaughter of Judge Harris, and Francis Bushey will take place. Rev. John Von Deck will be the officiating clergyman. Miss Edith Marrotte will be bridesmaid and Joseph Bayles best man.

PUTNAM

The directors of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital has perfected a plan that will doubtless net a considerable sum for the fund during the Elks' fair. Letters have been sent to all leading movie stars asking for gifts of autographed photographs that may be auctioned off for the benefit of the hospital during the fair. The response to the letters have been generous and courteous. Mary Pickford has sent an excellent picture and Richard Barthelmess sent one of himself and one of his co-players, Lillian and Dorothy Gish. Charles Ray sent one fine likeness of himself and another in character. Others heard from with accompanying photographs and expressions of best wishes for success are: Constance Talmage, Eugene O'Brien, Katherine Macdonald, Norma Talmadge, Alice Terry, Laurette Taylor, May Murry, Jackie Coogan, Rex Ingram, Viola Dana, all Metro stars. Al Jolson sent three photos and a characteristic letter. David Wark Griffith sent an excellent signed photograph of himself with a letter saying he had requested his leading players to help the plan which they have done. Other senders are: Gaston Glass, Kenneth Harlan, Lionel Barrymore, Ethel Shannon, Dorothy Dalton, Nitu Naldi, Charles deRoche, Conrad Nagel, Lila Lee, Betty Compson, Beatrice Joy, Anna Q. Nilsson, Rebe Daniels, Claire Windsor, Frank Mayo and Marion Davies. The pictures are all personally autographed as in the request for them it was made known that they would not be worth so much signed by a secretary.

A statement that has appeared in the press that the mill tenements owned by the Adams Manufacturing Company on Main street have been secured by the local union of the American Association of Textile Operatives, for use of the striking operatives of the Manhassett Manufacturing Company who have had to leave their tenements is denied by Albert Owler, agent of the Adams Company mill. Mr. Owler says that he has never seen, talked with or written Oliver Christian, secretary of the union who has been here conducting the strike and that no promise has ever been made that former Manhasset employes could have tenements of the Adams Company and that no one in the employ of the company has ever made such a promise. He also stated that Mr. Christian was not correct when he gave statements to the press that the union had found homes for its members by hiring the Adams Company tenements. Mr. Owler adds that he had uses for the houses his company owns in Putnam and for that reason alone would not let them to anyone prior to their being renovated and at the time immediately preceding the company's transferring its plant from North Scituate to this city.

Many out of town guests are expected to attend the wedding next Tuesday, June 26th, at noon, of Charles Van Brunt Cushman and Miss Mary Elliott, at the Congregational church, Thompson Hill. Rev. Mr. Cushman is the only son of Dr. Allerton Cushman of Washington and New York and a grandson of Mrs. Cortland Hoppin of Pomfret. Miss Elliott is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Elliott of Thompson and a granddaughter of Hon. and Mrs. Joshua Addeman of Providence. Monday evening a dance will be given for Miss Elliott preceded by a dinner at the Thompson Country club for the bridal party at the home of Mrs. Normah B. Ream.

On account of adverse criticism the baseball team that has been furnishing Sunday diversion has been disbanded. The team will, however, immediately be reorganized and strengthened by a new manager, Ernest Lorrian. Lorrian has been scouting for players and has signed some old time Putnam favorites. The pitching staff is comprised of Rip Nelson, Caffrey, Beausoleil and Tetreault. In the infield will be Latour, Jarvis, Coderre, Benoit and Collet Nelson. In the outfield, Faucher, Carey, or Carey, McKenna or Caron.

Count Vonsiatsky-Vonsiatsky and Countess Vonsiatsky-Vonsiatsky are the guests of the countess' mother, Mrs. Norman B. Ream, at the Roam summer home in Thompson. The marriage of the couple a little over a year ago received considerable notoriety as did the appearance of a woman in Europe claiming to be the count's wife.

Mrs. E. H. Snow and daughter, Geraldine, will spend several weeks at Lord's Point before going to their new home in Admore, Pa., where Mr. Snow is to teach next year.

The management of the Elks' fair has again assured the event against rain. Last year it collected $1,500 in insurance and the policy was payable if two-tenths of an inch fell. This year the policy calls for payment if one-tenth of an inch falls. The policy is for $1,000 on each of the five nights and $2,000 on July 4th, a totall of $7,000.

As early as five o'clock Friday morning automobile parties bound for the Yale-Harvard boat races at New London began passing through Putnam and were still passing through after the noon hour.

The seventh grade, Israel Putnam school, went to Roseland Park, Friday morning, where a picnic was held.

The senior reception and dance of the graduating class of the Putnam High school was held in Union hall, Friday evening. The music was by the Acadia orchestra. The commencement exercises close this (Saturday) with the annual picnic.

Many of the small tables on the west side were filled with the regular hotel guests. Dinner was served as follows:

Following the banquet Harvey C. Perry, president of the Westerly Board of Trade, acted as toastmaster and presented the speaker, Morris Sherpe, of Washington, D. C., who took for his subject, "Business Is Business." Close attention was given Mr. Sherpe by the board of trade members, who appreciated the common sense way in which the subject was handled. Following the talk adjournment was taken to the Majestic theatre on Bay street, where the Brown University Dramatic society presented in three plays of the little theatre to an appreciative audience the following programme: The Contant cover, J. H. Speenhoff; Evelyn Rivers, R. F. Day; Cecil Harbertop, S. I. Wilkins.

The first violators of the automobile speed laws this year were next presented in which Thomas E. Brown, chief of police, appeared as complainant in the four following cases:

John Nardone, 168 High street, Westerly, R. I., operators' license No. 45582, car No. 25188. Charged with speeding thirty-two miles per hour on Atlantic avenue, Pleasant View. Cars passed going in each direction. Plead guilty. Judge Michael J. Terano stated that he would not tolerate any speeding in congested districts, that when an operator took out a license he knew that the speed law was 15 miles in built up sections and 25 miles per hour outside. The judge stated that at the beaches, especially at Pleasant View, caution was to be used by operators but when the offenders appeared before him the second or third time they would be severely dealt with. Nardone was fined $15 and costs.

Francis Marcille, New London, Connecticut, operator's license No. 113019, car No. 99096. Charged with speeding 40 miles an hour on Atlantic avenue, Pleasant View at 3.45 p. m. A large number of cars were passed going in each direction. Was trailed from post office. Judge Terano called Special Traffic Officer George Mathewson to stand to ascertain to know the traffic conditions. Defendant pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and costs. These infractions of the speed laws occurred June 11th.

WHEN PEOPLE LIVED IN THEIR STOVES

A STORY OF PRIMITIVE TIMES

In the early days man lived in his stove! An astonishing statement, no doubt, but it is true. Because in the primitive times his crude shelter was devised that he might have a warm place in which to shelter himself and in which he might do his simple cooking away from the interferences of the unfriendly element.

In fact, we are told that the word "stove," in its original form, meant "a heated room."

Just visualize this ancient ancestor of ours. He roamed the woods at will, living on the berries and fruits he found at hand, and sleeping under the stars or in the kindly shelter of the rocks or in caves.

From his still more primitive ancestor he had received the great legacy of fire, and his simple mind learned how it was possible to start a new fire at will. He realized that he was comfortable near a fire; his body was warm and glowing and it chased away the evil spirits of cold and numbness.

But there was a constant battle between heat and cold. A fire built out in the open had to combat fierce winds and icy blasts. Gradually he learned to protect his fire—first with large stones, placed close to the blaze. Then came the time when he constructed rude shelters, large, conical structures made from branches of trees held together by clay, mud and grass. These rude dwellings protected him from the rain, but they were cold and damp until he began kindling his fire within them.

Now he had a heated room—"a stove." Imagine his delight with this great advance in civilization. He had a place where he was assured of being dry and warm, and he did not complain of the dense smoke that filled his room. Some of the smoke, it was true, curled out of the little opening at the top, but if he was annoyed by the smoke, he was soothed by the warmth, and our ancestor was not given to complaining.

And in this heated room—this stove—he did his cooking. Above his fire he suspended a pole, held in place by props driven into the ground at either end. On this pole he hung the fish he caught in the nearby stream or the small animal he had captured or killed with his rough weapons.

He was content. His home was a warm place and a place where he could cook. His home was his stove.

Contrast this picture with the modern home, and its many varied rooms. Now we have our living rooms, our dining rooms, our sleeping rooms. Modern invention has showed us how to distribute heat without the attendant discomfort of smoke.

Then we have our kitchen, an entire room set aside for the modern "stove," and if the housewife is wise, it is a Sterling.

A sturdy, never-failing range, finished attractively in glossy black or soft gray enamel. It uses either coal or gas, and uses them economically. In fact, the Sterling Range, by actual performance, will bake a barrel of flour with a single bod of coal.

No smoke, no annoyance, no uncertainty! Think of the transition from the heated room of the dim ages to the Sterling of the present century—yet the Sterling may be placed in your kitchen with less effort than was expended by that primitive man in building one weak little fire in his primitive home—his "stove," because your Sterling Dealer offers a convenient budget plan of payments which enables the Sterling to practically pay for itself by the savings it effects.

Doing One Thing Well

A fundamental rule of fine craftsmanship is to concentrate on one especial task.

Each unrelated effort is time and energy wasted. Each fickle departure is a side road leading away from the main goal.

Excellence is never won by vacillation. Its first condition is absolute constancy of endeavor.

In 1914, the builders of the Cadillac introduced America's first eight-cylinder automotive powerplant—the V-Type Cadillac engine.

They were fully convinced that for power, smoothness and dependability, the V-type eight-cylinder principle held the highest possibilities, and they were resolved to concentrate on the development of this one principle.

Ever since that time these engineers and craftsmen have applied themselves wholeheartedly to the purpose of improving and refining the V-Type ninety degree eight-cylinder Cadillac.

All of their skill and resources, all of their undoubted genius in engineering and manufacturing, were and are devoted to this one task.

What has since happened is automotive history.

The builders of the Cadillac have produced more than 150,000 V-Type ninety degree eight-cylinder engines and not one of those engines has ever been replaced by the factory for any reason.

Moreover, in recognition of the supremacy of the V-Type eight-cylinder principle, and of Cadillac's position as its leading exponent, more people have purchased Type 61 than all other cars combined at or above its price range.

...1 one-half cups pastry flour,

...one-half teaspoon salt, cold wa-

...Just use just enough water to

SUMMER REQUIREMENTS

Dear Sister: There is no mistaking the fact that summer is with us and we must look well to the question of sanitation in the home.

The cellar is perhaps the most important consideration. It should be kept dry and sweet. Cement floors are porous and need to be water-proofed with one of the special paints made for this purpose. The cellar walls should be whitewashed every summer. If moisture stands on the inside, they should be brushed over with a solution of one part hydrochloric acid (poison) to ten parts of water, and then coated with all mixed mortar. Air-slaking a bushel of lime in the cellar will dry it out temporarily, for in the process there is an absorption of moisture from the atmosphere.

The refrigerator is of equal importance. It must be kept absolutely clean: All foods in it should be kept covered. Spilled liquids should be wiped up immediately. Cooking soda used as powder is splendid as a cleanser, and it practically polishes the surfaces of chests lined with aluminum or zinc, as well as sweetening the air. Bits of charcoal (changed frequently) may be placed in corners of the ice box as an air sweetener. But these sweeteners will do no good unless you give your refrigerator a good scrubbing once a week. Take out the racks and scald them thoroughly, then place them in the sun to dry. Wash the interior of the ice chest with a small scrubbing brush and tepid water containing a little dissolved soda (never use soap.) Wipe out with a damp cloth, then with a dry one. Clean the drain pipe with a long handled brush and flush it with a gallon of boiling water which contains plenty of washing soda. During this cleaning, the ice may be removed and wrapped in a piece of carpet or in newspapers.

We all know how to deal with flies—but do not let us neglect this enemy of sanitation! Screen not only the room windows and doors, but the windows of cellar and attic, where these pests may enter and later gain access to the main part of the house.

The garbage pail should be scalded out thorough every few days in warm weather. To make this easy, line it with newspapers after it has been emptied and cleaned. The garbage man will take away the newspapers with the garbage—thus leaving the can almost unsoiled; it may be scalded and relined with fresh newspapers.

Yours for the good of the Corner.

GINGERBREAD AND GINGER SNAPS.

Dear Editor and Sisters: What a beautiful but hot day for the picnic. Hope everyone had a delightful time.

I am sending this wee some ginger-bread and ginger snap recipes which will doubtless interest many. We are not satisfied unless there is some of one kind in the house.

Sugar Gingerbread: Cream together one cup granulated sugar and one-half cup of butter; add one cup of sweet milk, two beaten eggs, and two cups of flour sifted with one-half teaspoon of soda and one teaspoon cream of tartar. Flavor with one-half teaspoon ginger and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. This gingerbread is quite soft and may be cut in squares before it is taken from the pan.

Sour Milk Gingerbread: Cream together one cup granulated sugar and two-thirds cup of lard. Add one cup sour milk in which one teaspoon soda has been dissolved, a pinch of salt, one cup molasses, one teaspoon ginger and one cup of flour. Bake 35 minutes in a good oven.

Ginger Snaps: Soften one-half cup of butter and add it to one cup of molasses, add one-quarter cup of water in which one teaspoon of soda has been dissolved, one and one-half teaspoons of ground ginger and flour enough to roll rather soft. Cut with a circular cutter and bake 10 minutes in a quick oven.

Ginger Snaps, No. 2: Rub together three-quarters cup of sugar and six tablespoons melted lard; add one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon soda dissolved in one-fourth cup warm water, one cup Barbadoes molasses, two teaspoons ground ginger, one teaspoon salt and four cups flour. Add a little more flour to roll out, keeping as soft as possible. Roll very thin, shape with a cutter, and bake 8 minutes in a hot oven.

Soft Gingerbread: Mix together in a bowl one-fourth cup of granulated sugar, one-half cup of molasses and one teaspoon of soda dissolved in a very little water. Pour one-half cup of boiling water over one-fourth cup of butter or lard and when it melts add it to the bowl. Also add one-half teaspoon of ground ginger, one and one-half cups of bread flour and one beaten egg. Turn at once into the pan and bake 25 minutes in a quick oven.

CROCHETED COVER FOR HOT WATER BAG.

Dear Corner Sisters: Go where you please and you will find those of us who knit and crochet or do fancy work of a similar nature.

I recently sat in a waiting room beside a stranger. As I took my "pick-up" crochet work out and got busy, she did likewise and it was not long before we were having an interesting chat. We admired the work of each other and I received the directions of something which others might like, a cover for a hot water bottle which will take a two-quart rubber hot water bottle.

Crocheted Hot Water Bag Cover: Materials, two balls of number three white crochet cotton and a size one crochet hook. Ch. 85, 3 d. c. in fourth ch., ch 1, sk. 2, 3 d. c. in next st., ch. 1, sk. 2, 3 d. c. Repeat to end of chain, join to d. c. in beginning of row, ch. 4, 3 d. c. over ch. of previous row, ch. 1, 3 d. c. over next ch. Continue the same way until 21 inches are made. Then work one row of s. c. on top of last row, join, ch. 3, sk. 1, 2 treble crochet, ch. 1, sk. 1, 1 tr. c. all around, join, one row of s. c. all around. Join ch. 3, one row of d. c., join, one more row of d. c. between each d. c. of previous row, join 1 s. c., 1 s. c., 1 tr., crochet between d. c. of previous row, sk. 2 d. c., 1 s. c., 1 d. c., 1 tr. Crochet into next space. Continue around, then finish off. Drawstring: Make a chain 33 inches long and work 1 row of s. c. Put a tassel on each end. Join bottom of bag with slip stitch.

USEFUL HELPS FOR HOUSE KEEPERS.

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: Put a bit of fresh bread with your brown sugar, also your powdered sugar, and you will be surprised at the results. It will be wonderfully softened. My cookies were so hard we couldn't eat them. I put a plate of them in the bread box for a short time and they softened up fine.

When I was baking beans last winter for the family I baked a large quantity. What the family didn't wish I canned. I had my jars all ready sterilized with boiling water as for fruit. Then fill jar with beans, place on rubber and cover (also sterilized). Place in water and boil one hour. Then seal. They will be like fresh baked beans.

To remove iodine stains, wet with cold water, hold over a hot stove. When the heat strikes it the stain disappears. Wash as usual.

When making starch prepare more than usual amount and use this to wash your dishcloth with or use left-over starch for that purpose.

When you have fresh fish for dinner, save the heads, or other unedible portions, and bury them in the dirt by the geraniums.

I always save orange peelings and dry them, then put a generous piece in the tea-canister. It gives the tea a delicious flavor. If you have trouble making your stove polish stick, put in a spoonful of table syrup when mixing it.

Perhaps the readers don't know the value of a hatpin in the kitchen for testing cakes. It is much better than a fork for trying potatoes and other vegetables.

How to clean a carpet by sprinkling a thick coating of starch: work well with a broom, let it stand two days, then sprinkle with salt (coarse) and sweep until every bit of salt and starch are removed.

KITTY LOU.

WAYS OF DOING GOOSEBERRIES AND OTHER BERRIES.

Dear Social Corner Sisters and All: I will take a few minutes this morning to write a few lines as Norma asked for recipes for using gooseberries. I will send my way of doing.

Gooseberry Jam: After cleaning the berries (you know by washing the berries in cold water and rubbing between the hands a good many of the ends will wash off and save a good deal of time). Weigh the berries while dry and to every pound of berries add three-quarters of a pound of granulated sugar. Put over a slow fire and cook from two to four hours, or until thick. I made a few of the berries to form a little juice to start them, otherwise will have to add a little water. They burn easily. When done put in hot glasses as jelly. Then put in glasses. When cold cover with paraffine.

Gooseberry Marmalade: Cook the berries as for jelly and sift through a colander (you can also use the pulp from the jelly), add three-quarters as much sugar as pulp after sifted. Cook slowly until quite thick, as when cold will be firm. Put in jars as jelly.

All kinds of berries may be used the same way.

Gooseberries may be canned and added with non-acid berries. I can all berries without cooking. Sterilize the jars and while hot fill with uncooked berries. Fill jars with hot water to overflowing. Seal at once and place in pails or any receptacle so as to cover the jar with boiling water. Cover and let stand until cold, usually 24 hours. The jars may be filled with hot syrup. I have kept berries this way for three years without spoiling. The berries treated this way are more like fresh ones. The juice if not wanted when serving can be used in water for a cold drink or more sugar added and boiled down to a syrup. I have made jelly of the juice so nothing is wasted.

So sorry to lose Mandy from our circle. We will greatly miss her smiling face and her interesting talks. She was always so willing to give. These sisters are gone from us but not forgotten. Her son has my sympathy and all others in bereavement.

ALL CANNOT BE GREAT BUT ALL CAN HELP.

Dear Social Corner: I read all the letters and wish I could send in something that would be interesting. But it is impossible for all of us to be great. So I will do what I can as my friend of long ago, Lydia Starkweather, would say when I asked her if she could make a dress out of three yards when the patterns called for six. I was shut in all winter for I did not dare to venture on the icy sidewalks. In February, was taken ill and did not get out until April. I just avoided having these lines on my grave stone:

This dear little spot is the joy of my life. It raises my flowers and covers my wife.

But praise be I am now to practice "domestic science" and hope to be well enough to attend some of the meetings of the Social Corner, for I have never been to any of the good times.

Resolved: I am wondering where you live and do I know about the fire destroyed your home? But out of evil cometh good. You are free from much house work this summer and can take life easy. And you will be so glad when you get into a new home. Now you a No. 4?

Anistatia: I am glad you liked the pudding. Will send in a few first aid hints for I take it you are a mother.

For a rusty nail accident pour turpentine at once on the affected parts.

For burns put on scraped raw potatoes instantly and change as often as they get warm until the pain is relieved.

Olive oil will remove gum from a child's hair as if by magic.

When a child puts a bean in his nose do not try to poke it out. Put a little cayenne pepper on his upper lip and he will sneeze the bean out.

Hope you are enjoying this nice weather.

PICES. (March 8).

THE ART OF STARCHING.

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: I think the starching of clothes is truly an art which is always with us.

I like a material to have the appearance of being as new as possible and produce a gloss and finish, which will resist moisture and soil.

I wonder if all housekeepers are aware that there is a variety of starches which may be used for laundry work. There are corn, wheat, rice and blended starches. I think the rice has the least stickiness and corn the greatest. Wheat starch has more pliability.

The secret of making starch free from lumps is this: First mix the starch with a small quantity of cold water in order to separate the tiny granules thoroughly. Then pour directly into it the correct amount of boiling water, stirring vigorously while pouring. The temperature of the boiling water will burst the starch grains and that produces a thickened mass. The quantity used in laundry starch to four quarts of water—about two tablespoons corn-starch or three-fourths cup wheat starch.

For a very thin starch such as I use for curtains and very fine pieces, four quarts of water and about two

APPROVES THE IDEA.

Dear Editor and Sisters: I was very much interested in the article S. E. D. wrote about "Smiles and Careworn Looks" and I agree with her perfectly, especially, when she said "When the load gets too great, set it down for a few minutes." Try it, sisters, and see how wonderfully it works. And, writing about "smiles" I will send a little piece of poetry I saw one day, The Value of a Smile:

Nobody ever added up
The value of a smile;
We know how much a dollar's worth,
And how much is a mile;
We know the distance to the sun,
The size and weight of earth;
But no one here can tell us just
How much a smile is worth.

I want to say to Felix that I hope when she writes that essay, the prize which she will be sure to get will not be a loving cup.

Chauffeur: Don't you think the "girls" were pretty good considering it was a Sunday school class picnic? Hope you will join us again and get better acquainted.

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Hope you are all well. What funny weather we are having? I have not much to write, but want you all to know I am still interested in the Corner.

CANNING THE YEAR AROUND

Dear Corner Members and Friends: All the Corner page has not been filled the past few weeks I will add my bit.

I hope all the sisters are well and able to be out and enjoy the beautiful weather. Each season brings its own beauties and nature is grand at all times, but in June it seems as if everything was at its best that it's a joy just to be alive and out of doors to enjoy it.

One sister wrote of canning asparagus to cook it one hour each day for three days. Why all that work? I have canned it for several years and do the same as with other green vegetables. Use the cold pack method and cook it three hours, all at one cooking. I have never lost a can yet.

Some one said the canning season had started, but with me it is the year around, as last winter we bought a quarter of beef and all that we did not use fresh I put into cans and it's certainly handy when company comes unexpectedly near noon time. It takes but a few moments to have your meat ready. I also made a lot of mince pie meat and canned it. Then our apples were not keeping well so I canned those. Our squash crop was a failure but some kind friends gave us some and as they were going the same way as the apples, they too were late cans.

In all I put up about 60 quart jars of different things last winter. This spring have canned dandelion greens, rhubarb and asparagus.

There has been quite a good deal written about old songs. I too love to hear them all and I think a good one is Count Your Many Blessings. If we would do that when we feel we do not have all we would like or see someone we think is better off than ourselves. I don't believe we would complain very much. To me friends are one of the greatest blessings. They are something that money cannot buy. This spring I was sick with a severe attack of the grippe and it was then I realized fully how much friends could be to us.

Jim: K is rather late but I wish to extend my congratulations as I know from years of acquaintance that you have won a prize.

E. L. M.: Your good letter received some time ago and will try to answer soon.

I started to write a few lines and have reminded myself of a friend now passed away, who used to write very long letters and his wife told him when he got started he was too lazy to stop. So I will stop before this finds the waste basket.

Best wishes to all.

DORINDA.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Social Corner Editor: A few weeks ago I attended a Social Corner gathering as a guest. I was invited by many to join, so am writing to know if I may be admitted as a member. If so, I will sign myself

BESS STARBRIGHT.

APPROVES THE IDEA.

Dear Editor and Sisters: I was very much interested in the article S. E. D. wrote about "Smiles and Careworn Looks" and I agree with her perfectly, especially, when she said "When the load gets too great, set it down for a few minutes." Try it, sisters, and see how wonderfully it works. And, writing about "smiles" I will send a little piece of poetry I saw one day, The Value of a Smile:

Nobody ever added up
The value of a smile;
We know how much a dollar's worth,
And how much is a mile;
We know the distance to the sun,
The size and weight of earth;
But no one here can tell us just
How much a smile is worth.

I want to say to Felix that I hope when she writes that essay, the prize which she will be sure to get will not be a loving cup.

Chauffeur: Don't you think the "girls" were pretty good considering it was a Sunday school class picnic? Hope you will join us again and get better acquainted.

One of the girls.

RED ROSE.

STILL INTERESTED IN CORNER.

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Hope you are all well. What funny weather we are having? I have not much to write, but want you all to know I am still interested in the Corner.

Kitty Lou: How are you? Fine, I hope. I miss your letter when you don't write. Hope your family are all well. I will close now and try and do better next time.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

GOING OVER TO HELP MOTHER.

Well, after the two little rabbit bunnies had peeped into Mrs. Sparrow's nest to see her little ones, as I mentioned in the last story, the old gentleman rabbit said: "Now what shall we do?"

"I think we ought to go over and see mother," said the loving little bunny boy. "Today is cleaning day and I think she might need some help."

"Very well," said the old gentleman rabbit and off they hopped. They didn't take the Luckymobile with them as it was only a short distance from Uncle Lucky's house on Lettuce avenue and Carrot street to the dear Old Bramble Patch, and, besides the Old Red Rooster was giving the Luckymobile a good overhauling—covering the cushion seats with nice flowered cretonne and painting the outside a bright crimson.

"I'm dreadfully busy and need your help."

Well, by and by, not so very long, they reached the Old Bramble Patch.

Little Lady Love opened the door and let them in. She had a white cloth tied tightly around her head and a big feather duster in her hand.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, "I am so glad you came. I am dreadfully busy today and I need help. I telephoned over for Grandmother Cottontail but she is very bad with the rheumatism and can't come.

"Well, we're here to help you," said the dear, kind old gentleman rabbit, tying a big apron around his neck and one on Little Jack Rabbit.

Well, sir, after they had taken up the carpets and beaten them out in the yard, polished the furniture, waxed the parlor floor and cleaned Lady Love's best silver tea set, poor old Uncle Lucky was all tired out and he stole into the garden to smoke one of his cabbage leaf cigars.

Pretty soon, not so very long, Little Jack Rabbit came running out calling "Uncle Lucky! Uncle Lucky Lefthindfoot!"

"Well, what is it?" asked Uncle Lucky, smiling sheepishly, which means that he did not like to be caught off duty. "Must I hang up the curtains now?"

"Mother wants you to come in and have tea," answered the little bunny boy, "and, Oh, she has baked the nicest apple pie!"

"Apple pie!" exclaimed the old gentleman rabbit, jumping up and throwing away his half smoked cigar, "that's my favorite!" so he and the little bunny hopped back to the house.

My, how nice and spick and span that little kitchen was. Everything was bright and shining. The kettle was singing merrily on the little stove and the little table, covered with a snow white cloth was set for tea.

Uncle Lucky was so delighted with Lady Love's apple pie that he asked for a second and third piece, and when tea was over he sat back in the rocking chair and soon fell asleep.

And in the next story, I'll tell you some more about Uncle Lucky and his little nephew, Little Jack Rabbit.

THE PORTEOUS & MITCHELL CO.

NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the citizens of Norwich were making plans for a general observance of the Fourth of July. A committee appointed for the purpose met to consider plans and decided that the best way to celebrate the day was to hold an excursion to Newport. With the exception of a fire on Franklin street the week was a quiet one. Items of interest taken from the files of The Bulletin of fifty years ago follow:

Monday, June 16, 1873—The first of a series of games between the Modoc base ball club of New London and the second nine of the Academy of Norwich was played at New London Saturday. Following is the score: Academy 29; Modoc 22.

The selectmen have greatly improved the north road of Greeneville, taking out all the large boulders that have made it so uneven and considerably widened it, making it one of the best pieces of highway in town.

The Rt. Rev. John Williams, bishop of Connecticut, paid a visit to the parishes in this city yesterday, preaching and confirming classes at Christ church in the morning and Trinity in the afternoon. Large congregations witnessed the interesting and sacred exercises.

Tuesday, June 17, 1873—The Stonington association will hold its next annual session with the Baptist church in Groton on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The opening service will commence on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock with sermon by the Rev. G. L. Hunt of Mystic Bridge.

An alarm of fire was sounded at 2 o'clock this morning which succeeded in bringing out the department and raising a huge uproar. There appears to have been no fire whatever.

Stalker's New England circus will exhibit here next Monday afternoon and evening.

Joseph Plaut leaves today for New York, and thence to Europe by the steamer Cimbria, sailing Wednesday.

Wednesday, June 18, 1873—At a special meeting of the D. R. Holmes steam fire engine company, No. 1, of Greeneville held Tuesday evening the following were elected officers in place of those resigned: Foreman, Henry Irish, first assistant, John Shelley, second assistant, Alex Balfour.

As the 2.40 train came up from New London Tuesday morning it was thrown onto the connection track by a misplaced switch where a number of men were repairing the track. The engine and tender were thrown from the track. The engine was soon replaced on the track and taken to New London.

There is a story going the rounds of the press that one Josiah Brown, formerly of Greeneville, has been recently skinned alive by the Indians in Texas.

Thursday, June 19, 1873—There is a fair prospect of celebration in this vicinity on the fourth. The Modocs and Peck Hollow Rangers will parade. Excursions will be made to the seashore and picnics in the woods and other little amusements will be indulged in.

Lanman and Sevin's soda fountain did a lively business yesterday its copious draughts being free to every comer, in honor of the event of the day and many good wishes were expressed for Mr. Lanman and his beautiful bride.

About 12 o'clock last night the court house bell struck an alarm of fire and brought out the hose carriages. The bright light over the tops of the buildings showed it to be the barn of the Horse Railroad Company in the rear of Hall's block.

The barn was occupied by E. M. Frazier and Company as a stable and N. Upham and Son for barn and storage. Mr. Frazier loses about $500 on stock, casks, hide, grain, hay and straw. Mr. Upham's loss is large as he had many patterns stored there. The barn was valued at about $1500.

Friday, June 20, 1873—A meeting of citizens to consider the best means of celebrating our national holiday and to hear the report of a committee appointed at a previous meeting, took place last evening.

The committee reported that it was thought best to have a first class excursion to Newport and that they had inaugurated arrangements for the same. The Catholics will celebrate with the companies that propose to parade our citizens will have a respectable celebration after all.

A false alarm of fire brought out a portion of the fire department last night. Later a second alarm was rained at midnight, caused by some persons singing in a loud voice in the vicinity of Franklin square.

Saturday, June 21, 1873—The steamer Grapte State of Hartford has been secured for the citizen's excursion on the Fourth of July. She has been remodeled and enlarged and has had several staterooms added, so that she will be in tip top shape on that day.

Pretty warm weather but the aged orphans still perspire over the mallet and ball on Robbin's lot.

We are not much troubled with ladies coming into our office for old papers to manufacture bustles with, but the editor of one our exchanges undoubtedly feels bad about it from the following specimen of his growl:

It is disgusting to see young girls parading the streets of a quiet and unassuming little town with a tucked-up-behind-wiggle-darned-phoolative-ness larger than themselves".

George Harvey, the fireman of the steamboat train that was wrecked last Sunday, at Danville, died Wednesday morning at Danville. His remains were brought to this city on a car furnished by the railroad.

PLAINFIELD

There was a large attendance at the graduation of the high school held Wednesday evening at Best theatre in Moosup and the program was of an unusually high order. The program was as follows: March by the High school orchestra; prayer, by Rev. Philip A. Ahern of Moosup; music, Song of the Shepherds (Delayrac), chorus; essay, Discouragement, by Ellen Cora Belknap; essay, The Value of Reading, by Anonn Hazel Holloway; essay, The Road to Success, by Gladys Evelyn Burdick; music, Hungarian Dance (Brahms) by orchestra; address, School Time and Off-Time, by Prof. C. H. Conley of Wesleyan University; music, The Swan (Siatn-Saens) by the chorus; the presentation of class gift, by Eugene W. Bellavance, president of the class of 1923; presentation of diplomas by Daniel A. Smith, secretary of town school committee; class ode by class 1923 and march by the orchestra.

A fitting allmax was the presentation of the class gift by the president of the graduating class, which was a beautiful, mounted American flag. The principal of the high school, J. L. Chapman, accepted the flag in behalf of the school and community in a few apt words of appreciation.

The Moosup Lodge, No. 113, A. F. and A. M., and the Rebecca Chapter of the Order of Eastern Star will worship at the First Congregational church on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock by invitation. These orders will meet at Grange hall, marching to the church and occupying seats in a body.

The body of William Douglas MacLeod, who was drowned in the Quinebaug river on Wednesday, was found about seven o'clock on Thursday evening some two miles down the river from the point of the accident. There were three others in the water at the time of the drowning, Alice Heroux, Ora Trudeau and Claire Trudeau, three young girls of Plainfield, and it was Alice Heroux who made the heroic effort to save the boy.

Some preachers shout the glad tidings as though they were a death warrant.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

A joint committee of ex-service men's organizations authorized at a conference on June 6th, was organized June 11th, at a meeting held at the U. S. Veterans Bureau at Washington, D. C., and took preliminary steps toward drafting all laws relating to the Veterans Bureau and the care of disabled veterans into a code which it is hoped to present to the next Congress.

The committee added to its membership a representative of the Military Order of the World War, making the membership consist of two representatives each of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, one each of the United Spanish War Veterans and Military Order of the World War, and two officials of the U. S. Veterans Bureau. Richard Seelye Jones, acting rehabilitation chairman of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, was elected chairman, Mrs. F. E. Wardwell, of the legal division of the Veterans Bureau, will act as secretary.

Many conflicts exist between clauses of existing statutes, and other clauses are so worded as to make interpretation and administration difficult. The immediate purposes of the committee is codification and simplification. It may at a later date undertake to make recommendation for new legislation. Meetings will be held as often as the egal and technica lwork progresses to a point requiring committee action, the next meeting having been fixd for July 9th.

Major W. W. Smith, chief counsel for the Veteran's Bureau, was instrumental in arranging the first conference and is lending the assistance of his division to the work. The joint committee members are:—Edwin B. Bettelheim, Jr., and Richard Seely Jones for the Veterans of Foreign Wars; John Thomas Taylor and Joe Sparks, American Legion; M. H. [illegible], and Frank J. Irwin, D. A. V.; Charles E. [illegible], Chief of Claims Division, and Fred E. Hamilton, chief of the Inspection Division, for the Veterans Bureau; John Lewis Smith for the United Spanish War Veterans, and one to be named for the Military Order of the World War.

DEGREE OF POCOHONTAS.

The Grand Council of Connecticut, Degree of Pocohontas held its annual conclave, Wednesday inNew London with delegations present from all sections of the state.

The Rockville council, with 5 members present, was awarded the prize for having the largest representation, while the Danbury council received the prize banner for coming the longest distance. All of the great chiefs itors had a thoroughly enjoyable time with a program of activities which lasted throughout the day and well into the evening.

The annual conclave of the order was held in the open air at Riverside park with the Great Pocohontas, Mrs. Theodore Mankin of New London presiding. The officers elected for the ensuing year were:

President—Mrs. I. L. Keeney, New London.

Vice-President — Mrs. DaBonner, Milford.

Secretary-treasurer — Mrs. Mary Barlow, Winsted.

Dinner was served at the Odd Fellows hall in Bank street and 350 members of the organization taxed the seating capacity of the hall. Automobiles and buses carried the members to Riverside park and a long series of athletic events was staged there. Prizes were awarded to the individual winners in each event.

The gathering returned to Odd Fellow's hall for supper, after which an interesting program of entertainment was provided. Included among the features were an exhibition drill by members of Pilgrim council of New London, a clog dance by Mrs. Lillian Maynard and Joseph Hague; recitation by little Romona Desmond; solo by Mrs. I. L. Keeney, and selections by the Hawaiian orchestra from the Submarine Base.

At the conclusion of the program Past Great Pocohontas Marie Parker of Bridgeport, presented to the Danbury council the banner for having travelled the longest distance to the annual conclave. The Great Wenonah presented to the Rockville council the statue of an Indian princess, emblematic of having the largest present.

An automobile ride to Ocean Beach followed and upwards of 300 members made the trip in pleasure cars and buses. Most of the visitors remained at the beach the greater part of the evening and it was not until a late hour that the return to New London was begun. The affair, which proved to be a splendid success, was arranged by a committee consisting of the Great Pocohontas, Mrs. Theodore Mankin, and the new head of the organization, Mrs. I. L. Keeney. The Great Council voted to hold the reunion next at Winsted.

MACCABEES.

The Maccabees held their regular meeting Wednesday night at the Buckingham Memorial, after which cake and lemonade was served in honor of the birthdays of two of the members. Mrs. Schlintz received a teakettle and a string of beads, Mrs. Pedace receiving a cut glass berryset.

FORESTERS OF AMERICA.

The membership drive conducted by Court City of Nowich, No. 68, will come to a close on Saturday evening, June 30, when a large class will be initiated in Pulaski hall by Court Welch degree team of Waterbury After the degree a real old fashioned smoker will be held and the amusement committee is working hard to make this affair one of the best ever held in Norwich. The surrounding courts will be present together with the grand chief ranger and other state officers.

On Friday evening, June 29th the Norwich degree team will go to Taftville to initiate a large class. This affair will be preceded by a band and a large parade. Practically all of the Norwich members will attend and make this a banner night for Taftville Forestry.

GROTTO

George N. Chappell, past monarch of Nemrod Grotto, and George E. Zimmerman, Herbert E. King and Herman Steixner, the delegates to the grotto supreme council meeting at Cleveland, June 11-13, have returned from attending the meeting, which brought a gathering of 60,000 veiled prophets to the Ohio city. Mr. Chappell was accompanied by his wife.

The four days provided an unending round of entertainment for the prophets. Each morning was given over to the business sessions of the supreme council, leaving the afternoons free for entertainment and social diversions. One of the big spectacular events was the grand parade in which none but uniformed grotoes and patrols participated, 10,000 men being in line. It was a colorful pageant that set a mark for such occasions in Cleveland. Another part of the celebration that the delegates will long remember was the massed band concert, when 1,100 musicians rendered a concert programme in the immense public auditorium.

Boat rides, automobiles, dances, competitive drills and competitive band concerts all combined to make the supreme council session most enjoyable for those who were fortunate enough to attend.

The next session will be held in Indianapolis.

ODD LADIES, M. U.

In spite of Thursday evening's heat there was a good attendance at the meeting of Loyal Victory lodge, No. 4, held in Steiner's hall. Noble Grand Anna Addison presiding. Sixteen candidates received the pink degree, given by the district depty, Annie M. Partridge. Other important business was acted upon, also election of officers. A large attendance is expected for next meeting, being installation, and a good time afterwards for all.

ODD FELLOWS

At a regular session of Uncas lodge, No. 11, held Monday evening, the second degree was worked in full form with a very large attendance. At their next meeting on Monday evening June 25 the third degree will be worked, and election of officers will be followed by refreshments.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

Clara Barton Tent, No. 7 met for regular meeting Tuesday evening with the president, Miss Lillie C. Wolf presiding. National General Orders, No. 6 were read. As Thursday was the annual visiting day at Fitch's Home, Newton Heights, the tent was represented by President Lillie Wolf, Mrs. Jennie Newbury, Misses Gladys and Harriet Newbury, Mrs. Lillian E. Brewster and Mrs. Elizabeth Mackey. Cigars and candy were taken for the veterans.

An invitation was received from Mr. and Mrs. William Bell, South Windham, to a picnic at their home. It was voted to have picnic July 10th, taking the 3:46 car from Franklin Square. The charater was draped for Sister Laura Colt, a charter member of the tent. The next meeting will be held July 17. A letter was received from Mary Todd Lincoln tent, Willimantic, thanking the tent for four flags for color bearers given by the Norwich tent.

If our good intentions could be used for paving material in this world it would save money for the taxpayers!

—a slogan that is your Pledge of Quality

YOU cannot know too much about the products that come to your table. What goes on "behind the scenes"—the business and production methods of those responsible for what you eat—is all vitally important.

Our earnest desire is that the public may feel an intimate knowledge of this institution, more especially of the standards which are responsible for its remarkable growth. We want you to understand that our slogan, "A Tait Bros Product," is no accident—that it is the hallmark of makers who, with reason, have genuine pride in their products.

To help you visualize the magnitude of the Tait operations, we show below a grouping of our various plants. Represented here are the most modern establishments, furnished with the last word in scientific and sanitary equipment for making and distributing the products of Tait Bros. Every plant shown is Tait-owned and Tait-operated.

These plants are so conducted that, although spread over a wide territory, every unit is subjected constantly to the most rigid inspections—that Tait Bros standards of sanitation, purity and quality may be upheld.

In handling the yearly production of more than ten thousand cows, every ounce of finished product is "A Tait Bros Product" all the way.

The name TAIT is a safe "buy word" when you think of ice cream or any of a great variety of products of Tait Bros.

NEW LONDON HOSPITAL OFFERS LAND TO CITY TO BE USED AS PLAYGROUNDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 22.—The trustees of Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital have offered to dispose of a parcel of land owned by the institution and located in front of the institution and parallel to the railroad tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. The proposition, however, is that in acquiring the land that the city shall utilize it for playground purposes and that in order to make the purchase a rental of $2,000 annually will be accepted for ten years after which time the city will have paid $20,000 for the use of the land and when a deed transferring the property will be given. The matter will be considered favorably at a session of the planning board to be held within a day or two and then recommendation for the leasing of the property and its ultimate purchase by the city, will be submitted to the city council. New London now has several playgrounds to say nothing of Morgan and Riverside parks and it is believed that there will be objection to the city acquiring any additional land at the present time for playground purposes, especially land that will cost $20,000 and several additional thousands of dollars to make it available for the purpose it might be acquired.

Israel Gerber and family of Hartford have opened their cottage on Bentley avenue, Ocean Beach, for the remainder of the summer.

Joseph Connor and family of Norwich will open their cottage at Ocean Beach within a few days, the place now being made ready for occupancy.

John M. Mallon, Jr., employed in a clerical capacity by the revenue department at Washington, is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Mallon of Brooks street.

Edgar Thomas and family have vacated their apartment at the Hotel Mohican and have gone to the Golden Spur to remain until fall.

The arraignment of Louis Markow on a charge of violating the Mann act, in the district court at Hartford on Thursday, came as something of a surprise to people who read the evening papers here today. Mr. Markow and his attorney had succeeded in keeping the facts away from the local papers, although considerable of his exploits with Fanale Taylor, a young woman of Quaker Hill, was known, though it was not possible of verification to the extent of making the information public. Miss Taylor's relatives have not been backward in relating his treatment of the woman he is now credited with having deceived most cruelly, but they did not expose Markow to the extent that he has been exposed in the allegations made against him in the district court. Miss Taylor has a suit against him for breach of promise and he is charged with being the father of her unborn child. Markow is owner of a woman's apparel store in the Crown theatre building in New London.

Robert Rappaport of No. 9 Broad street complained to the police this morning that during the night his bicycle was stolen from the yard of his home. This afternoon Morris Rappaport of Station 5, Waterford, found a youth riding in the southern part of the city with the bicycle and being satisfied that the cycle had been stolen, brought the wheel to the police station. Rappaport was communicated with and upon reaching the police station identified the bicycle as his property.

The police tonight are making a concerted attempt to locate John Hill, a negro, who recently escaped from the West Roxbury Mass., hospital, No. 44, Veterans of Wars, for Hill is demented and considered dangerous. Hill is known to be in New London, for he has applied for aid at two local charitable institutions, and it was from his seeking assistance that his identity was established, but not until he had managed to cover up his tracks.

Antonio Sammatare of No. 35 Shaw street, who escaped from the state hospital for the insane at Fort Point yesterday and whom it was believed would come to New London and possibly attack his wife because of his previous treatment to her, has not put in an appearance in New London, but Mrs. Sammatara, who is living in fear for her safety, because of her husband having threatened to kill her, has temporarily vacated her home and is understood to have taken up her abode on Jefferson avenue. The police have received information that Sammatara went to Westerly and if he has he will probably remain there until such time as he believes it safe for him to come to New London, where he is known.

The funeral of William Donohue was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, a mass of requiem being celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wolfschlaeger. The bearers were Charles Havens, Thomas Curtin, Frank Rothen and August Dittman. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

All of the employes of the municipal building enjoyed a half holiday today, the building closing at noon to permit the young men and women an opportunity to witness the many features attending the annual Yale-Harvard case.

Despite the activity in the harbor today, the search for the body of Edward Fisher, 14 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fisher of No. 46 Nathan Hale street who lost his life by falling from one of the Hotel Griswold launches, was continued by several boatmen, but without success.

It developed today that the launch that was destroyed by fire off Saybrook last night and when it was believed that several lives had perished, was owned by C. H. Goodrich of Middletown. The launch had been at anchor and when the engine was started a backfire followed causing the craft to be enveloped in flames. A boat was put overboard when the flames spread from one end of the craft to the other, and the occupants of the craft managed to escape in safety.

The funeral of Mrs. Ella A. Goebel was held this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock at the home of her brother, Henry R. Griswold, Broad street extension. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Stevens of New Haven. Relatives of Mrs. Brown acted as bearers. Interment was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Mrs. Helen Murphy, widow of Jeremiah Murphy, died last night at her home, No. 60 Mountain avenue. Mrs. Murphy was 85 years of age and is survived by four sons, Patrick of Springfield, Mass.; Timothy of Bridgeport, and Jeremiah and John of New London and by a daughter, Mrs. John Shegrue of New London.

Peter, the two months old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gandy of No. 3 Harris street, died last night at the residence of his parents.

Norma Judd, the three days old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Bessbe, of No. 173 Crystal avenue, died last night.

William G. Congdon, aged 77 years, died last night at his home, No. 10 West Colt street, death ending a lingering illness. Mr. Congdon is survived by his widow and by two sons, Edward and Thomas, both of New London. Mr. Congdon was employed by the city street department many years and until his health failed him about five years ago.

Harry Bloom of New York, was struck by an automobile, driven by Dennis Patterson, employed by the Crystal Candy Kitchen of No. 76 State St., this morning. Bloom sustained contusions and abrasions of the left leg and is now under treatment at a local private hospital. Bloom, who was one of several commercialists here for the Yale-Harvard races, was walking along the curb of State street he stepped from the sidewalk and in front of the passing auto. He was knocked down and it was at first believed that he was seriously injured. Patterson caused Bloom to be conveyed to the hospital where it was revealed that his injuries were slight.

Harold P. Gleason, aged 20 years, and Miss Hazel Scranton, aged 18 years, both of Waterford, were married last night by Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton of Waterford.

Richard Pellegatti, alias Dickey Florence and Andrew Cotsos, both of New Haven and who have been making local rum runners very busy, the latter part of yesterday and today, were arrested this noon by Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman George Perkins, when the officers were attracted to the two tidies and who it was determined were a couple of Dope Fiends. Feinstein had the toons for taking "shots", but they did not possess any dope. Both were locked up and held until the arrival of the 5.39 o'clock train, when they were put aboard it and instructed to remain away from New London.

Edward Hagen, formerly of New London, now employed in Bozrah, is spending a few days with relatives here.

Edward Alley of Ridgewood, N. J., was taken into custody this noon by State Policeman Preston, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, in Waterford. Preston caused Alley to be arraigned before Justic of the Peace Thomas F. Morton later where the accused pleaded guilty and was fined $100. He paid.

Alley, who is a sophomore at Yale, accompanied by three friends was en route to New London to attend the races. When near Jordan cemetery, Alley's car took up so much of the highway that there was not sufficient room for other cars to pass. This resulted in Alley's car colliding with an automobile owned and operated by Thomas Millars of No. 36 Tilley street. Officer Preston, who was on duty in that vicinity, apprehended Alley and his arraignment followed.

HENS THAT PRODUCE ARE BORN, NOT MADE

The reason for great variation in egg production between hens of different strains of a variety and sometimes even between individuals in a flock is not quite clear to the inexperienced poultryman. Most people believe that if hens are properly fed and housed they all should produce equally well, but nothing is further from the actual facts.

The quality of producing eggs is inborn. Correct feeding and housing are important to develop the best possibilities of the hen, but no amount of care and feed will enable a hen that has no capacity for egg production to lay more than a certain number of eggs.

This ability is passed on from one generation to another, the same as any other trait such as white feathers, single comb, feathered or clean legs, etc.

It is impossible to tell by looking at a hen whether or not she will be a fine producer. Although certain external characteristics indicate good layers and others poor layers, it is quite a well known fact that there are striking exceptions to any rules of this kind. In some cases fine looking fowls will not produce an egg and others, in spite of all that can be provided, will lay only a few.

In a healthy, well-developed pullet from a flock of heavy layers the ovary, just before laying time, will be found well developed and covered with a considerable number of egg cells in all stages of development. As many as 700 of these have been counted in one pullet.

Large numbers have been found with 300, 400 and 500. This does not mean that each egg cell will develop into an egg, but it does indicate the maximum capacity of the hen to produce eggs.

Many external factors influence the number that will develop. Some unfavorable conditions during the course of incubation seem to reduce the number of eggs. It is possible in this one stage to reduce the productive capacity of a pullet 15 or 20 per cent.

In order to develop eggs it is necessary for the pullet to be properly grown and then to be supplied with the proper food and housing facilities, sanitary surroundings, etc., so that all of its vitality and energy may be devoted to egg production.

The hen may be considered a machine that will take feed and convert it into eggs; but this can be done only up to her inborn limit of egg production. And it will be influenced either favorably or unfavorably by the conditions surrounding the hen.

If the egg germs or ovums are not in the hen it will not be possible for her to produce eggs. On the other hand, if the egg germs are there it will be possible for her to produce the maximum only if given proper conditions.

For this reason the poultryman desiring egg production must always be sure that his pullets are being hatched from a strain that has the quality of egg production highly developed. He should then apply proper methods and he will be able to produce a large number of eggs per hen.—S. W. Shoemaker.

PRUNING TOMATOES.

In actual dimes and dollars the tomato counts for more in the course of a season than any vegetable grown. Save the tomatoes and you save the dimes. There is one way to save the crop and get the most out of it and that is by growing them trained to stakes. Tomatoes, like their cousins the eggplants and peppers, need all the heat there is to ripen their fruits and the less shade they have the better will be the prospects of a crop. Getting them up off the ground gets them into the sun and prevents a tangled mass of vines from shading the fruit and delaying its ripening. They will not produce a full crop when shaded or crowded.

Another reason, particularly in the small garden, in addition to more tomatoes and better quality is economy of space. Left to sprawl over the ground tomatoes take up a lot of room and are impossible of cultivation. Besides, a good percentage of the fruit on the ground will rot, particularly if it happens to be a wet season. A minimum of rot is secured by the method of training to stakes.

The time to start is now while the plants are young and consist of only a single sturdy stem. This will not remain for long for branches will start from the axil of every leaf and if left to itself the plant will soon be a tangle of stems and foliage. A plant allowed to sprawl over the ground needs about four feet of room. It is an easy matter to grow four plants in this same space, trained upright to stakes.

Get stakes six feet long if possible, allowing a foot to be in the ground. They should be set in place before the tomatoes, but if this is impossible, may be placed after the plants are set out, care being taken not to injure the tomato. As soon as the plant begins to send out side branches, which will be very apparent, pinch out all but the main stem and two side branches. The stems should be tied to the stake with strips of cloth, as string is likely to cut them if they are hit by a high wind. They will need frequent tying as the season progresses and the extra side shoots of which there will be plenty should be kept pinched out, allowing only the blossom clusters from the axils of the leaves to develop.

The plant will reach the height of the pole—five feet—by July. Then the tips should be pinched out to throw the strength of the plant into the development of the fruit. Care must be taken to keep the branches which will grow rapidly and thickly, pinched out. A trained tomato will need to be looked over and that at least once a week to keep it in shape.

Variants of the single stake method are often found more convenient, in the shape of trellises. In this case a wire stretched midway of the poles may be used to train the side branches that will keep springing from the axils of the leaves.

BODWELL GIVES ADVICE ON HILLING POTATOES

To hill or not to hill is a question that is agitating the minds of many a farmer these days. There are many advantages to both methods. If potatoes are to be cultivated in hills the first necessity is to plant them early. When the plants make their first appearance above ground they should be covered again. These coverings, of course, are the beginning of hill culture, and the covering is done with several objects in view. In the first place it smothers grass and weeds, and in the second place if cold weather prevails it will prevent frost from injuring the leaves. Further, it will establish a stronger root system. When the potato vine is covered with dirt when it breaks the ground the vine will send out lateral roots, and these roots send out very fine hairy roots, so that when the vine again breaks ground the extra roots bring moisture and nourishment to such a degree that the plant will develop much more rapidly, thus

SUCCESSFUL HANDLING OF PARASITES IN CORN BORER CONTROL WORK.

More than 1,000,000 individuals of an important parasite of the European corn borer, Habrobracon brevicornis Wesmael, have been successfully reared and liberated in the densely infested area in New England. It was believed by entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture that it might be worth while to attempt to introduce it into the badly infested areas of southern Ontario. Following a suggestion to this effect made to the Dominion Entomologist, Arthur Gibson, authorization was recently given by the Canadian Government for an assistant for this purpose. This entomologist recently visited the laboratory at Arlington, Mass., to receive instruction in the techniques necessary for handling the parasite, which will shortly be reared and introduced into Canada.

Several other promising parasites of the corn borer have been received from France and are being reared at the Arlington laboratory. At least one additional species will soon be ready for liberation.

TIME TO SPRAY FOR ROSE BUGS

Rose bugs are likely to put in an appearance on grape vines and other plants now. These insects, as is well known, cause immense damage almost every year to thousands of grape vines in the city and suburban back yards and gardens, as well as to grape vines in the larger farm vineyards of the county. Rose bugs also damage many other plants including roses, peaches, plums, cherries and apples. In the case of grapes, the damage is done principally by eating the buds of the flower cluster. In the case of fruits, they eat holes in the sides of the little apples, peaches and plums.

Rose bugs are one of the most difficult pests to contend with on account of their ability to withstand ordinary sprays that will kill most insects. They can, however, be killed off quickly by either dusting or spraying, provided the mixture contains enough arsenate and it is applied in good season when the first of the bugs begin to appear. If spraying is to be used, the best method is to use as much as 1 1-2 ounces of dry lead arsenate to each gallon of spraying. This may be used alone or in combination with homemade bordeaux mixture or the commercial dry bordeaux mixtures which are on the market. A tablespoonful of molasses to a gallon is believed to add to the effectiveness of the mixture for rose bugs. This should be applied to grapevines once or twice during the coming week before the blossoms open.

Dusting of grapes with the hand blower using the new standard copper-lime calcium arsenate dust proved last year very effective.

The big feature of dusting is that the material is so quickly and easily applied and comes ready mixed. A dozen or more vines can easily be covered in two or three minutes by dusting. This method will therefore appeal very strongly to every home gardener.

RALLY IN STOCK MARKET.

New York, June 22.—Strong banking support and a continuation of inside buying brought about another sharp rally in today's stock market but trading was not on as extensive a scale as it was earlier in the week. There was a noticeable absence of selling pressure among the standard stocks but belated short covering operations were noted in a few issues. Some brokers reported a slight revival of outside participation.

The market was led for a time by the railroad shares, much of the buying of which apparently was based on speculative expectation that the May earnings statements, soon to be published, will show up as well as those of April when 6 1-2 per cent. was earned on tentative valuation. Several of the dividend payers, notably Atchison, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific and Reading showed net gains of 1 to 2 1-2 points. Good progress also was made by some of the so-called specialties shares, particularly Southern, Erie and Erie issues. Reports of a possible increase in the Atchison common dividend were set a rest today by President W. B. Storey, who declared that such action was not only unlikely but inadvisable at this time.

Most of the so-called pivotal stocks in the industrial group also recorded good gains, United States Steel common, Baldwin and American Locomotives, American Can, American Smelting, Corn Products and Anaconda closing 1 to 2 points above yesterday's final figures. Studebaker closed unchanged at 106 1-2.

The rally which set in just before the close was largely the result of covering by shorts in advance of the week end.

Call money held at 5 per cent. throughout the day. The time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchanges, with few exceptions, held steady. Demand sterling was quoted around $4.61 1-2 and French francs around 6.20 cents. Italian exchange touched a new low for the year at 4.51 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 22.—Buying by "bargain hunters" combined with the more favorable sentiment over the immediate course of prices gave the bond market a considerably better tone today and substantial rallies were noted throughout the list.

United States government bonds, which have been relatively firm throughout the week, continued steady with the Liberty issues registering small gains. Gains of a point or more were recorded by Mexican 4s and 5s and Bolivian 8s, and other foreign government issues improved fractionally.

Buying in the rail group extended to both the high grade investment mortgages and the more speculative issues, gains of a point or more being recorded by more than a dozen issues. Five different bonds of the Erie Railroad advanced 1 point each. Reading general 4s ran counter to the general trend, losing 1 5-8 on the day.

Industrial liens also were in good demand and showed moderate gains. Tobacco Company liens, particularly were bought at advancing prices, and sugars, Public Utility, and oil issues showed fair gains.

Total sales (par value) were $10,385,000.

Public offering is expected Monday of $45,000,000 26-year 4 1-2 per cent. federal farm loan bonds at a price slightly above par.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 22—Wheat tended upward in price today, stimulated by unusual absence of hedging sales from the southwest and by lack of rain in North Dakota. Closing quotations were firm, 1-4 to 1 1-4 cents net higher, with September 105 3-8 to 105 1-2 and December 107 7-8 to 108. Corn finished at 1-8 to 1 1-4 cent gain after the July delivery had touched a new high price record for the season, 84 3-4 cents. Oats closed 1-4 to 3-4 cents up, and provisions 7 to 5 cents down.

Notwithstanding that the winter wheat harvest is general throughout northern Oklahoma and southern Kansas as well as the Texas Panhandle. It became more and more apparent today that hedging sales against the new crop were lacking in volume. Reports were current in this connection that farmers would hold their wheat until the price was more satisfactory and it was pointed out the after 23 cents decline here of late a rally was perhaps to be expected.

Bidding up of the wheat market in the late trading resulted chiefly from North Dakota drought reports. Although rains had fallen at numerous points in the state, the weather there was hot, and it was asserted that the wheat crop was going backward in the sections where moisture was deficient. Earlier in the day, unfavorable crop reports from France gave some emphasis to bullish sentiment but export buying failed to follow the price bulges, and during the middle of the day the market receded frequently as a result.

Shorts were anxious buyers in the corn market and although some increase of country offerings to arrive here was reported, much of the gains in price were held at the finish. Oats followed corn.

Declines in the value of hogs weakened the provision market.

the wheat crop was going backward in the sections where moisture was deficient. Earlier in the day, unfavorable crop reports from France gave some emphasis to bullish sentiment but export buying failed to follow the price bulges, and during the middle of the day the market receded frequently as a result.

Shorts were anxious buyers in the corn market and although some increase of country offerings to arrive here was reported, much of the gains in price were held at the finish. Oats followed corn.

Declines in the value of hogs weakened the provision market.

JEWETT CITY

Rev. and Mrs. Howard Stephenson were tendered a reception in the parlors of the Congregational church on Thursday evening, representations of nearly every family in the parish being present. The vestry was beautifully decorated with quantities of roses, syringa, peonies and daisies. The pastor and his bride were met at the door by four little girls, Charlotte Albertine, Olga Zegeer, Ruth and Edith Munn, who presented them with roses. Strauss' orchestra of Plainfield played the march from Lohengrin as the company arose and applauded while the bridal copule were led by the children to an arch of roses. A lovely wedding bell of white roses with rosebud shower, made by Mrs. Alex McNicol, was suspended in the center of the arch, and beneath it the pastor and his wife received the congratulations of their friends.

Ice cream, cake, fancy cookies and punch were served. Then a table at one side of the parlor was uncovered and disclosed to view a shower of aluminum and pyrex articles from the Ladies' society, one of dishes containing $200 in gold pieces as a wedding gift from the men of the parish. Mr. Stephenson expressed his appreciation of the evident good will thus manifested. The orchestra played during the evening and a number of selections were given. The committee [illegible] were Mrs. Walter Kinney [illegible]

Charles Adams, Jr., has resigned his position in the male room of the Uncasville mills and has accepted a position in the machine shop.

James McSheffery of North Third avenue has returned from a stay of several days in Bristol.

A large number of Taftville people were attendants at the boat race, Friday. A steady stream of cars, most of them flying red or blue pennants, passed through the village during the day, although there were not so many as last year.

John Foley of Willimantic was a caller in the village, Friday. Mr. Foley is a former resident of this village.

Anthony Murphy of Baltimore, Md., is at the home of his mother, Mrs. Anthony Murphy of Merchants avenue.

Fred Proctor of Norwich was a business caller in the village, Friday.

Troop 1, Boy Scouts met Friday evening in the recreation rooms of the Taftville Congregational church in charge of Scoutmaster Victor H. Davis.

Wilfred Desmarais of Baltimore, Md., is spending the summer vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Desmarais with A Street.

Patrick F. Fogarty of South Second Avenue has entered the employ of the electrical department of the Ponemah Mills.

Some of the departments of the Ponemah Mills closed Friday night for the remainder of the week.

The Clarks ran away with the game that they played Thursday evening with the Army and Navy Club in the Twilight League on the Providence street grounds, defeating their opponents by the score of 7 to 1. There was a large crowd out to witness the game and Tubbs band rendered selections between the innings.

Youngsters of the village are already beginning to celebrate the Fourth. Fireworks have been placed on sale in the local stores and there is plenty of noise for all.

A new wall is being built around the fire house of Fire Company, No. 3, on Merchants avenue.

STORRS HENS MAINTAIN GOOD LAYING RECORD

The record for the 33rd week of the laying contest at Storrs is 52 eggs more than for the corresponding period last year, all of which is fair evidence that the birds have not laid down on the job in spite of the fact that all flocks have entered a period of lower egg yields. The total production for all pens was 3762 eggs or a yield of nearly 54 per cent. A Massachusetts pen of Rhode Island Reds owned by Pinecrest Orchards of Groton got away with first place with a lay of 60 eggs. Hollywood Farm's pen of Leghorns from Hollywood, Wash., was second best pen for the week with a yield of 58 eggs. Two pens of Barred Rocks entered by Jules F. Francais of Westhampton Beach, L. I., and Wingate Poultry Yard of Harrington, Del., were third and fourth with 57 and 56 eggs respectively.

Plymouth Rocks

Jules F. Francais (Barred), Westhampton Beach, L. I. 1365
Davidson Bros. (White), Upton, Mass. 1347
Edgar Stoughton (Barred), Wapping, Conn. 1343

White Wyandottes

Lady Anderson, Harrold, England 1410
Woodbridge Orchard, Woodbridge, Conn. 1397
Frank P. Matteson, Davisville, R. I. 1229

WAR DEPARTMENT GIVES AUTHORITY FOR SURVEY OF THAMES RIVER

The persistent activity of the Norwich chamber of commerce in urging upon the government the necessity of a survey of the Thames river has borne fruit in favorable action by the chief of engineers in authorizing the survey.

Attorney Edwin W. Higgins received the following letter Friday morning.

War Department
The Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors
Washington, D. C.,
June 20, 1923.

Mr. Edwin W. Higgins,
Norwich, Conn.

Dear Sir: Replying to your letter of the 15th inst. I take pleasure in advising you that in pursuance of a favorable recommendation of this board the chief of engineers has authorized a survey of Thames river, Conn. The authorization is dated the 14th inst. and the duty has been assigned to the district engineer at Providence, R. I.

Major Peterson.

I trust this action meets your wishes in the matter.

Very truly yours,
For the board.
G. R. YOUNG,
Major, Corps of Engineers,
Resident member of the Board.

Facts and figures to prove the amount of water tonnage on the river and the need of a deeper channel from Allyn's Point to Norwich were presented at two public hearings, one in Norwich and the other in Providence, chamber of commerce members, demonstrated to the district engineer that there was a need of the survey and he reported in favor of this project but his report was not accepted by the division engineer located at New York city and an appeal was taken to the general board located at Washington. A special committee from the chamber of commerce, numbering H. M. Leroy, H. F. Dawley, Lucius Briggs, L. M. Carpenter, Jewett City, J. J. O'Rourke and Edwin W. Higgins, prepared the facts which were ably presented by Attorney Higgins to the general board and it received at this hearing held in Washington in May the fullest cooperation and support of Senator Brandegee.

The special committee of the chamber of commerce believe that Norwich has a distinct asset in the navigability of the Thames river, from which it has not received the fullest advantage. It further believes that this matter is of the utmost importance to shippers and the public in general who may be located many miles from Norwich. With the changes in transportation methods and the increasing demands upon the railroads the Thames river can be used both to relieve the congestion of the railroads and to secure a stable, dependable service. There are manufacturing sites along the Thames river furnishing unusual facilities. With the Thames river navigable for the increasing draft of vessels these locations in the heart of New England will appeal to manufacturers who are constantly seeking less congested sections in which to locate. With the New Haven railroad, the Central Vermont railroad and the Thames river an unusual combination of shipping facilities is afforded, not equalled by any other New England city with the exception of Boston and Providence.

The work of making this detailed survey with a view of an increased depth and an improved channel condition will in all probability be taken up by the district engineer officer during the summer. His report will be finally submitted to the general board at Washington and the recommendations of this board will be followed by congress in making appropriations for rivers and harbor work. It has only been by the most persistent and constant work that this favorable authorization has been secured. The special committee feels that the Thames river, especially from Allyn's Point to Norwich has been neglected and that this is but the beginning of much better navigation conditions on the river, including the establishment of a regular passenger and freight service by boat between this city and New York.

During certain periods of acute conditions in the coal situation Norwich has been able to get coal when other communities less favored have suffered for the need of it. This coal at these times came by way of the Thames. Large shipments of lumber are constantly made by way of the Thames river. The Uncas Paper Board company, at Thamesville and recently enlarged, stated at the public hearing in Washington through Mr. Smith of Baltimore who recently acquired this plant that his factory would use the Thames very largely for both finished and raw material. Other concerns on the river now it is believed will take advantage of water shipments that have not heretofore done so. Louis M. Carpenter, who represented the Eastern Connecticut Textile Association at the Washington hearing, stated that the companies affiliated with this association would be glad to use the river for shipments or receipt of certain of their products if a stable boat line was maintained.

The chamber of commerce will continue their interest in this project and if greater cooperation can be secured on the part of shippers in this section a great boon may be furnished Norwich and this entire section of New England by the improvement of the navigation of the Thames from Allyns Point to Norwich.

BROWN UNIVERSITY IS GROWING IN ALL LINES

The semiannual meeting of the board of fellows and trustees of Brown university was held this week and Lucius Brown of this city, who is one of the members of the corporation, was in attendance. It was an especially important meeting.

A new chemical laboratory is nearly completed—the gift of one of the alumni, costing a little less than a million dollars. It will be the last thing in laboratory equipment—nothing better in this country.

Plans are substantially completed for a new gymnasium which will accommodate four times the number of the present gymnasium, costing $750,000.

Land has already been purchased for several baseball fields, tennis courts and a large stadium.

A new dormitory is much needed and will probably be built soon.

There is now a dean appointed for the freshmen class alone, which has been tried out during the last year most satisfactorily. Every member of the freshmen class now is on probation until the end of the first half of the year. Then if he has kept up his standing and otherwise qualified he becomes a registered student. The number of applicants is so large that many have dropped out before the end of the first year, the standard having been very materially raised. Notwithstanding these rigid examinations the classes remain larger than ever. The total registration for the past year including the summer school number 3256.

PRESS MEMBERS WITH PRESIDENTIAL PARTY MEET ACCIDENT IN SIDE TRIP

Automobile Went Over a Hundred Foot Embankment in Bear Creek, Colorado—Sumner Curtis, Representative of the Republican National Committee, and Thomas French, Driver of the Car, Were Killed—Two Other Men Severely Injured—Accident Was Caused by a Broken Steering Gear—President Harding Expressed Deep Regrets Over the Tragedy.

Denver, June 24.—Sumner Curtis, of Washington, representative of the Republican National Committee, accompanying President Harding's party on its western trip, was killed and three other men were injured seriously when the automobile in which they were making a mountain tour plunged off the road in Bear Creek Canyon, twenty five miles from Denver today. The injured are Donald Craig, manager of the Washington Bureau of the New York Herald; Thomas Dawson, Colorado state historian and veteran Washington newspaperman and Thomas French, of Denver, who was driving the car.

Thomas French, driver of the car, died on the way to the hospital. The extent of the injuries sustained by Mr Craig and Mr. Dawson had not yet been learned definitely. The accident victims were members of a large party of newspaper correspondents who, because President Harding was resting this afternoon, dropped their work and took an excursion to the mountains as guests of the Denver Press Club. President Harding was not with the party.

The route taken, leading over lookout Mountain, follows a tortuous trail through the canyon. It was at an extremely sharp curve near Evergreen, at a point where a guard rail is posted for the protection of motorists, that the steering gear of one of the machines broke, according to the reports reaching here, sending the car over the cliff into the creek below.

An operation was performed immediately at the County Hospital in an effort to save Mr. Craig's life. His scalp was severly lacerated and it was feared he had sustained a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Mr. Dawson suffered fractured ribs, injuries to his spine, a lacerated foot and possible internal injuries, according to physicians at the hospital.

President Harding telephoned to the hospital to learn the conditions of the injured, as soon as he received word of the accident. The President expressed deep regret over the tragedy.

The body of Curtis was taken to the mountain home of C. C. Gates, Denver rubber manufacturer, near the spot where the automobile, uncontrollable because of a broken steering gear, dropped off a cliff at a treacherous curve and plunged into the rocky bed of Bear Creek. French's body was brought to Denver and the other two victims were taken to a hospital here.

The four men were returning from lookout Mountain, where they had attended a luncheon extended by the Denver Press Club. Curtis was dead when other members of the party, composed of correspondents accompanying the Harding party and Denver newspapermen who followed in other automobiles, reached the wrecked machine.

VICTIMS OF ACCIDENT WERE NEWSPAPER MEN.

Washington, June 24.—Sumner Curtis, killed today in an automobile accident near Denver, entered Washington newspaper work a number of years ago as the representative of a Milwaukee paper. Later he served here as correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald. For a time he was connected with the Red Cross organization here, leaving a few months ago to become associated with the republican national committee.

Donal Craig became head of the New York Herald bureau here in 1912 after serving with the Washington staff of that paper for several years. His first newspaper experience was received on Washington papers.

Thomas Dawson spent a number of years in Washington. At one time he was a member of the Capitol staff of the Associated Press. During most of the Wilson administration he served as executive clerk of the senate, later acting as the Washington correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. A year or so ago he returned to his home state of Colorado to serve as state historian.

Today's accident recalled a similar one which occurred in September, 1919, to a group of newspaper men who were accompanying President Wilson on his "swing around the circle" in behalf of the league of nations. At that time Ben F. Allen, Washington correspondent of the Cleveland, Plain Dealer, was killed when the automobile in which he was riding on the Columbia highway near Portland, Oregon, collided with another machine. James R. Patterson of Portland, driver of the car in which Mr. Allen rode, also was killed, while two other occupants, both Washington newspaper men, were injured.

Philadelphia, June 24.—Anthracite mine workers will gather in convention at Scranton, Pa., on Tuesday to consider and adopt demands they will make upon the coal operators in the negotiations for a new wage agreement. The present contract, entered into last fall after a strike that lasted more than five months, will expire August 31.

It was the general opinion among mine leaders that the convention probably will ask for an increase ranging from 10 to 20 per cent. The wage and working conditions embodied in the present contract are the same as those under which the $155,000 workers were employed just after the war. In January, 1922, the miners in convention at Shamokin, Pa., formulated demands for a 20 per cent. increase in rates, one dollar a day more for men paid by the day, an eight hour day for all mine workers. The check-off whereby the employers virtually collect the dues of the union men, full recognition of the union. The men quit work when these demands were refused and returned to the mines finally on the old working agreement.

Leviathan Becomes Queen of the Seas

Made 570 Miles in 25 Hours at an Average Speed of 27.99 Miles an Hour On Trial Trip.

New York, June 24.—(By the A. P.). Wearing with pride and grace her newly acquired title of Queen of the Seas, the Leviathan is back in her home port ready to defend her record against any and all passenger ships, from whatever country, deady even to challenge any other to dispute her right to the laurels she has interwined with Old Glory at her mast head.

Fog delayed her entrance to the harbor several hours, but the weather cleared before sunset and the mighty ship moved up the bay majestically amid welcoming salutes from the airens of harbor craft.

Guests of the United States Shipping Board, officials who constituted the trial board and every member of the crew are jubilant over the capture of a new championship, one held by Great Britain for many years. All are talking of the thrill of a new experience.

When the Shipping Board announced it would put the reconditioned Leviathan over a test course to determine how successful had been the attempt of American genius and sportsmanship to turn the former German Vaterland into a better ship than she was born to become, nothing was said about going after speed records. Shipping men did not dream such attempt would be made and the members of the board kept quiet. After a day on the ocean, enroute to the Bahamas, the committee of the board having charge of the trial, Albert D. Lasker, th eretiring chairman and Commissioners E. C. Plummer, T. V. O'Connor and F. I. Thompson summoned Captain Herbert Hartley for a Solemn conference. William F. Gibbs of Gibbs Brothers, Inc., who drew the plans, supervised contracts and had charge of the reconditioning, and Homer Ferguson, President of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company were already present.

"What do you think?" was the question all put to the Captain.

He was ready, in fact, it is said he came as near showing excitement as when he ran the St. Louis with mounted guns through German submarine-infested waters as an American challenge to sink her if this was done. This exploit before America entered the European War on the side of the Allies was one of the things that scored heavily in Captain Hartley's favor for the honor of commanding the Leviathan.

Captain Hartley was directed to choose the moment; when the test would begin. Not a word had been said to another soul on board. No one of the 450 or more guests and not a member of the crew above the engine room knew what was intended.

On the third day out from Boston, June 22, everybody knew the ship had speeded up, but it was explained that this meant nothing and that warm water, which all shipping men know to be hard on the condensers, would not be selected as the place of making a speed test. But the speed increased still more and although there was little of no vibration, it gradually dawned on the government's guests that some sort of an unusual trial was taking place.

Jupiter Light, about a thousand miles from New York, was passed Friday morning, June 22. This meant that the turn about Abaco Island and the passage through Providence Channel had been made during the night. The log, which was not made public till afterward shows what was done:

"Jupiter Light House a beam 7:17 a. m., June 22. Then followed the regular northbound steamship track to Diamond Shoal Light Vessel, arriving there June 23, at 3:39 a. m. Distance 570 miles. Ship making an average of 27.99 knots.

"From Jupiter Light House to lat. 36 degrees-52 N. Long., 74 degrees-21' W. A distance of 687 miles was made in 25 hours, making an average speed of 27.48 knots per hour."

It had already been announced that during the first hour of the run from Jupiter Light the average speed of the vessel was 28.04 knots, a new high world's record and for a six hour period the average speed was 28 knots. It was known that this had beaten the record of the Mauretania for an hour and for six hours and the cunarder had thus lost her title of speed queen. But still Captain Hartley, Mr. Gibbs, Mr. Ferguson and the shipping board committee were not satisfied. Guests spent the day with amusements, and none other than the officials in the secret remained up that night. The news became common property within 20 minutes after completing the 25 hour period at 8.12 a. m., Saturday The record held by the Mauretania of 27.04 knots in a 25 hour trial period had been humbled, and the new record of 27.48 for the incomparable Leviathan was run up. Officials swamped the radio with the news. Former Chairman Lasker told President Harding, the Commissioners on the trial committee told the commissioners at home. Guests radioed their families and the newspaper men took such space as was left in order to give the news to the country.

Everybody shouted their congratulations, most of the people ran about the decks, danced and slapped each other's backs. Soon passengers were wiring for accommodations on one or another of the early regular service trips to cherbourg and Southampton, the first of which is to start Independence Day.

On the promenade deck one got the idea that about all of the business men who were guests on the trial planned to be paying passengers on the first trip. There was a scurrying below to look at rooms, locations for deck chairs were looked over, and at luncheon many were heard to tell the dining room stewards that "We'll see you again soon."

"Now if we can only mint that jubilation into a lasting national pride," said Mr. Lasker to Gibbs, Ferguson, Fellow Commissioners, and about five hundred others, "We'll have a Merchant Marine that can compete with any nation on earth."

A celebration was held on board last night. After motion pictures in social hadd, there was singing by a number of guests, monologues, cartooning and also much speaking.

Examination of the steward's report showed a net cost of less than two dollars per day for feeding the passenger guests which constituted practically the only expense of the trial trip above the cost of the crew and operation.

A round trip every three weeks between New York and Southampton is the Leviathan's schedule. There will be steps at Cherbourg for passengers to and from France and the continent. Fast passenger mail and express service is on the ship's program, according to announcement of the United States Lines which operate various passenger and freight ships.

Talk on Prohibition By Lloyd George

London, June 23.—(By The A. P.)—Addressing a large congregation in the Welsh Baptist chapel here today, former Premier Lloyd George made some interesting observations regarding the prohibition situation in the United States. He made it apparent that he did not share the views of certain of the British newspapers concerning the lack of right of the American authorities to siezе British liquor stores aboard ships.

"I hope we won't get excited over the seizure of liquor in New York harbor," said Mr. Lloyd George. "It is not merely that America seems to be well within her rights, but I think we ought to extend a certain measure of sympathy to her in her difficulties. It is not a question whether we are or not prohibitionists. But America is making a very bold experiment to deal with probably the great curse of modern civilization. She has tried many experiments, but they have been only comparative successes.

"She has made the decision with the courage that characterizes that great people to try prohibition experiment—one that has never been made on this earth before. Let us give her a fair chance. Let us be quite frank. One of America's greatest difficulties has been the liquor which his been pouring by surreptitious means from Europe.

"It is all very well for us to say that all this liquor is merely for our own sailors aboard ship. I don't say this with regard to any particular ship. It may not be so but, speaking generally, there is no doubt fortunes have been made by smuggling liquor into the United States in defiance of a law which was passed by a greater majority that almost any other great law in any country.

"Give it a fair trial. I don't say the experiment will succeed. It is just possible that American may have to modify it. They are a great, practical, resolute and courageous people, and if they find it necessary to change the law they will do it. But don't let us interfere with them. They are a people of more than 100,000,000, highly civilized and progressive. Therefore it is in the interest of civilization that they be allowed full time to test this effort to solve a problem which is just as much ours as theirs."

LIQUOR SEIZURES THE CHIEF TOPIC IN LONDON

London, June 24.—(By The A. P.)—No subject in recent days has occupied more of the attention of the British newspapers or given the public a better topic for animated discussion than the liquor seizures in New York.

The London newspapers seldom before have printed so many despatches under American date lines, and the greater majority of these relate to the liquor confiscations. The items are variously captioned—"Dry Comedy in the United States," "Meddling With Our Ships," "The Prohibition Farce," "The Wet Liner Absurdity," "Making the Atlantic Dry," and "America's Dilemma."

The week-end editorials are couched in a sarcastic vein. Some of them manifest resentment and others are severely critical. All of them are eager to know what will be gained by a "test case, and whether the seizures will continue. Some of the writers take the British government sharply to task for what is characterized as its passive attitude and apparent intention to make the steamship companies fight out the issue with the American government.

FOUR MORE LINERS ARRIVE WITH LIQUOR

New York, June 24.—Four trans-Atlantic passenger liners, two British, one French and one Italian, arrived at quarantine today with large quantities of liquor under seal.

United States authorities were expected to follow the same procedure practiced on the Baltic and Berengaria yesterday—seizing all liquor above the amount set by Dr. E. K. Sprague, chief of the United States public health service as necessary for medicinal purposes.

Officers of the Cedric appeared indifferent to the fate of the liquor stores, but British passengers were said to have been indignant when told of the seizures on the two liners yesterday.

'PHONE OPERATORS ORDERED TO STRIKE AT 7 A. M. TUESDAY

Notice Sent Out by the New England Joint Council of the Telephone Operators Department of the I. B. of E. W. —Members Notified That There Be No Disturbances of Any Kind or Destruction of Property.

Boston, June 24—An official order for a strike of telephone operators employed by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company was ordered sent out late today at a meeting of the New England joint council of the Telephone Operators' Department, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The order states that operators would leave their work at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning and demanded that there be no disturbances of any kind or destruction of the property of the company. Delegates left tonight to return to various New England points to put the strike order into effect.

The strike order was signed by Julia S. O'Connor, president of the department, and Mary H. Brady, chairman of the wage committee, and was addressed to "all locals affiliated with the New England council of telephone operators' unions." Miss O'Connor said reports made by delegates from 38 affiliated unions at the meeting of the council this afternoon made certain as clean a sweep of the telephone exchanges, as far as operators go, as during the strike of 1919. At that time telephone business was crippled for several days.

The International Brotherhood of Telephone workers, a body not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which includes in its membership a large number of telephone operators, also held a meeting today. John Dolan, president of the organization, refused to discuss the business of the meeting. He said, however, that in the event of the strike going into effect members of his union would report for work as usual, refusing, however, to do the work of any striking operator.

A greater Boston union known as local 1-A, formerly affiliated with the department, but whose charter was lifted by Miss O'Connor, has voted to refrain from participating in the strike.

The New England Telephone Company has refused to acquiesce to demands of the telephone department's wage committee for a seven hour day and wage increases, declaring that a reduction in the work day from eight hours to seven and a general increase in wages amounting to 33 1-3 per cent. could not be granted at this time.

Four cases of reckless driving, one of intoxication and one of assault constituted the total of six cases which were on the police court docket Saturday morning.

Elmer Bennett went from Hebron to Willimantic Friday to go to the circus. Bennett ate peanuts and became thirsty so he secured a bottle of beer. In court, he claimed that it tasted like soda water but must have had a terrible kick for his memory became dull until he was arrested. He was of the opinion that he must be guilty of the charge. Judge Foss was also of the same opinion and imposed a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $12.25.

Raymond Connors was charged with reckless driving and through his guardian ad litem, S. Arnold Peckham, he argued that he did not think that he was speeding. Shortly afterwards, she was driving down another street and White returned and after forcing her again into the gutter he stopped his car and started to talk to her. She thought that the man was intoxicated. Officer Bombria said that when the arrest was made about three hours later, he did not detect any signs of intoxication. White said that Miss Davis would not turn from the middle of the road to her right side when he attempted to drive past her car. After he returned to explain matters but she would not listen and much to his surprise he later found himself under arrest. LOST BREATH, HEART FLUTTERED after least exertion

Weak, Nervous Woman Obtains New Health

"Some months ago, I found that after the slightest exertion I suffered from shortness of breath and fluttering of the heart. Frequently I would get a stabbing pain in my left side. I tried various remedies but instead of improving I became worse. My appetite failed and soon even the light food I took in was objectionable. Then my nerves became so weak that I would "jump" at any sudden sound.

One day a friend called and, seeing my exhausted condition, told me that what I needed was Wincarnis. I began taking it right away and in all I have taken four bottles and I am amazed at the wonderful result. Today I am strong and well and I owe all my renewed health to Wincarnis."

JEWETT CITY

Thanks to the quick action of Alvin Douglas and the prompt assistance of other men who ran to help, the First Congregational church of Griswold occupies its present site. This Pachaug church is reckoned as one of the landmarks in this end of the state, and is outstanding among the historic meeting houses of Connecticut. The records connected with its construction, its famous bell, and other architectural facts, speak of another century and of a time in the forgotten past. In all of which the forefathers of Griswold were deeply interested.

Thursday noon, during the preparation of the dinner, incident to a grand Pomona Grange celebration, the church caught fire in the kitchen, from an overheated oil stove upon which coffee was being made. For a few minutes those in attendance had stepped to the dining hall believing that the blaze in all three burners had been extinguished. Only a little while later smoke was noticed issuing from a rear window. Mr. Douglas was the first to rush in. The partitions and seats and several garments hanging near were burning briskly, with the paint all about smoking hot. Mr. Douglas grabbed the five gallon coffee boiler from the blazing stove and scattered the contents over the fire, the steam and coffee did the job. Other willing grangers rushed in with pails of water, and the fine old edifice, with all its treasured belongings was saved. Fortunately the damage was less than $500. F. L. Kanahan stated that in two minutes, with the windows ready to burst with the heat, the fire would have been out of control.

Sometime during late Saturday night or early Sunday morning the Jewett City greenhouse was entered from the rear and a money drawer containing one hundred dollars was stolen. A slip which contained a record of sales and money due was very considerately left upon the counter. A short time ago a man was seen on Mathewson street very early in the morning, and Officer Viegard was summoned to search for someone who was evidently prowling about some of the residences. On Main street, recently, in the night, a dog in the house barked for some time, and in the morning a gate which guarded the piazza entrance was found to have been taken down. There was no danger of anyone breaking in on Main street Saturday night, for the musical snores of a wayfarer located in Hourigan Bros.' doorway made it impossible.

A. M. Clarke, F. D. Ballou, S. R. Truesdell, G. H. Prior and H. E. Gilbert were in Woonsocket, R. I., Thursday evening to be present at a celebration of Morning Star lodge, F. and A. M., of that city. A class of eleven Fellowcrafts were raised to the degree of Master Masons. The music by a chorus of fifty voices was a special attraction. Morning Star, Clarke's home lodge, he, a past master of Mt. Vernon, was raised there thirty one years ago.

When the Leyland liner Winifredian cleared from her berth in the East Boston docks Friday afternoon, her passenger manifest showed Tyler Gilbert of Jewett City as registered in her first cabin list.

Passers-by on East Main street are admiring Dr. John Sullivan's beautiful La France rose bush, in full bloom.

Rev. J. W. Payne has returned from a trip to Granville, Ohio, where he attended the golden anniversary of his graduation from Denison university. At the golden and silver anniversary breakfast Mr. Payne was the only one to represent the class of 1873. In the academic procession, he and a '75 class man led the march. His college fraternity, Beta Theta Pi, made him very welcome, and at the alumni banquet he was one of the speakers. On his return trip he preached in the church in Groton, N. Y., where he was ordained forty-seven years ago, after three years in Rochester Theological seminary.

Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M., attended service at the Congregational church Sunday morning in commemoration of St. John's day. There were fifty-four Masons present. Rev. Howard Stephenson preached upon the theme of "Friendship". There was special music by the choir and a solo by William Dewitry.

Reliance lodge, No. 29, I. O. O. F., and Undaunted lodge, No. 24, K. of P., held a memorial service on Sunday morning at the Methodist church. The Value of Human Life was Rev. H. T. Wilbur's subject. The choir sang a memorial service anthem.

Sunday morning an auto bearing a Connecticut registration, but a Massachusetts resident driving, traveled up North Main street. At the junction of North Main and Brown avenue a team turned into the main road just as the car came up. Two men were on the sidewalk and a dog added to the mix-up. To avoid hitting the horse, the auto took to the sidewalk and hit the dog, killing it. One of the men asked the driver why he killed the dog, and he said it was either the horse, the men or the dog, so he selected the dog.

Miss Irene Stewart has returned from a visit with relatives at Kitemaug.

Prof. and Mrs. Champion Mathewson and children Janet and Hasen of New Haven are at L. G. Buckingham's for a few days. Miss Janet will spend the rest of the summer here.

The Congregational church and Sunday school picnic is to be held at Ocean Beach next Saturday. The picnickers will leave the church at 1 o'clock daylight time, and carry basket lunches.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

SHOOTING STARS.

Truth is stranger than fiction—you've heard it of yore,
I once knew a youngster so small
His presence I'd scarcely take note of before.
I forgot he existed at all!
And now he has grown to be taller than me,
And a certain respect is his due.
Since he's manly and honest and frank as can be,
It's strange, but it's true.

The acorn is nothing at all like the oak,
And the grub from the moth differs far.
I looked on him once as a bit of a joke,
How sadly mistaken we are!
I envy his earnestness, also his mirth,
And I know that he thinks I am due
To make room for him and get off the earth!
The things that seem strangest are true!
—Philander Johnson in Washington Star.

WHICH LOVED BEST?

"I love you, mother," said little John;
Then, forgetting his work, his cap went on,
And he was off to the garden swing,
And left her wood and water to bring.

"I love you, mother," said rosy Nell;
"I love you better than tongue can tell."
Then she teased and pouted full half a day,
Till her mother rejoiced when she went to play.

"I love you mother," said little Fan;
"Today I'll help you all I can;
How glad I am that school doesn't keep!"
So she rocked the baby till it fell asleep.

Then stepping softly she fetched the broom;
And swept the floor and tidied the room.
Helpful and happy as child can be.

"I love you, mother," again they said—
Three little children going to bed.
How do you think that mother guessed
Which of them really loved her best?
—Joy Allison.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO WIDE-AWAKES.

It is characteristic of boys and girls to want to play and have a good time. It is proper for them and it is good for them. They also like to do things, and to want to do big things. They have seen what others have done and they have been inspired by accomplishments in one direction or another. They are desirous of doing as well, to imitate or to do even better. It is a laudable ambition.

There are those who like to write, as the Wide-Awakes do, and who make it plain that they have the ability to write interesting letters telling about the things they do, the things they like, the experiences they have and giving good descriptions of pets, school, games and places. They have been taught it in their schools and they have been aided by the books they have read. Some probably have the desire to write a book themselves some day.

Most of the Wide-Awakes have probably read Uncle Tom's Cabin, by Harriet Beecher Stowe. It is a great book because it has a great deal behind it. That is the important thing in writing as in all other work—the idea. Of course people do have great ideas that they cannot express. By the people who make a name for themselves do so because they have a great idea that they do express. Without this inspiration there is no great book or work of art or invention.

Perhaps you ask, how are we to get a great idea? Not by looking for it, but by being sincere always, by having ideals and trying to live up to them. If you want to become a great author you must work while waiting for your inspiration. That will come if you are prepared for it. But you must be able to express it when it comes, and you can only do that by learning to write well about little things, the every day things you see about you and putting them into such stories as are written each week by the Wide-Awakes.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

My Cat Peter.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a cat named Peter. He is a good cat and he catches mice and rats. He also tries to catch my pigeons, but I don't let him catch them. In the winter he caught three of my pigeons. My father thought that the rats killed them, so my father set a trap to catch them. He only caught one in the trap. He set the trap again. The next day he went to see if there was a rat in the trap. He looked at the trap and saw my cat. He took him out of the trap and let him go. I like him because he plays with me. He can jump over my arms. When I pull the string along the ground he runs after it. This is the first time I have written to you.

My Kittens.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have three kittens. One is white, one has tiger stripes and the other is black and white. The white one's name is Kelly, the tiger-striped one's name is Dick, and the black and white one's name is Jeanne.

I am in the third grade.

Our Wild Flowers.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to you about the preservation of our wild flowers. As you know, many thoughtless people go into the woods or meadows and pull up the wild flowers by the roots. There are very few patches of trailing arbutus in the woods in the vicinity of my home.

Towards Christmas many people go into the Woods and cut the laurel bushes down for decorating purposes, and so destroy them. Our wild flowers are fast disappearing, and it is mostly the fault of careless people.

Laurel should be cut with a knife at all times and only a little should be taken from each bush. Everyone should be very careful while picking arbutus. They should have a pair of scissors or a knife with which to cut the stems as these are the most handy.

In a few years many of our most beautiful and fragrant flowers will be extinct if people are not more thoughtful. There ought to be some way of making careless people stop destroying our wild flowers.

Your loving friend.

My Lost Kitten.

Dear Uncle Jed: One time I went into a wood to hunt rabbits. My pet kitten followed me. After a while it was out of my sight. I thought it would go home; so I went on hunting and got back to the end of the wood. It was getting late, so I went home, but my kitten was not at home. I thought it would get hungry and come home. It was gone for three days. I went back in the wood and found it fast on a log. I took the axe and chopped the log so it could get out. I carried it home and gave it some milk in a little pan and it never wanted to go hunting with me again. My letter is getting long, so I will close my story.

Songs of Thanks.

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write you a letter telling you of a little story which I read. It was entitled The Parable of the Wren.

A priest went into the woods very early in the morning. The birds were challenging one another to see which could sing the loudest. Suddenly from a little bush came a note clearer and sweeter than all the rest.

The priest went nearer to see what bird was singing so much louder than the rest. There, to his great surprise, was a little wren.

"Ah," said the priest, "this is a lesson for my people. Even the weakest can have their song of thanks."

I had not thought much of the story until today, when one of our little chickens had a swollen eye. I brought him in the house and my sister bathed his eye and afterwards fed him. Then as he was eating he burst out singing cheerily.

And "Even the weakest can have their song of thanks," ran through my mind.

Your loving friend.

Getting Lost.

Dear Uncle Jed: One day I decided to take a walk to see the falls, so when my mother was not looking I slipped out of the back door. While I was walking along I saw a chipmunk. I stopped to play with it but it ran away; but I did not care. Soon I came to another one, but this one also ran away. Finally came to the falls. There were many people watching the falls. I stopped to watch also. Pretty soon I said to myself, "What is the use of watching? I think I will go a little farther." So I went on and on till it grew dark. I began to grow frightened, but I kept up my courage. Then I made up my mind to try to find my way home. I could not find my way back, but I did not want to give up. I tried and tried till at last I found my way home and I told my mother that I would never leave her again.

A Long Walk.

Dear Uncle Jed: One day I went for a long walk through the woods with some of my friends. We picked some pinks, violets and wild geraniums. We took some lunch with us and walked till we came to a big tree. Then we sat down under the tree to eat. When we were through eating we climbed trees and played games. We took our dolls with us, dressed in their new clothes. We walked farther on till we came to a spring. We took our little drinking cups out of our pockets and began to drink. Then we started home. At last we reached home. From now on we go out for a walk every Sunday and have a good time.

Summer Tanager.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a summer tanager. Have you ever seen one? It is red with brown wings. It comes from the southern states. It goes to South America in the winter and it changes its red summer coat to olive green. The female is much like a scarlet tanager and more orange in shade. The song is musical. It pleases everybody. It says chicky-tucky-tuck. The nest is built on the limb or a forest tree and the eggs are light greenish blue with numerous brown spots.

Our Physical Training Program.

Dear Uncle Jed: In these modern times there is more need for education than ever. Human activity cannot go on without it and the onward march of civilization demands it. Today it seems as essential as the air we breathe.

Education begins in the home, the kindergarten and the grammar school. The latter lays down the fundamental knowledge which must be obtained before one can continue his studies in the high school and college.

But what does this net result of all schools and colleges amount to if we have not good health.

Our teacher says: "Better be a farm laborer with good health and little education than a man with a great field of knowledge and yet so unhealthy that he is unable to get out of the house."

From this it follows first of all we need good health, and to acquire this we must have physical training.

When this country entered the World war, the first step in caring for our soldiers was to give them physical training. Hundreds of thousands of young men in khaki stood outside their barracks every morning for 15 minutes of this physical training.

The boy or girl who wishes to do things worth while must have a strong, healthy body and mind.

Our minds and our bodies are related so closely that their welfare cannot be separated. If we allow our bodies to become weak from lack of exercise or want of the proper kind of food our minds will not be vigorous.

The most active mind and the one that thinks best will be found in a healthy body.

The student must have recreation, exercise, good wholesome food, fresh air and sunshine if he wishes to preserve at its best that valuable treasure, his mind.

The boy or girl who neglects his mind for body cannot compete after life with the person who studies hard. One who neglects bodily health for the sake of knowledge is sure to fall behind the one who develops a healthy body to hold a healthy mind.

Therefore, physical training has become an important factor in the life of every school boy and girl.

A Generous Heart.

Dear Uncle Jed: Eva clapped her hands and a happy light shone in her eyes. "How nice that will be!" she exclaimed, "a whole vacation at the beach. If only Daisy Drexall could share it with me."

"What a generous heart that child has," thought her mother, and was surprised when Eva asked, "Mother, couldn't we take Daisy with us? Just think, she always stays home to help her mother. They're so poor, and her mother feels so badly because Daisy has no pleasure."

"I'll see what your father says, dear," was Mrs. Dale's reply.

The next morning in Eva's pocket was a note inviting Daisy to go with them to the seashore and saying that Eva would be heart-broken if she refused.

Two large tears glittered in Daisy's eyes as she read it, and throwing her arms about her friend's neck, cried "How good you are to me, Eva! I hope my mother will let me go, but if she needs my help I'll stay with her."

But Mrs. Drexall was pleased to have Daisy go and readily gave her consent.

How happy the two girls were that summer, and when school days once more began their teacher requested them to write a composition about "My Happiest Vacation." Eva wrote about this one. "I never enjoyed myself more, for didn't I make my best friend happy?" was what she told her teacher, and Daisy lovingly passed her arm about her friend's waist, saying, "I thank you, Eva."

That was all, but Eva knew how greatly she appreciated.

Picking Strawberries.

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week I drove my father's car out in the country. There were strawberries on the farm we went to. As I was picking the strawberries the farmer came along and said, "Picking strawberries! Well, then, if you have picked them you must pay."

"I will pay, but how much do they cost?"

Then he said, "You picked three boxes. That will cost you a half a dollar." I paid him. Then when we were going home he slipped the half dollar in my pocket. I did not know it. When I got home I was surprised to find the money in my pocket. I think he was trying to scare me.

The Adventure.

Dear Uncle Jed: I once lived in a large city in which there are very big buildings. The building that I lived in had five stories and the floor that I lived on was the fifth. My uncle who lived in New York gave me a bicycle for a present. I was so anxious to ride it that at last my father let me take it in the hall. My mother also gave me a glass of lemonade and I took them into the hall. As I was riding a little boy who I liked very much came in the hall eating a banana. He threw the skin near the stairs and I did not notice it. As I passed by the stairs the front wheel slipped on the banana skin and the bicycle and I fell down the stairs and I cut my thumb with the glass of the lemonade. It was a very deep cut indeed. I was put on a comfortable bed. After a few months my thumb got better and I never wanted to ride a bicycle again.

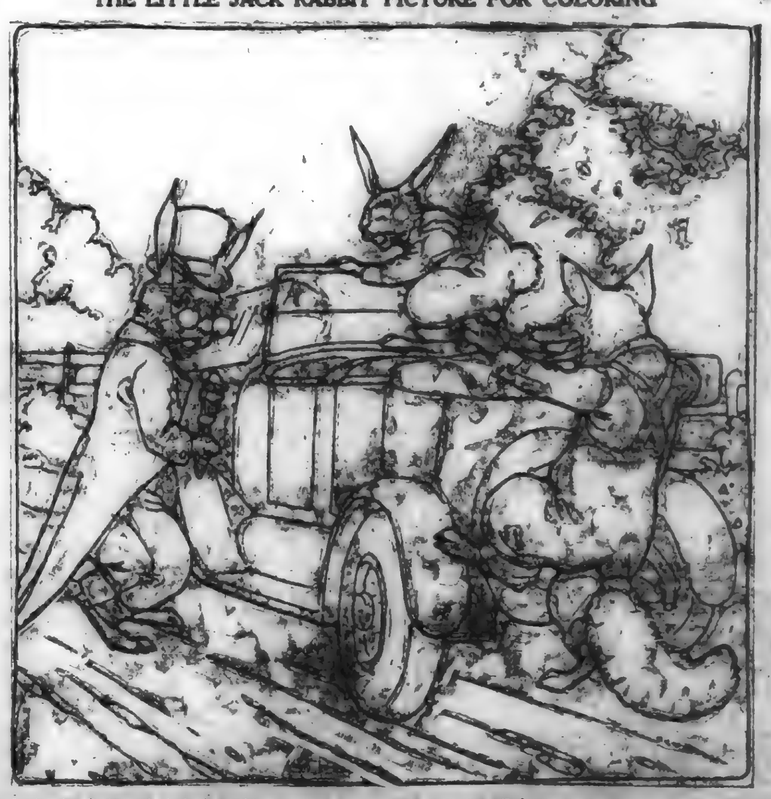
THE LITTLE JACK RABBIT PICTURE FOR COLORING



Uncle Lucky Lufthindfoot took off the receiver and shouted over the wire—

"One, two, three! Toss and catch, Clover Cottage. Bramble Patch!"

Pretty soon Little Jack Rabbit's voice inquired.

"Who is calling me, I wonder!"

Its going to rain—I hear thunder!"

"That's too bad and maybe three worse," said Uncle Lucky, "for I was just coming over to take you riding in the Luckymobile."

"Never mind, come anyway," answered the little rabbit. "I've got an umbrella and a rubber coat—I'm not afraid of the rain."

"Very well. I'll be over," replied the dear, old gentleman rabbit," putting on his goggles and his old wedding stovepipe hat. Then, cranking up the Luckymobile, he hopped in and set off for the Old Bramble Patch.

He had gone but a short way, when, all of a sudden, just like that, quick as a wink and faster than a comet, out jumped Danny Fox from behind the Big Chestnut Tree.

"Stop! Stop!" he shouted, as Uncle Lucky sped by, his blue polka-dot silk handkerchief having all it could do to keep the tall stovepipe hat from being blown off the old gentleman's head.

"I'll be sorry if I do," answered the brave, old bunny uncle "and maybe sorrier" and he kept on as fast as the Luckymobile would go. Goodness me, how fast it went! Indeed, it almost seemed as if the wheels would jump right out of their rubber boots they sped so swiftly over the road.

Pretty soon, Danny Fox shouted again, "Stop! Stop! I'm so close to your rear wheels I can bite off the spokes!"

"Go ahead," answered Uncle Lucky, "Use them for toothpicks, for all I care!"

My, but he was a brave old gentleman rabbit, this Uncle Lucky, now wasn't he? Well, I guess yes.

But, Oh dear me, all of a sudden, something went wrong with the Luckymobile and it stopped with a bump, and in jumped Danny Fox from behind the Big Chestnut Tree.

"Help! Help!" he shouted, as Uncle Lucky, trying to hide under the seat,

"Help! Help!"

"Nobody will hear you," laughed the wicked old fox, pulling the old gentleman rabbit out of the luckymobile by the coattails. "There's nobody around. You're a goner!"

"Maybe, but not perhaps," answered the brave old bunny and with a wiggle and a jiggle, he slid out of his swallow tail coat. Then, with a hop, skip and jump he landed on the ground and before Danny Fox could say "Jumping Jupiter!" or something else dear, brave Uncle Lucky had hidden in a hollow stump.

"Where has that old rabbit gone?" asked the wicked fox, anxiously peering under a stone and behind a bush and inside an old cracker paper box, but the wise old gentleman rabbit was in none of them—oh my, no!

"Where has he gone?" again inquired the disappointed old fox and next week, dear children, you shall hear what happened after that. In the meantime color today's picture and have it ready and wait for the next story.

NO CHANGE IN LEAGUE LEADERS BUT SEVERAL CHANGES IN SECOND DIVISION

New York, June 24.—Skirmishing for better positions among the clubs below the leaders featured the week's games in the major league. Cincinnati made a strong bid for second place in the National, now held by Pittsburgh, but fell off several points today when their star pitcher, Luque, the Cuban, met defeat at the hands of the Cubs, whose famous roundsman, Alexander, held the Reds to three hits.

The Cubs took fourth place from the Cardinals, who had a poor week. The league-leading New York Giants won their sixth straight game today, improving their position.

In the American league the St. Louis Browns crawled into the lower hole of the first division ahead of Cobb's Detroits and Washington moved from seventh place to sixth over the Chicago White Sox. The champion New York Yankees won four of their six games.

The Yankees gathered the most hits in the week and the Browns the most runs. In the National the Cubs were the heaviest hitters and scorers.

TOPORCER TO BLAME FOR TONEY'S QUITTING

St. Louis, Mo., June 24.—The blame for Fred Toney's quitting of baseball in the second inning of yesterday's Chicago-St. Louis Nationals contest has been put upon the shoulders of Shortstop Toporcer by Manager Branch Rickey.

Late last night Manager Rickey pointed out that Toporcer erred twice, first in refusing to heed the advice of an older and more experienced player and second in raising his fists to a teammate, but stated that no disciplinary action against the shortstop would be taken.

Toporcer admitted he was at fault and later apologized to Toney, but the latter declared the fans' jeering when he reprimanded Toporcer for not following his sign to play close to third base while Heathcote was batting was the cause of his decision.

Peckinpaugh and Harris starred in the field and at bat, each getting a home run. Mogridge kept Philadelphia's hits well scattered and had perfect control. Score:

ALEXANDER SHUTS OUT REDS WITH THREE HITS

Chicago, June 24.—Grover Alexander held Cincinnati to three scattered hits in a pitching duel with Adolpho Luque and Chicago shut out the visitors, 2 to 0. Luque's wildness proved his undoing, as two of the men he had walked crossed the plate, the first run in the fifth inning, putting an end of the Cincinnati star's string of scoreless innings against his opponents. He had pitched twenty-nine innings without a run being made off him. It was also Luque's second defeat of the season in eleven games, the Cubs having won the other game off him. Incidentally the Cuban's winning streak which had reached seven straight was checked. Only two Reds reached second base, one Harper on a double and Bohne on a wild throw by Hollocher.

DODGERS GET EARLY START AND WIN

Brooklyn, June 24.—Weinert's wildness gave the Dodgers a six run lead in the first inning today and they beat the Phillies easily 10 to 4. Weinert passed the first three batters and hit the fourth, an error by Holke and another pass caused Weinert to be derricked leaving the game to Winters with three runs across, the bases full and nobody out. The three men scored eventually, Grimes making the only hit of the inning. Fournier made his second home run in two days in the fourth when Brooklyn added three tallies to their total. Grimes allowed nine hits, one of them a homer by Tierney, who also got two singles. It was a day of accidents, Winters, Hubbell and Taylor being hit by balls during practice. Fournier, Bailey, Mokan and a woman spectator during the game. The only person injured was the spectator, who was cut on the forehead. Score:

GENE McCANN GIVEN RELEASE BY OWNER OF THE BRIDGEPORT CLUB

Bridgeport, June 24.—Following a brief wordy duel before the double header with Hartford here today with President Jack Kearney, Gene McCann, manager of the Bridgeport Eastern league baseball club for the past two seasons, was released as manager, and Fred Fisher, recently elected captain, was appointed as temporary pilot.

The Bridgeport club has not been faring well this season and is now in last place. There has been much dissension with the owners and the management for some time past.

McCann has been in the Eastern league five years. He won the pennant with the New London club in 1914 and 1916 and finished third with Bridgeport in 1922 and second with the locals in 1921.

The home team played good ball Jones getting a couple of difficult catches in left field, and Hart handled some hard ones at third in fine style.

Riverview hit Stevenson for a total of 26 bases, West getting two doubles and a triple. The score:

TROUBLE AT FARM FOR WOMEN

There are varying reports concerning the situation that exists at the Connecticut farm for women at East Lyme. Different views prevail as to the offers of all but one of the board of directors to resign. But the fact seems to be clearly established that there is friction in the board, that it is caused by the work of one member and because of such activity the superintendent of the institution has resigned and the clearing up of the situation has been put into the hands of the governor.

What the outcome will be is not indicated except that one of the board of directors, whose term expires this week and who is numbered among the majority has been reappointed for another term. The minority member will not complete her term for another year, but there is no chance of getting the matron to return, though the rest of the board desire it, as long as this minority member remains on the board.

This crippling of what all but one member of the board desires is an unfortunate situation. What the governor will do with the matter remains to be seen. The public welfare commission has become interested in the situation. It has heard the directors of the farm colony and it has probably obtained the views of the member who has caused the friction. It is plainly a situation that cannot be continued for the good of that institution and the work it is expected to do.

The governor has visited the institution. He knows the purpose of this state farm and he knows that a board that is not working in harmony with itself and the superintendent is not serving the state. With the facts in his hands the governor should be able to apply the needed remedy.

AMERICAN LAW BREAKERS

The sending of a revenue cutter from Alaska to Siberian waters where American vessels were seized by the soviet authorities thats this government is going to look into the circumstances and find out whether they were engaged in the violations of laws as charged or whether they have been wrongly treated.

According to rports they were caught within the Siberian three mile limit and engaged in the violation of the liquor and fur exportation laws.

This government has not recognized the soviet government and it has taken care to state that anyone was at liberty to trade with that country but that such trade must assume the full responsibility of it. It has no government encouragement and it could not be expected that the government would protect the dealings under the circumstances.

Again if there are Americans who set out for the purpose of breaking the laws of other countries, whether those countries have been recognized by this government or not it can hardly be expected that this government is going to insist that they must not pay the penalty of their acts.

It might well be concerned to see that they were not unjustly treated, but it could not properly take the position that they ought to be released because this government has not recognized soviet Russia.

When this government sends a revenue cutter to look after the interests of the crews of the four American vessels it follows the expected course that they may get the protection they are entitled to, but not tha they should not be punished. This government holds to the right of the United States to guard itself against the violators of its dry and smuggling laws and it isn't going to take any different view regarding those Americans who undertake to violate the same or similar laws of other countries.

THE RIGHT ATTITUDE

Down in Savannah, it has been set forth in the news, a crowd bent upon removing a prisoner from jail, for the purpose of dealing with him according to their own ideas and without giving him a chance to be tried and dealt with according to the facts, was unsuccessful. It encountered strong resistance and failed.

There are other places where similar things have happened, but this is worth noting was in Georgia, the leading state for lynchings and where less progress has probably been made in stamping out such a practice than in most other southern states.

Perhaps Georgia hasn't reformed. Possibly there will be a lynching there before the month is over. But it is nevertheless evident that in and about Savannah there is a manifestation of the oft repeated claim that the better class of the people of Georgia are not favorably disposed toward lynching.

It was a case of course where the authorities were fully conscious of their duty and did not waver because of the determination of the crowd. There was plenty of lynching spirit. Had there been a wavering on the part of those responsible for the life of the Negro in jail his life would have been taken. How desperate the mob was is shown by the fact that one man was shot and several were wounded.

It was one of those cases that would serve as a guide for other authorities put in a similar position. It was plainly evident that there was no passive resistance. The mob encountered more trouble than it had anticipated, and there are good reasons for believing that if such were the case in more instances where jail deliveries are attempted there would be a much needed damper placed upon that hotheadedness which is responsible for the efforts in behalf of mob rule.

Savannah authorities took a most commendable and courageous stand. If there could be more instances of the kind where successful fights were made for the upholding of law and order rather than truckling to lawlessness the lynching record would show an improvement in the right direction.

THE LEVIATHAN'S TEST

Even though there is a desire that this country should not engage in the operating of the merchant marine there cannot fail to be pride in the showing that has been made by the Leviathan, the queen of the fleet, on its trial trip following reconditioning. Important changes have been effected at an expenditures of a large sum of money but it has resulted in shifting from Great Britain to the United States the honor of the fastest transatlantic liner.

It means much as business attraction and advertising feature. The biggest ship was the honor that the country held prior to the changes made in the craft, but now in addition thereto it likewise becomes the fastest. The biggest and the fastest should be an advertising advantage for the American merchant marine of no small benefit. It is an honor that means something both in the pursuit of business and the value of the ship. It justifies the expeditures that have been made and gives promise of record business as it goes into commission on the established route.

Not a little has been said in regard to the large expense involved in the carrying of the invited guests. By the report, on the return of the Leviathan, it is shown that the cost of the trip, outside of the running expense and the maintenance of the officers and crew during that period, was but two dollars a day for each guest, or a total sum that will come well under $10,000. That considering what was involved was a trifling amount. It shows that there had been much ado about nothing in trying to have the best trip with guests branded as a great waste of public funds. It again shows that the proof of the pudding is in the eating.

SUGAR PRICES

Attention cannot fail to be halted by a despatch from New York dealing with the sugar market wherein reference is made to the fact that refiners have continued to "maintain quoted prices to the domestic wholesale trade in granulated at the same figure as before the recent two cent drop in the price of raw sugars."

Such a figure as the raw sugars have been bought for have given the refiners "a margin well above two cents a pound, whereas there have been times when they have been content to do business apparently with good profits, for long periods with the refiners' margin well under one cent a pound." The same report states that "there has been slight reduction in cost to the consumer as a result of the recent decline in raw prices, refiners and jobbers absorbing most of it."

That is of course interesting. And all the more so because of the fact that there has been a clamor for a reduction in the taiff rats, amounting to less than two cents a pound. The sugar tariff rates are now under investigation by the tariff commission and it may be that there will be some cut later on, but what concerns the consumer at this time is as to whether they would even get the benefit of a reduction if it were made.

If the cost of raw sugar has dropped and the price of granulated has not reflected the equivalent, but has been absorbed along the line, what reason is there to expect that the cutting of the duty would be treated in any different manner? It is certainly far preferable that he sugar duty should go into the federal treasury where the country will get the benefit of it, than into the pockets of private corporations and jobbers.

EDITORRIAL NOTES

Don't expect to get your cherries before the robins have had a sample.

The man on the corner says: Did you ever notice how many lay stress on the policy of honesty for the other fellow?

The next thing the rum runners will be adopting the Chinese bandits game and demanding position in the dry enforcement squads.

We have returned to those days when heedless rockers of the boat find that people drown now just the same as in previous years.

Strange how part of one nation suddenly thinks that another part ought to die. Just now Bulgaria is suffering with the malady.

Now we are told that a Romanoff czar will be ruling Russia in three years. But Senator Brookhart will put a stop to that before he returns.

A Boston man has been found after being lost for a month and doesn't know where he's been. That is worse than the old fashioned week end stay.

In a statement about the first talking machine it is said to date back to 1877. Probably you figured that it was going to be fastened on Eve.

Will that Massachusetts prisoner who shouted "I'll get you" to the judge, who sent him to prison for three years, get his release after serving a few months?

Figures showing over 26,000,000 barrels of beer brewed in the British Isles in twelve months doesn't indicate that prohibition had got its grip on the people over there.

Up in Vermont attention is being directed to the political pressure being exerted upon the judges to deal lightly with the liquor smugglers. Has that happened in other states also?

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Never wash a sieve with soap. Use soda or ammonia with the aid of a stiff brush.

By using coffee instead of water when making gingerbread the taste will be improved.

A teaspoonful of vinegar added to the water in which fish is boiled will help to make it firm and white.

Try weting ink stains with peroxide of hydrogen, and then laying in the sun.

The life of baskets can be prolonged by scrubbing them occasionally with hot soapsuds.

Don't spoil a harmonious color scheme with what mats on some of your pictures. Use all white mats or no white mats in one room.

If a cake recipe calls for four eggs and you have only three, add a spoonful of corn starch. Beat it in with the eggs and you will never know the difference.

A good way to prevent a lamp from smoking is to soap the wick in strong vinegar and to dry it well before it is used.

To make mustard most appetising add a little salt when mixing.

Pork takes thirty minutes for each pound and thirty minutes over.

Knives which have been onioned will not taste if rubbed with a raw potato.

Bruise the pits of apples and pears, tie them in muslin and use for flavoring tarts or stewed fruit.

When serving ham cold, a salad of beetroot and celery with a simple dressing, or a salad of chopped apples, celery, nuts, banana and sliced orange, with a cream dressing is more than passing good.

Eggshells ought to be cleaned, dried, and kept for clearing soups. The need to be crushed when wanted for this purpose, and mixed with just a little white of egg, left over, perhaps when making a cake.

Instead of putting paper in the bottom of the table and kitchen drawers, use white oilcloth, and see how much better they look. They are easily wiped with a damp cloth, and are cleaner and more serviceable than paper.

Cleaning Pearl Handled Knives.

For cleaning pearl handled knives use very fine salt, and polish with a chamois leather. After years of wear many knives become thin at the top and dangerous. Have the top snapped off and re-rounded with a file. Loose handles can be refixed by filling the hole with melted resin. Warm the bait and insert; leave for a day or two before using. Handles treated like this never become loose again.

SOFTENING SPONGES.

To soften a hard sponge cover with cold water, add a tablespoonful of borax, and bring slowly to the boil in a clean saucepan. Then remove the sponge, rub some borax into it, and rinse under the cold tap, allowing the water to run over it for several minutes.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Cleanliness is the first consideration. The daily bath not only cleanses the skin but if free the system of many impurities by opening the pores. A brisk rub down with a flesh brush or loofah after the bath acts as a stimulant and helps to tone the body.

Good powder puffs are costly, and their age does not matter, that's true enough—if they are kept clean. Soap and water costs little. Lamb's wool puffs, the best, wash and dry easily. If you have two, you can wash one each week—and no puff should be used longer than that without being thoroughly cleansed.

And for powder, use little and use the best you can afford. It should be the proper tint for your skin, and it should be a vegetable powder. Mineral powders are drying and harmful.

The formula frequently given for eyelashes is also an excellent tonic for making the eyebrows grow. The ointment formula is as follows: — Cocoa, butter, 1 dram; white wax (or paraffin), 4 drams; lanoline, 1-2 dram, oil of sweet almonds 4 drams, perfumed oil 2 drops. This is a heavy cream which is splendid for producing hair.

RIBBON VANITY CASE.

The large compact powder boxes which most girls and women prefer to the miniature variety take up a good deal of space in one's bag and it is not always convenient to purchase the large vanity case with chain attached. An excellent substitute may be fashioned by a girl who is clever with her needle by using ribbon.

Fold a piece of ribbon over your favorite powder compact box. Sew the two sides together in a circle and bind the ends with gold ribbon. Use a piece of the same ribbon for a strap, attaching it to the case with tiny flat gold ribbon roses; use similar roses on each corner of the bottom of the case. A monogram may also be done in gold ribbon on the center of the case.

CORSAGE OF VIOLETS.

The deft-fingered girl, if she is partial to corsage ornaments or ribbon, can make the daintiest bunch of violets by utilizing the narrowest of orchid, violet and purple ribbon. Each petal is a loop of ribbon knotted at the tip of the petal. Seven of these loops and five ribbon ends are caught tightly to green flower stems. These stems are purchased from the purpose and have gold stamens which make the center of the violet. Each violet is made entirely of one shade of ribbon, but the completed bouquet consists of three shades. It may be tied with gold or purple ribbon which falls in long, narrow streamers. Just beneath the bow a tiny sachet bag filled with violet sachet powder is attached.

TO TEMPER CHINAWARE.

Delicate chinaware will not easily break if it is tempered before being used. This is done by putting the china pieces into a pan of cold water and gradually letting it come to a boil. Allow the china to remain in the water until cold.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Plaits are everywhere in blouses and frocks.

Flowers of beads are worn as earrings.

Puffs of foulard, plaited, are used at the elbows of a serge frock.

Big Spanish combs of tortoise shell are worn for evening, and so are huge jet combs.

All sorts of colored shoes are worn, and among them are kid slippers of pastel shades to wear for evening this summer.

There are also colored kid sandals for summer wear, presumably a result of the Egyptian influence.

Big straw hats of irregular brims are trimmed only with a huge ostrich plume, hanging low at one side.

Deep cuffs of organdie flare widely at the top and reach to the elbows. They are sometimes edged with lace sometimes left quite plain.

A gantlet glove is made with tasseled ends to lacings that are decoratively used to fasten up the gantlet seams.

Sandals in red, green and blue kid are made with cutout toes and low heels for sport and morning wear.

A blouse is made with a long turnback surplice collar of linen, which has one end ending in a pleated sash that hangs down over the skirt.

One of the ways of giving a one-sided look to the frock is to pose a big ornamental pocket on one side of the skirt.

A striking frock is of navy blue crepe with wool dots embroidered in white over part of its surface. And there is a smart little veil of wide mesh edged with little wool balls.

Gray marabou is used in some of the smartest silk evening wraps for warm weather.

IN BLACK AND WHITE.

A low necked one-piece slip is made of white satin crepe. It is, of course, sleeveless and hangs in a straight line from the connecting points on the shoulders to the ankles. Naturally, no pattern is required to make a slip of this sort. Now brocaded black velvet ribbon is tacked across the neckline in the back and caught at the connecting point of each shoulder so that the modish drop shoulder cape effect is achieved. The ribbon continues down the front on either side to a low waistline where a girdle made of braided narrow black velvet ribbons molds it in, drawing it toward the center, where a large metal ornament may be used effectively. From here the wide velvet ribbon continues to below the bottom of the skirt where it is caught up under the hem. The braided narrow velvet ribbons which make the girdle swing in a long oval from the waistline down the front and the back of the gown. Where the wide ribbon approaches the waistline and again near the hem of the dress the ribbon is split and bound with narrow pliable satin ribbon. This is very easily done and adds to the intricate appearance of the gown. Between the slits the white satin crepe glows softly.

This costume may be effectively carried out with a pale yellow silk crepe and a blue and gold metallic ribbon.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

When boiling clothes, place an unpeeled lemon, cut into slices, in the copper with the clothes to boil. This will remove all stains, and make the clothes beautifully white.

Though salt is excellent for putting into the water when washing colored materials, it should not be used for black fabrics, which must be dipped into a lather containing two or three teaspoonsful of borax.

Use only the purest soap and water which is just warm. Very hot water, or cheap soap will remove all the color from the hose, and will make the threads so brittle that bad "ladders" will result.

To turn hard water soft, take one can of lye, 10 cents' worth of salts of tartar, 10 cents' worth of powdered ammonia and dissolve in a gallon of water. Add one cup to a wash boiler full of water and use only half as much soap as heretofore.

NO BOILING.

One pound of good soap, 1-2 pound of borax, 3quarts of soft water Shred soap into 2 quarts of water, melt over a slow fire. Dissolve borax in 1 quart of boiling water, then stir into the melted soap. The result is a clear mixture, forming a soft jelly when cold. When to be used, dissolve some of the soap jelly in a pail of soft water, pour it into the tub prepared for the clothes. Soak clothing 24 hours. Following the soaking, the clothing will require very little washing.

TRIM BABY'S BOUDOIR.

Many delightful ribbon touches are appearing in baby's boudoir. One of the most delightful trimmings is made as follows: Two-tone satin ribbon one inch wide is laid in one-inch box pleats and stitched down the center to the edge of bassinet robe, boudoir lamp, dresser runner and chiffcrobe cover. The stitching holds the center down and forces the edges up so that each box pleat opens up and both colors of the ribbon are shown to good

Tuck. Sky blue and pale yellow are appropriate tones for the bassinet if the baby is a boy, or shell pink and pale yellow if the baby is a girl.

YARN TRIMMED BOOK MARK.

The ribbon book mark takes on a new and distinctive air. It is yarn trimmed, in keeping with the vogue for worsted embroidery.

Run the yarn in and out stitch down the sides of the ribbon. Make a yarn doll about one to one and a half inches long nad attach to one end of the book mark. On the other end put a light shell or wooden paper knife, a pencil, or if it be for a man, a cigar cutter.

For sorority or fraternity members the color of the organization may be used for this useful little gift.

GARDEN HAT STREAMERS.

A charming hat for summer is a large garden shape of milan with myriads of ribbon bows in pastel shades decorating it, fluttering from crown to brim and perching saucily on the edge of the brim. The plain large straw shape with a wide orchid ribbon looped about the crown and hanging over the edge of the brim in long bows and streamers is still good.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

There are now approximately 100 women school directors in Pennsylvania, as compared with 80 in 1921.

Miss Reba Hurn of Spokane, first woman to sit in the Washington State Senate, has become a candidate for nomination to Congress.

In Italy, custom and antagonism to women workers confine them largely to such trades as tailoring, textiles and the tilling of the fields.

Mrs. Emma Guy Cromwell, former State Librarian of Kentucky, has announced her candidacy for nomination for Secretary of State in the coming Democratic primary.

The first scholarships in diplomacy ever offered to women in America have just been awarded by New York University under an endowment by Frederic Courtland Penfield.

As Assistant Attorney General of the United States, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt is paid a salary of $7,500 a year, the same as is received by Representatives in Congress.

FISH CAKES.

Remains of fish from the day's dinner may be converted into fish cakes by mixing with cornmeal mush in the proportion of two cups of meal to one of fish, all held together by an egg. Bits of green peppers or a few drops of onion juice may be added.

SOUR MILK USES.

Use sour milk with soda for gingerbread, biscuits and griddle cakes and you will have lighter results than when you used only sweet milk. If you are afraid of using too much soda, use with it a like measure of cream of tartar. Sour cream is very good in salad dressing.

RECIPES.

Hermits:—1-2 cup butter or other fat, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup fresh-keeping cocoanut, 3-4 cup rolled oats, 3-4 cup chopped dates, 1 1-2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powar, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 3-4 teaspoon cinnamon 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 1-3 teaspoon allspice, 1-3 cup milk.

Cream butter and add sugar slowly, creaming them together. Add well beaten egg, cocoanut, rolled oats and dates, and mix well. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and spices together and add to egg mixture alternately with milk. Drop from teaspoon on greased pan and bake in moderate over 12 to 15 minutes.

Orange Jumbles: —. One-half cup butter, one cup sugar, one egg, one-third cup orange juice, one teaspoon grated orange rind, three cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup fresh-keeping cocoanut, one egg white, additional sugar for tops.

Cream butter and add sugar slowly, creaming them together. Add beaten egg, orange juice and rind, and mix thoroughly. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together, and add half cup of coanut. Add to butter mixture. Chill. Roll out on slightly floured board and cut with doughnut cutter. Brush the top of each with slightly beaten egg white. Sprinkle with remainder of cocoanut and dredge with 5 little sugar. Bake in moderate oven about 15 minutes. This recipe makes 36 jumbles.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

President Alexander Meiklejohn of Amherst College, whose scholastic policies have brought about a bitter controversy that has divided the college trustees and alumini, was called to the presidency of Amherst in 1913, after service of eleven years as dean of Brown University. Dr. Meiklejohn is a graduate of Brown in the class of '93. He was, like a number of others who have risen to high place in American educational circles, born outside of the United States, at Rochedale, Eng., in 1872. He came to America at eight years of age. He became instructor in Brown four years after he was graduated, assistant professor in 1899, associate professor in 1903 and full professor in 1906. Philosophy has been Dr. Meiklejohn's teaching field. He stands for the classics as the best of training, for the value of disciplinary studies and for a systematic rather than an elective relation of courses in a college curriculum.

The glad hand from home reached to New London, where they were met by a dozen automobiles and Swahn's band of 15 pieces. Placards on the machines said "Norwich Welcomes You Home" Reaching this city, there was a parade in the machines with the band playing and they were brought to the Wauregan house for a banquet at 8 o'clock.

The tables were decorated with beautiful baskets of flowers which were later sent to the Backus hospital and Herb Smith's orchestra furnished a musical programme.

Chairman Francis P. Bert, who was in charge of the trip from New York, opened the speaking programme by introducing the president, William B. Klein as toastmaster, a post he filled with ease and acceptibility.

Mayor Miller R. Waters, extending the greeting from the city, said he was delighted to welcome her sons returning with laurels on their brows. Norwich is proud of her sons, glad to hear about them and what they do, but most happy to have them here tonight and shake them by the hand.

Principal H. A. Tirrell of the Academy quoted a line from Cicero: The anticipation of your arrival was greater than any possibility of realization, but your arrival is even greater than the anticipation. This was the spirit, he said, in which Norwich was glad to welcome her sons home again.

President Charles A. Baxton expressed the cordial welcome of the Rotary club and President H. M. Leroux spoke for that organization, in which he called attention to some of the improvements in the city in the last few years, and like President Saxton said that it is hoped this home-coming will be an annual event.

Ex-Mayor T. C. Murphy also expressed a cordial welcome as he spoke of this occasion as the pleasantest thing he had ever known in the life of Norwich and said he hoped to see it keep up from year to year.

Crawford, Charles A. Beach, Edwin A. Reeves, James H. Albertson, William F. Converse, and Francis P. Bent. It was on the motion of Mr. Bent that the flowers were sent to the hospital.

John M. Lee was called on and expressed a welcome as a private citizen, and R. C. Plant made a capital humorous speech in which he touched on many incidents in the lives of well known Norwich men.

At the opening of the meeting a toast to President Harding was proposed and The Star Spangled Banner was sung. The gathering adjourned at midnight with Auld Lang Syne.

SPARKS CIRCUS SCORES BIG HIT IN CITY

Sparks circus which came here Saturday for two performances, afternoon and evening, won golden opinions from the large crowds that flocked to the tent for both shows.

The excellent parade that passed through the street Saturday gave promise of good things to follow that were more than fulfilled. Many cages of animals, elephants in line, spangled riders, bands of music, sleek looking well kept horses and equipment were distinguishing marks of the parade, and the show inside the main tent and sideshows was as clean as the parade. The ring events were run off with smoothness and on schedule time and everybody was satisfied that he got his money's worth.

The Sparks circus was especially strong this year in its trained animal acts, among which were the jungle denizens, the elephants and the marvellously intelligent horses. An act that won rounds of applause was that by Miss Minnie Thompson, with her trained horse. Miss Thompson is the wife of Al 'Circus" Green of Willimantic, announcer with the show, and many of his friends from that city came to see him.

All in all, the Sparks shows gave satisfaction to their patrons and paved the way for a welcome any year they want to return.

WOMAN'S FINGER AMPUTATED AFTER AUTOMOBILE UPSET

Mrs. Yette Forschin of New York had one of her middle fingers so badly crushed in an automobile accident on Mohegan Hill Sunday afternoon about 5.30 o'clock that it had to be amputated when she was brought to the Backus hospital here for treatment.

She was riding in the new Dodge sedan of Dr. Zucker of New York, who had with him his wife, a woman friend and two children besides Mrs. Forschin.

His machine started to skid as he was driving down Mohegan Hill. He shut off the ignition and applied the brakes but the car continued to skid and the right front wheel slid into the ditch. The sedan turned over on its side.

All the passengers except Mrs. Forschin escaped injury. The disc wheels on the machine were badly sprung, one front door glass was broken and one of the mudguards slightly damaged. The body of the car escaped injury.

The sedan was righted and was driven to the Dodge garage in this city under its own power.

C. A. Gager brought the injured woman and Mrs. Zucker to the hospital in his automobile.

Wet grounds interfered with the annual ball game between the newspaper force and the job room, but Bert Lumis and Jim Fillmore looked after the wants of the inner man with their recognized ability in the preparation of chowder and chicken pie.

Star contributors to the programme of the day were two special guests, Bill Allerton and John M. McPhail of the Mergenthaler Linotype Co., the former in songs and recitations and the latter in selections upon the parlor organ and in bareback riding.

The three young men occupants were Arthur Roger Webster, 610 Pawtucket avenue, the operator of the automobile, sustaining bruises on head and hands; Ralph R. Webster, 187 Prospect street, owner of the automobile and brother of the driver of the car employed on the Pawtucket Times, sustained abdominal injuries, seriousness undetermined; John F. Radfkin, 135 Dean street, Artgrave Advertising Providence Sunday Journal, formerly employed for twe or three years on the New London Day, the least injuried of all.

In a Franklin touring car, 1923, register R. I. 5647 with the top down the Pawtucket party were proceeding homeward from the Harvard-Yale Boat Race at New London. Radfkin had driven the automobile, leaving Pequot Casino shortly before eleven o'clock to Westerly. At Westerly a change was made, Roger Webster took the wheel and not being familiar with the road the corner was approached at a speed of twenty-five to thirty miles an hour. Throwing the wheel to make the turn quickly, having supposed the Clarks Falls Road to be the one leading to Providence, the rear left wheel collapsed and the automobile and party crashed through the fence on the left hand side of the turn, turned completely over at least once and a half times and landed bottom side up headed toward the road. The young men were thrown clear of the machine but the young women were pinned beneath the overturned machine. Just previous to the accident the automobile of Tony Cheeny, Main street, Mystic, and Dan Hallisey, Old Mystic, had passed the Pawtucket machine, hearing the crash returned to the scene and found the occupants in a dazed condition.

Miss McAlevy was the most seriously injured the overturned automobile having to be lifted to free her. With a slight pulse and heart beat Miss McAlevy was placed in the Westerly bound machine with the rest of the party with the exception of Miss Hatch, who was sent in a passing automobile, to her home.

On arrival in Westerly at Dr. Scanlon's office it was found that the doctor was on Pierce street and the office of Dr. Henry Johnson was visited on Grove avenue. Examination showed that Miss McAlevy was dead. Deputy Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell who was called got in touch with Dr. Scanlon through the Westerly police, Sergeant Ferguson and Officer Curtin, also present, and Medical Examiner Scanlon ordered the body removed to the undertaking rooms of Joseph W. Gaffeny on Canal street, and Dr. Johnson proceeded to care for the injured at his office.

On the return to Westerly the automobile became stalled and trailer had to be made to a passing car owned in Stonington. When the injured had received treatment they were sent to their homes in Pawtucket in an autpmobile of John Pickering with the exception of Roger Webster whom Sheriff Mitchell directed to be held until after his return from the scene of the accident. After his return Sheriff Mitchell and Medical Examiner Scanlon went over the case with the result that Webster was later released. Upon being notified of her daughter's death, Mrs. John McAlevy, her sister, son and Dr. E. J. Matteson made a hurried auto tripto Westerly, going first to the Westerly police station and later to the undertakers rooms on Canal street. After hearing the details of the accident, which were considered almost unavoidable, Roger Webster was considered not responsible and requested to return to Pawtucket with them. The body was sent to Pawtucket by noon train by Undertaker Gaffney. Miss McAlevey was a member of the senior class of the Rhoid Island College of Education in Providence, having graduated from the Pawtucket high school. She is survived by a sister and five brothers.

DANIELSON

Sunday the hot wave came back to torture humanity. Accepting the viewpoint of the average citizen, it was hot enough to make an anthracite miner jealous—with his mind set on the weather that will be sifting through, day by day in every way, next winter. Up in the 90's the thermometers ranged again and seemed to take pleasure in the performance. Wonderful weather for the ice cream and laundry business, but perfectly awful for the average human being who is not interested in these lines of enterprise.

Ira Martin, formerly a resident here, left Saturday evening on the return trip to Sanford, Fla., where he is now engaged in business. Mr. Martin came here at the week-end to visit with old friends. He has been attending the Shriners' convention in Washington and then journeyed to Maine, where he has camp sites, as a feature of his trip north. At Sanford Mr. Martin is engaged in the grocery and provision business and is successful. Mrs. Martin, who has remained in the south, is associated with him in the business.

When on your vacation be sure to have a plentiful supply of travelers' checks—and you will rest easy if your valuables are safely stored in our burglar and fire-proof vault. The Danielson Trust Company.—adv.

Clarence A. Potter, for many years treasurer of the Brooklyn Savings bank, died shortly after midnight Saturday at his home on Broad street. Mr. Potter had been in failing health for a long time and critically ill for months part.

Mr. Potter was born in Williamsville, now Goodyear, February 26, 1855, a son of James A. and Lucy A. (Newell) Potter. After attending the schools of the town he entered, as a young man, the employ of the Brooklyn Savings bank and the Windham County National bank, both institutions at the time, 1876, occuping quarters in the same building in Brooklyn. Four years later he was named as secretary and treasurer of the Brooklyn Saving bank and continued in that capacity until his resignation from active business in October, 1921. Following his resignation Mr. Potter, with Mrs. Potter, traveled extensively, and since their return here have lived at their home on Broad street.

June 3, 1880, Mr. Potter was united in marriage with Mill Alice Louise Moody, of Whitinsville, Mass., who survives him.

Mr. Potter's death is a matter of regret to all who knew him—and that means to thousands of people in Eastern Windham county. He was always a gracious and efficient bank official, a courteous and kindly citizen. All who met him at his post of business found a friend and adviser and to him is due much of the credit for developing the Brooklyn Savings bank from a small institution to a bank that today is foremost in the ranks of such institutions in this part of the state.

Captain William Jarvis, leading the four regular members of the police force, with a search warrant neatly folded and tucked away in his inside pocket, invaded the cellar of Davis Beausoleil, Harrison street, about nine o'clock Friday evening, and there found a light wine and beer garden in full operation. Sitting about at small tables were fourteen inmates seeking the refreshing effects of home brew with an alcohol percentage above the regulation one half of one per cent. In the cellar was a stock sufficient for several days and the officers removed in trucks 32 cases and four barrels of beer and one bottle of elderberry wine. As the light wine and beer law, which many hope to see in operation at some future time, is not even in the embryo state as yet, the proprietor was ordered to appear in court Saturday morning.

When arraigned before deputy judge Archibald Macdonald Jr., Beausoleil, ex-democratic alderman from the third ward, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $200 with costs of $45.14. The state repair work recently commenced on the road leading from Putnam to Pomfret railroad station, again brings to mind the need of a sidewalk from the west end of the property of the Putnam Woolen Company on Pomfret street to the gates of the Day Kimball hospital. The roadway is a heavily travelled thoroughfare and without a sidewalk is dangerous for pedestrians who have to walk along the side of the road unprotected by and walk.

After nearly two months have passed the strike at the mill of the Manhassett Manufacturing Company is nearly forgotten as far as the public is concerned. The restaurant on South Main street is still being maintained by the union and meetings are held daily and the gatherings of strikers in their hall can be seen from Main street the only reminder to the public that former operatives of the plant are still idle.

Apparently the situation is still at a deadlock with neither side conceding that the other has been successful. The whir of machinery at the mill and its lightened windows each night are evidence that the plant is maintaining its night and day schedule. On the other hand idle persons about the business section evidence that a number of the strikers have not sought jobs elsewhere. The mill manufactures tire duck and at the present time that line of work is not at its height as evidenced by a shut down of a mill manufacturing a similar fabric a few miles to the south of this city. Manufacturers report that business at present is not at its best but all of the mills are running, some however on short time.

MANY PETTY THIEVING CASES IN NEW LONDON OVER THE WEEK END

New London, June 24—A sneak thief who has been operating in New London several weeks and who employs the same methods to gain entrance to the houses he seeks to pilfer from, occurred during the Yale-Harvard races Friday evening. Two places were entered and in exactly the same manner as have other breaks. The thief was seen to depart from one house and his description tallies with that of the crook who has burglarized other houses.

One of the houses entered was that of Charles H. Martin of No. 126 Mohegan avenue. The crook went to the rear entrance where a hole was made in the screen door, allowing the door to be opened. The glass in the door was then smashed permitting the thief to put his hand through the opening and unlock the door. A search for plunder but only cash was made and in his search the thief found $8 belonging to a young lady visitor of Mrs. Martin on a dresser in a room on the upper floor. No silverware or other valuables were disturbed.

The second break occurred at the home of Mrs. Jennie A. Lee of No. 48 Nameaug avenue, located but a short distance from the Martin home. The thief went to the veranda of the house and smashing a window, unlocked it and entered the house. He did not obtain any plunder however for Mrs. Lee and friends returned in an automobile and it is believed the stopping of the auto in front of the house caused the crook to be frightened away for he was observed running from the house by Robert C. Gates a neighbor. Mr. Gates informed the police that the crook was attired in a gray suit and straw hat and was about 35 years of age. The fellow that has been observing other houses to be burglarized is also described as being attired in a gray suit and straw hat.

A sneak thief operated at the lodging house conducted by Mrs. Williamson of No. 17 Masonic street Friday and Saturday for today two roomers there complained to the police that their rooms had been entered and each had suffered the theft of a suit of clothes. Just as the car was gaining speed and had reached a point nearly opposite Tilley street, the other machine, a Nash, and driven by Harry Squires of Spring street which was going in the opposite direction, was guided across the street and directly in front of the car Collins was operating. Before either machine had reduced its speed to any extent the two cars came together, being completely put out of business. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

SATURDAY'S MARKET.

Several large operators, who have been active recently, were away for the week-end and those who remained apparently found it more profitable to sell stocks than to buy them. Price fluctuations, as a rule, were narrow and unimportant.

President Harding's Kansas City speech on transportation problems brought some buying power into the railroad group at the opening, but the carrier stocks sagged with the rest of the list in later trading. Pittsburgh and West Virginia and Atchison each dropped about a point and Union Pacific, New York Central, Southern railway and a few other of the more active issues yielded fractionally.

Baldwin, Studebaker and American Can were the heavy spots among the so-called "pivotal stocks" but the net losses were held to fractions. Corn Products which was strong recently on the announcement of an extra dividend dropped more than 3 points on profit taking. Fisher Body broke 5 points on a small turnover.

Some of the strong spots were Woolworth, Houston Oil, Hartman Corporation, Atlantic Refining and West Penn Power, up 2 to 4 points.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was the rally in German marks which registered an overnight gain of 2 1-2 points, being quoted at .0010 cents as against the recent extreme low of .0006 1-4. The advance was attributed to the more stringent German government regulation of foreign exchange trading. The other principal rates held fairly steady, demand sterling being quoted around 4.61 3-8 and French francs around 6.18 cents.

The weekly clearing house statement showed increases of $6,564,000 in loans, discounts and investments and $349,000 in cash in own vaults. The reserve of member banks in the federal reserve bank decreased $18,507,000, net demand deposits dropped $11,981,000 and time deposits dropped $5,024,000. Aggregate reserve totaled $511,274, leaving excess reserve at $7,548,950, a decrease of $16,813,580 under the week before.

PLAINFIELD

The Congregational church was crowded Sunday morning when the members of Moosup lodge, No. 119, A. F. and A. M., and the Rebecca chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star occupied seats of honor, marching in from the grange hall where these bodies assembled. The line of march was led by the matron of honor, Mrs. John W. Lees, and by the worshipful master, John Ridings. There were large delegations from the orders to whom the pastor of the church, Rev. William C. Prentiss, extended a most cordial welcome. The music was led by the choir, James Royle, director, and a mixed quartet consisting of Mrs. John Bradford, Miss Esther Palmer Wilson, James Royle and Christopher Krause, rendered the selection, "Send Out Thy Light." The decorations consisted of roses and wild flowers and were in charge of a committee, Mrs. A. H. Mathewson, chairman. The congregational singing was also most inspiring. The pastor preached on the theme, "The Making of a Man."

The Sunday school was led by Assistant Superintendent Clarence W. Jeffers in the absence of Superintendent Cecil L. Butler.

The O. J. S. will meet with Mrs. Carl N. Mathewson on Monday evening which is the last regular meeting of the season and is dollar night.

A social event of note is the strawberry supper with ice cream served on Tuesday evening from 5.30 to 8.00 by the Ladies' Aid at the Congregational church. Extensive plans have been made for this mid-summer supper. There will be a sale of fancy work in charge of Mrs. William E. Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Griggs of Hartford were guests at Mrs. Griggs's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Exley every Sunday.

The annual meeting of the Alumni association of the high school was held at the school building last Tuesday evening in Central Village. Walter Lathrop was chairman of the meeting which accepted the class of 1922 into membership. The following names were presented and elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Ralph Brown '15; vice president, Harry Denison '21; secretary and treasurer, Floyd R. At this meeting the association voted to support the school paper, Hermind, by an annual gift of $10.

The senior reception of the high school, held Thursday evening at the community house, was one of the largest gatherings of the kind ever held in Plainfield. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Chapman and the senior class of twenty-one members, four juniors and eight alumni serving as ushers. The grand march was lead by the president of the class, Jean Bellavance, and the vice president, Miss Marjorie E. Windsor, followed by the senior class, other couples joining as the march proceeded. The music of the evening was furnished by the Philharmonic orchestra of Norwich. Ice cream was served during the delightful evening which will long be remembered.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Tillinghast spent Saturday and Sunday at their cottage at Ocean Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Payne of Jewett City joining them at the cottage.

Miss Mollie Baxter, lieutenant of the Girl Scouts of the Community house, has gone to the Girl Scout camp for Philadelphia, at Camp Media in Pennsylvania.

At the graduation exercises of the class of 1923 of Plainfield High school held Wednesday evening Supt. John L. Chapman read a letter from the Hartford Alumni association of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute saying they desired to make an annual custom of presenting a gold medal to that male member of the senior class of Plainfield High school who had the highest average in mathematics and science during the entire four years of his course. The medal was awarded to Joseph Scully Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lee of Plainfield, amid the enthusiastic applause of his classmates and all others present. His average in mathematics and science during the four years was 89 per cent.

REV. JAMES J. SMITH'S GIFT FROM NEW HAVEN PARISH

During last week the parishioners of St. Francis' church, New Haven, presented a purse of $2,000 to their rector, Rev. James J. Smith, to signalize the twelfth anniversary of his pastorate in that parish.

Before being transferred by his bishop to the New Haven church, Father Smith was the revered and beloved pastor of St. Mary's church, Central avenue, Norwich.

Although in impaired health for years, and at one time threatened with the loss of his sight, Father Smith has valiantly continued his work for souls, and is one of the most esteemed priests in the diocese of Hartford, popular alike with those of his own faith and the many non-Catholics who value his work as priest and citizen.

NORWICH MAN PROMINENT AT TUFTS MEDICAL COLLEGE

Among the students to distinguish themselves of the 350 graduates at the recent commencement exercises at Tufts college was Dr. George F. Cook, on whom the M. D. degree was conferred and who was an honor roll member of the medical school.

The doctor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Cook of Fourteenth street and was graduated from the Greeneville public schools and Norwich Free academy. He was graduated from Tufts Pre-Medical in 1919 and matriculated into the Medical School of Tufts in the fall of the same year.

DR. GEORGE F. COOK

Not only a brilliant scholar during his collegiate and medical school years, the doctor has proven himself a practical student while pursuing his course. He was connected with Boston City hospital in a clinical capacity in his sophomore and junior years, and served an obstetrical internship at the Evangeline Booth Maternity hospital in his senior year.

Dr. Cook has also figured prominently in the various activities of college life, as business manager of the "Caduceus," senior year book of Tufts Medical college, as a member of the student council, acting on the executive, reception and commencement committees. He is a member of Gamma chapter of Alpha Kappa Kappa, Louis Pastern Medical society, and Boston Council of the Knights of Columbus.

ISSUES WARNING AGAINST THE CROW AS ROBBER

Convincing evidence of the destructive and rapacious habits of the common crow as an enemy of game and song birds has been collected by Dr. H. B. Warren, the noted ornithologist of Pennsylvania, who during the last three weeks has been investigating wild life in the duck breeding grounds on the Virginia coast. Dr. Warren spent two days in looking for crow victims on the islands in that region and found no less than 675 eggs of rail birds, green herons, killdeer, meadow larks, domestic chickens and wild black ducks and also egg remains of some few other small song birds on ground under trees in which were crows' nests.

"Under and near one pine tree," said Dr. Warren, "where a pair of crows had four young, nearly able to fly, we picked up 352 egg shells, mostly clapper rails. Under another nesting tree where a crow's nest had four eggs nearly ready to hatch, 67 empty shells of birds' eggs and a few chicken eggs were gathered. The balance of egg shells were found on meadows and under trees about the island where crows had eaten contents before their young were hatched. We also found under these crows' nests young rails' wings and other remains of several kinds of birds, adult and young."

The crow is generally regarded by naturalists and sportsmen as one of the most destructive robbers of birds in the country and his depredations occur chiefly during the nesting season when the young are helpless. As a result of the enormous damage caused by crows in the destruction of game and useful birds, movements have been started in several parts of the country to conduct a vigorous warfare against them. In some states there are already bounties on crows. Anti-crow clubs are being formed in localities everywhere throughout the country where the crow has become a pest. Dr. Warren, who has made extensive studies in bird life, believes that the crow is one of the worst of all destroyers and his conclusions have led him to denounce this predatory species in severe terms.

The Connecticut State Board of Fisheries and Game has already taken the lead in urging sportsmen's associations and individual sportsmen to join in the movement for the destruction of all kinds of vermin, including crows, as a method of protecting game, not forgetting the domestic fowl.

Palestine Pictures at Y. M. C. A.

A goodly number attended the service at the local Y. M. C. A. at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The opening exercises consisted of the singing of hymns from the screen, also the reading of the scripture and prayer. Some forty slides of the interesting country of Palestine including several showing the habits and customs of the people, which are, of course in sharp contrast with our habits and customs.

W. C. Cain, who spent a year and a half in Y. M. C. A. work in Palestine explained the pictures in a very impressive and instructive way much to the satisfaction of all present. After the showing of the pictures time was given to questions about Palestine, and several of the audience made inquiry of Mr. Cain about several matters pertaining to Palestine, and the questions were answered in a very practical manner. The whole service was one of interest. Robert Otis officiated at the piano and Emery H. Davis operated the lantern. Next Sunday several reels of appropriate moving pictures will be shown.

POETRY

A BRAVE MAN'S PRAYER.

God, though this life is but a wraith,
Although we know not what we use,
Although we grope with little faith,
Give me the heart to fight—and lose!

Ever insurgent let me be,
Make me more daring than devout;
From sleek contentment keep me free,
And fill me with a truoyant doubt.

Open my eyes to visions girt
With beauty, and with wonder lit—
But let me always see the dirt,
And all that spawn and die in it.

Open my ears to music: let Me thrill with spring's first flutes and drums—
But never let me dare forget
The bitter ballads of the slums.

From compromise and things half done,
Keep me, with stern and stubborn pride;
And when, at last, the fight is won,
God, keep me still unsatisfied!
—Louis Untermeyer, in Christian Register.

THE SHHEPHERD BOY.

Like some vision olden
Of far other time,
When the age was golden,
In the young world's prime,
Is thy soft pipe ringing,
O lonely shepherd boy;
What song art thou singing,
In thy youth and joy?

Or art thou complaining
Of thy lowly lot,
And thine own disdaining,
Dost ask what thou hast not?
Of the future draming,
Weary of the past,
For the presept scheming,
All but what thou hast.

No, thou art delighting
In thy summer home;
Where the flower inviting
Tempts the bee to roam:
Where the cowslips bending
With its golden bells,
Of each glad hour's ending
With a sweet chime tells.

All wild creatures love him
When he is alone;
Every bird above him
Sings its softest tone.
Thankful to high heaven,
Humble in thy joy,
Much to thee is given,
Lowly shepherd boy.
—Letitia Elizabeth Landon.

APPALLING ACCIDENT ON THE BROOKLYN ELEVATED

Eight Persons Killed and 45 Injured When Two Wooden Cars Plunged From Elevated Structure Into Busy Street Traffic at Fifth and Flatbush Avenues—Electric Trolley Wires Were Carried Away by the Falling Train—Many Passengers Were Pinioned as Flames Shot From Beneath the Cars—Rescue Work Was Performed With Fire Apparatus and Police Patrols—Mayor Hylan Declares Accident Was Caused by a Defective Truck and Rotted Guard Rail—Says Cars Are From 30 to 40 Years Old—Guard Rails 30 Years Old.

New York, June 25.—(by the Associated Press.)—Seven Persons were killed and 83 injured today when two wooden cars plunged from a Brooklyn elevated structure into the borough's busiest traffic intersections at Fifth and Flatbush avenues.

The two-car train, well filled with an early afternoon crowd of women, children and a few men, jumped the rails, ripped through rotted guard beams, tottered on the edge of the structure while hundreds of passers-by stood spellbound in terror, and pancaked on its side to the pavement. A mass of splintered debris.

Carrying with it a mesh of electric trolley wires, the train hurled to the pavement amid spurts of blue flame and crackling wire. As screams of the pinioned passengers, many of them transfixed by jagged sections of broken wood, rose above the crash, flames shot from underneath the cars and drove back pedestrians who ran to the scene.

The driver of a delivery truck, the radiator of which had been caught under the falling train, rose white and trembling from his seat, burst into tears and staggered away. Two women, shaking as if with palsy, their faces bleeding from cuts, climbed out of the wreck and walked after him.

Within a few minutes, a dozen police patrols, apparatus and police squads had broken their way through a parrier of several hundred bystanders. A score of ambulances arrived as the firemen fought to choke off the flames, their work interrupted intermittently by hear of injuring screaming women begging to be extricated.

Policemen, ambulance interns and members of the railway, wielding axes ferociously, extricated one after another of the victims. Two hours of continuous hacking at the smoking, jagged mass of splintered boards which had been railway cars, were required to clear the wreckage of the bodies of living and dead.

Motorman Charged with Homicide.

Edward Parcell, motorman of the train, who escaped without a scratch was arrested, charged with homicide, after he had been questioned for more than an hour by Police Inspector Coughlin.

While hundreds of employes with 50 wrecking cars removed the debris which was stretched for fifty square yards on the pavement, Mayor Hylan, District Attorney Dodd, Gerhardt Dahl, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit Company which operated the train, and the police started inquiries into the incident.

The mayor and district attorney, after inspecting 25 yards of ties which had been ripped to splinters by the crash, announced their opinion that the loss of life had been caused by faulty construction.

"I am convinced," said the Mayor, "that the accident was caused by a defective truck leaving the tracks and crashing through a rotten guard rail which, if good, should have prevented the fall to the pavement. The present guard rails are 30 years old. The cars are from 35 to 40 years old."

Mr. Dodd declared that the guard rails were nothing but a mass of matchwood and had long outlived their usefulness.

Accident at Switch.

All investigating officials agreed that the accident had had its inception at a switch, fifty feet beyond which the train had plunged to the street. The Mayor, who had worked as an employe on the elevated road when it was built many years ago, asserted that the second car had been derailed at the switch, had dragged along on the ties and had pulled the first with it through the rotted rail.

Although Parcell, the motorman, asserted that he had seen the switch turn to green, giving him right of way, the switch was turned to red after the accident. The mayor openly charged that it had been tampered with after the crash.

The accident took place shortly after two o'clock. The train of the fifth avenue line, carrying for the most part women shoppers to the center of the city, was coasting along the straight piece of track to the Long Island Railway station, the busiest traffic intersection in Brooklyn.

Stories of Pedestrians.

Scores of pedestrians were walking under the elevated structure and two motor cars were underneath. Passers-by declared they saw the first car "skip," topple, hang over the edge for a few seconds. Then both cars turned on their sides and crashed to the street. Two passengers in a motor car were buried under the falling cars and killed instantly.

Parcell, the motorman, declared that about 20 feet before he reached a trailing switch controlling a connection between east and west bound bound tracks, he felt a sag and bump.

"I was coasting at the time," he said. "I put on the emergency brake and it did not hold. The switch had been green and had given me a clear headway so I looked back to discover what was the matter.

"Then suddenly I heard the ties and guard rails splinter and the car went over the side of the structure in a nose dive. A few feet from the tracks, I felt in catch and then both cars went over on their sides. That saved me. They pulled me out of my box."

Other witnesses declared that another train had passed the switch safely four minutes before the crash. Jean Mondong, a switchman, declared the switch had been set at green and had been in good condition at ten minutes when he examined it.

An automobile owned and driven by Harry H. Vail, superintendent of the transmitting plant of the Southern New England Telephone Company on Columbia avenue, was struck by a trolley car about 7 o'clock Monday morning on the South Coventry and Mr. Vail had what he termed as a narrow escape from death.

The trolley, which was travelling at a fairly good rate of speed, plowed into the Ford touring car and completely demolished the front end. Vail received a severe laceration on the left forearm and several other minor bruises. Mr. Vail had just left his home on Brown avenue and was topping a short but steep grade which leads around the trolley tracks onto the state highway. Vail blew his horn but failed to either hear or see the oncoming trolley, due to houses on both sides of Brown avenue which obstruct the view of the state highway. Joseph Zalnosh who was operating the trolley, stated that he gave the usual warning signal but failed to see the Ford car until just a few feet away. Zalnosh is acting as relief for the regular motorman, John Young, who is on his vacation. Zall claimed that his machine was dragged several feet when it was thrown to one side and then pushed a distance of three poles before coming to a stop.

The trolley car was put out of commission by the impact and had to be hauled back to the barn for repairs. It was necessary to dispense with the regular scheduled trips on the line for the greater part of the day.

To swallow a large locket and then fall out of a second story window have been the recent experiences of Jeanette, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Rivard of No. 36 Jackson place.

Both experiences were considered narrow escapes from death. Some two weeks ago the child swallowed a locket. She showed no ill effects after taking in the strange substance but it was deemed best to consult a physician. An X-ray picture was taken and it showed that the locket had passed beyond the stomach into the intestines and about eight days after the swallowing the child passed the locket.

One day last week the child was playing in the kitchen of her home and she clambered upon the window [illegible] in some manner the window screen fell out and the little girl lost her balance and fell from the second story window to the ground eighteen feet below. She was picked up in an unconscious state but a physician assured her parents that aside from a shaking up she appeared to suffer little effect from the fall.

WESTERLY

Westerly's champion Globe trotter, Dr. Albert H. Spicer, aged 80 years, 81 Elm street and the dean of Westerly's dental corps sailed from New York early in the morning of June 23rd on the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company 17,500 ton steamship "Arguaya" for Iceland, the North Cape, Norway, Sweden and Denmark. It is not known generally whether the warm days of the past week caused the doctor to decide on Iceland in preference to some equitorial jaunt but it can be said that most of his trips have been planned with much forethought.

Qualifying as a "Globe Trotter," Westerly's well known "D. D. S." began his roaming habits in 1901 with a trip to the West Indies and Panama. The latter part of the nineteenth century the doctor explored the land areas of the globe with frequent excursions in the western hemisphere so that when the land areas were exhausted he began on the seven seas by repeating his West Indies trip in 1903. In 1908 he made a pilgrimage to Egypt, Jerusalem and Palestine, through the Aegean to the Isles of Greece passing through the Dardanelles to Constantinople and the Black Sea. 1910 found Dr. Spicer (presumably the first one hundred years the hardest) circumnavigating the globe, visiting the Passion Play at Oberammergau, Italy, Havana, Jamaica and Costa Rica. In 1913 he sailed for South America returning along the Pacific coast to Seattle and by the shortest transcontinental route home. Early in 1913 the Arctic pellagroes of the Western Hemisphere were conquered, trip to the West Indies and the Hawaiin Islands where the doctor celebrated his 80th birthday at sea on board the S. S. Arca. Dr. Spicer is the youngest of thirty-eight grandchildren and the grandfather of nine. Advanced in years he has a record of passing a certain point of latitude and longitude at sea twenty-five times in his maritime wanderings. On his present year's trip, Dr. Spicer on July 25th arrives in Paris from Copenhagen. The interval to August 2nd is passed mostly in Holland and he sails from Cherbourg on August 3rd by the R. M. S. Padret Company steamer, Orbita for New York.

Dr. Spicer holds membership in Scottish Rite and York Rite Masonry. In the latter branch he has been treasurer for many years of Franklin Lodge of Westerly and is a past master, past high priest and past commander. Leaving the Plimpton House, Watch Hill, R. From Burdickville the outfit proceeded to Green Hill, where they are now participating in target practice, remaining until the allotment of service shell and shrapnel becomes exhausted. WILLARD PASSES PHYSICAL TEST FOR HIS COMING BOUT WITH FIRPO Jersey City, N. J., June 25—By the A. P.)—The New Jersey boxing commission today put its official stamp of approval upon the heavyweight match on July 12 between Jess Willard, former champion and Luis Angel Firpo, giant from the Argentine, after Willard had passed a special physical examination to determine his fitness as an opponent for the South American.

Three physicians engaged by the boxing commission subjected the big Kansan to a searching examination that lasted 65 minutes, after which they signed a brief statement declaring him to be "free from any physical defects."

Willard was characterized as a "remarkable physical specimen" in every respect by Dr. T. H. Lemmers, at whose office the examination was conducted in the presence of several dozen newspapermen and photographers.

The former champion looked to be in excellent condition. He clipped the scales at 246 pounds, two pounds less than when he knocked out Floyd Johnson, the young Iowan, at the Yankee stadium six weeks ago. He declared he felt in much better trim than when he made his remarkable come-back at the milk fund show, his first ring appearance in the four years since he lost the world's title to Jack Dempsey.

"I expect a tough fight from Firpo", declared Willard, when asked about his coming match, "but I'm certain I can whip him. You know I've never seen him in the ring, but they tell me he's a rough and ready scrapper. If that's so, I'll be ready for him."

Willard has been training daily for the past week at his quarters in Yonkers, N. Y., where he conditioned himself for the Johnson fight. One of his sparring partners is Tiny Jim Herman, of Omaha, Neb.

Firpo will establish training camp tomorrow at Long Branch, N. J., and will work out under the direction of his veteran trainer, Jimmy DeForrest. He is down to fighting weight now, tipping the beam around 238. His staff of sparring partners includes Jack McAuliffe, whom he knocked out at the milk fund show, and Bill Tate, rugged negro boxer.

Both Willard and Firpo came to an agreement some time ago with Tex Rickard, promoter of the bout between them at Boyle's Thirty Acres, under which the winner will sign for a title match with Dempsey, providing the latter successfully retains his crown against Tom Gibbons, July 4. This agreement may be formally drawn up some time this week.

CHILL RAIN MARS TENNIS AT WIMBLEDON

Wimbledon, England, June 25—(By the A. P.)—The long heralded opening of the world's tennis championships on the turf courts of Wimbledon today was pretty much of a washout. From the scheduled starting time at two o'clock this afternoon until somewhat after five o'clock there was a constant and chilly mist or drizzle, so that when finally the pale green tarpaulin was peeled off the darker green cement within the great stadium there was only enough of daylight left to get through one of the four feature matches which had been placed on the card for the opening day.

None of the candidates from the United States got their shoestrings damp. In fact, they never even changed from the street attire into tennis garb. Most of them sat shivering among the overcoated multitude in the stands.

Two of the South Americans, however, both members of the Argentine Davis cup team, got started, also they got stopped one of them, A. J. Villegas, was beaten by Commander J. M. Hillyard, secretary of the Wimbledon Club 6-3, 6-3, 7-5. The other Argentine, W. Robison, fell down before S. M. Jacob, captain of the British India Davis cup team, 6-0, 6-1, 6-2.

L. A. Godfree, England's won from Nicholas Mishu the Rumanian star, on the closely cropped center court by a score of 1-6, 6-4, 6-6, 6-3, 9-7. Mishu amused the crowds with some of his freak shots and his customary antics, but, aside from his efforts and Godfree's good play in winning, it was a sad and soggy afternoon for the thousands of tennis fans. Many of which had been lured to the courts despite the bad weather in the hope of seeing Vincent Richards, William M. Johnston and Francis T. Hunter perform.

Most of the spectators remained to the end, nursing their hopes. A majority of them spent their time in the queues in the tea tents and other places where thirsts might be quenched. Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the American champion, spent the entire afternoon knitting on a sweater in the stand while Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, the world champion, flitted hither and yon and back in the stand chatting in two or three languages with new friends and old.

Tomorrow's weather permitting the trio of stars from the United States who have come to England will play on the center court. The real battle of the day is expected to be that between Richards and Jean Washer, champion of Belgium.

Johnson will have as an opponent E. Higgs, England, and Hunter will play E. Folquer, the Spanish Davis cup star.

Richards and Mrs. Mallory, who were paired for the mixed doubles, have scratched out of that event. They decided that each will have enough to do to play in the singles and the men's and women's doubles.

C., which will conduct the championship meet.

Official entry blanks for the title games were mailed today by the A. A. U. to leading athletic clubs throughout the country and to the 21 district associations of the A. A. U. entries close August 20.

The first day of the meet will be devoted to the 18 junior events, the second day to a similar number of senior championships and the third day to the decathlon and five relay championships. KEENAN HAS EAST END TEAM AT HIS MERCY AS CORNETS WIN EASY GAME

The Cornets won an easy game from the East Ends, 8 to 1, Monday evening at the Fairgrounds which puts them in third place in the league with 6 games won and 2 lost. Johnny Keenan had the East Siders at his mercy striking out 14 of the batters in eight innings and allowing only three hits. The Cornets touched Harris, the East End pitching star, for 14 hits and aided by errors they made six runs in the fifth inning and decisively trounced Cramer's Pets.

The Cornets played an exceptionally good game not making an error in accepting many hard chances. The Cornets although they did not hit hard bunched their hits at opportune times. The pitching of Keenan was the outstanding feature of the Cornet team.

The lone tally of the East Ends came in the fourth inning when Baker, the East Ends catcher, connected for three bases and scored on Hollander's single. The score by innings:

Cornets	1 0 1 0 6 0 0 0—8	14	0

WITHIN OUR RIGHTS.

In connection with the enforcement of the Volstead act within the three-mile limit there have been those who have raised a great hue and cry over the decision of the government and the orders of the treasury department to enforce the law as it stands according to the interpretation of the United States supreme court. They have been quick to claim that it would involve us in all kinds of foreign difficulties.

It is true that there have been protests on the part of other nations over the announced policy of this government. This has been for the purpose of having the law enforcement winked at that foreign ships might not only bring liquor into our territorial limits but to bring a sufficient amount so that it would have enough to supply the demands on the return trip. No blame can be attached to the other countries for looking after the interests of their steamship lines, especially when prohibition does not exist in other countries.

But in spite of all the fears that have been expressed and the dire calamities that have been predicted it doesn't appear that the United States is, by the seizure of the liquor brought on foreign vessels, doing anything different than the other nations would if the situation was reversed.

We have in the first place established the fact that we are right and have gone ahead. In such action as we have taken, even in breaking the seals on the liquor storerooms of the British vessels, it is admitted by the British that we are within our rights.

We have been told that it could be imagined what we would do if the shoe was on the other foot, how we would rant and fight against anything of the kind. Perhaps so, but it is to be noted that the British admit that they have been breaking seals on American goods quite as freely as this country has when occasion prompted it, and it doesn't appear that we got hot in the collar about it.

It is quite significant when Lloyd George, who will be accepted as decidedly pro-British, declares that we are well within our rights.

THE MANY DROWNINGS.

Not all the cases of drowning are due to the fact that the individuals are unable to swim, but were it a fact that all those who are drowned every season knew how to take care of themselves in the water there is good reason for believing that the number of such deaths would be greatly reduced.

There are surprisingly large number who take chances in the water which invite sad endings. Many of those who go to the beaches, to the ponds or to the rivers for a cooling dip in the water cannot swim. For such there is one vital precaution that should be observed as long as they display an unwillingness to learn to swim. If they desire to go into the water and come out alive they should guard well against going beyond their depth. Many are they who display a bravado that is foolhardy. They tempt fate to such a degree that it is surprising that more are not drowned.

Again there are those who go out in canoes without knowing how to swim and then paddle themselves into perilous positions, undertake to change positions or rock the boat, and their inability to take care of themselves or to get assistance after being capsized means an untimely death.

There are also those who disregard warnings and persist in diving in shallow water. There are instances where the swimmers display as poor judgment as those who go to unwarranted depths as non-swimers.

It is natural that the water should lure the young as well as the older ones. There will be those who will respond in the future even as others have in the past but it isn't in the response that the danger lies so much as it is in respecting the necessary protective measures. Prevention is fairly easy and if given due consideration would aid materially in reducing the number of untimely deaths among those who cannot swim, while it would also throw greater safeguards about the swimmers.

THE COAL DIFFICULTIES.

There isn't anything that has aroused the people of this part of the country much more than the problem of getting coal. They have been concerned about it in the past and they realize that they are not yet out of the woods. For that reason they cannot fail to be interested in the suggestions that were made to the National Coal association at its convention in Atlantic City by President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard. It was not a case of imposing his views upon the association. He was brought by the organization as a speaker, but being unable to respond in person he wrote out his views concerning the production and distribution of coal and forwarded them to the convention.

It is common in these many years that the association members are interested and will continue to be until a proper adjustment has been made. Dr. Eliot laid stress upon the fact that there should be order in the coal fields to avoid any interruption of the supply, pointed out the value of arbitration of disputes, insisted upon the incorporation of the labor unions, gave encouragement to the partnership relation between operators and miners, advocated the removal of any limit on the amount of coal produced and deplored the influence of slackers in a society of freemen.

That there was much golden advice incorporated in that letter will have to be admitted, regardless of where one feels the fault lies concerning the coal situation. If it could be worked out and adhered to it would unquestionably aid greatly in insuring an adequate supply of coal. Dr. Eliot has put his finger on some of the weak spots but probably he fully realizes the difficulties that would be faced in endeavoring to put the ideas into action.

NAVAL REQUIREMENTS.

Before the next congress there will come up the question of making appropriations for additions to the navy. The navy department is not unmindful of the fact that there are limitations on the vessels that can be constructed and that the country is thoroughly convinced of need of the keeping down expenditures for naval purposes unless they are necessary.

Likewise is it cognizant of the fact that the country is fully aware of the importance of its first line of defense, that it cannot totally ignore adequate provision for the safety of the nation and that it must be prepared to meet emergencies and to support such a navy as will stand for peace.

Thus when the navy department calls for the construction of eight cruisers, four river gunboats and three cruiser submarines it does not exceed any of the limitations established by the naval agreement for the tonnage will be within the required limits. The situation is such that other countries are much better equipped with vessels of these types than is the United States. We are not maintaining the ratio established under the naval agreement, and while there is no need of spending a lot of money needlessly there is likewise wisdom in guarding against a serious weakness in our naval equipment.

Perhaps some day there will be restrictions of a similar nature on all naval vessels, quite the same as there is on battleships, but until that time comes we must not overlook our own welfare. Warships of any type cost a sufficient sum but an expenditure of that kind is preferable to a much greater loss because of failure to get the benefits obtainable therefrom.

AIRPLANES AND RADIO IN WAR.

Treaties have done much and treaties can do more to insure better relationship between nations and the peace of the world. The Washington conference set in motion a much needed and new effort in this direction. It was a move for the elimination of war, and while it has served well thus far and even more is expected from it in the future there are other conditions which still need attention in order that it may accomplish all that is expected.

When the representatives of the nations were assembled in Washington it was not possible to get an agreement concerning aircraft. Provision, however, was made for a commission to take up the revision of rules of warfare that there might be included therein certain new agencies employed in waging war. As the result of a meeting of such a commission an understanding has been reached as to what limitations should be placed upon aircraft and radio at time of war and it is this agreement in treaty form that will be submitted to the respective nations for ratification.

At the next session of congress it will be submitted to the senate for action with a realization that it is the first step in the way of a treaty that may require amendment as developments take place. That such agencies can and did play an important part in the late war is fully understood, and it is clearly evident that some basis for guidance in case of war is needed and the time to reach it is before trouble develops and with a view to preventing anything of the kind.

FROM LUCILLE'S DIARY

I wonder why it is when mother, Cousin Fannie and granny are all such deft needlewomen, father so frequently asks me to do his mending. I have never taken to the needle much, and I feel that it is really foolish for me to roughen my fingers when there are others in the family who can sew more cleverly than I.

"Lucile," he said to me a few days ago, "aren't you ever going to sew the strap on my bathrobe? I've asked you over and over again. I guess it's nothing in your young life whether my bathrobe hangs up or reposes on the closet door."

"Oh, daddy dearest," I replied, "I thought it had been sewed on long ago."

"Well, you thought wrong," he remarked.

I took no notice of his grumpiness, because I have been teasing him for a month to give me a birthday dinner at his club, and I naturally did not wish to say anything to irritate him, as he had at last consented to have my longed-for party.

After much discussion I induced him to give me $20 for flowers and favors. This was a ridiculously small sum, but, unfortunately for me, mother has never trained father to spend money generously for what he calls folderols.

Happily, it occurred to me that perhaps Geneva Chamberlain would make me a birthday present of water-color place cards.

"Why, yes," she replied, when I broached the subject to her, "I think I could do it, although I have a good many orders just now. How many cards do you require, Lucile?"

"Only eighteen, dear."

"Eighteen!"

"Yes, you needn't letter the names on them. I can write them nicely, but I shall simply adore having your darling little water-color drawings. You are a perfect dear," I said appreciatively, but she did not seem to hear the morning of the party when I telephoned her to know if the cards were ready.

"Oh, is the dinner today? I hadn't received any—any word."

"How awkward of me, Geneva, darling," I said, "not to have given you the date. I should have told you, too, that I am having just the family and a few very intimate friends. I simply longed to invite you, but you see how it is, I couldn't very well ask you and not——"

"Pray don't explain further, Lucile. It was stupid to think you would include me. I'll send the cards by a messenger as soon as they're finished, which will be in plenty of time."

She broke the connection before I could say more. I do hope she won't discover that Charles Jerome was one of my guests, for since she reluctantly introduced him to me she has appeared absurdly jealous every time I saw anything of him. I may Geneva feels that she gave me a very handsome present, but I believe that it was a splendid advertisement for her. I told them that the cards were made especially for me by a brilliant young artist whose name I would gladly give if anyone desired to order any such work.

The dinner was going beautifully at the club in a private room when to my delight and excitement a page brought a huge box addressed to me. It looked as if it contained at least three dozen long-stemmed American beauty roses.

"Good gracious, what's that?" I cried as I undid the inner wrapper of white tissue paper. "Why, it's—it's—"

"Yes, my child, it's my bathrobe," said father, genially. "If you'll press further you'll discover a polite note urging you graciously to celebrate your birthday by sewing on the strap so that we can take it home and hang it, I say, in its place in the closet."

Everybody but me roared with laughter, so I could only make the best of what I considered a remarkably poor joke. Father was extremely well pleased with himself and was quite the life of the party, but I think it was not only unkind of him to thrust that bathrobe into my beautiful party but absolutely bourgeois.

It was particularly mortifying to have Charlie Jerome witness the ultimed jest. He is so charming and so cultivated that I had wished especially to give him a good impression of my family.—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Emile Roux, who declares that western Europe and, consequently, is no longer threatened by epidemics and plagues, is famous for his researches and labors in pathological and other fields. He was closely associated with the great Pasteur in his investigations of hydrophobia and is the present director of the Pasteur Institute in Paris. Of late years Dr. Roux has devoted himself almost exclusively to the study of infectious diseases, with most important results. Loeffler, the celebrated professor of Griesswald, discovered the microbe of diphtheria. Roux supplemented this discovery by finding the poison produced by the microbe. Herr Behring, of Berlin, experimenting with the poison discovered by Dr. Roux hit upon an anti-toxine. Dr. Roux is now in his seventieth year. Many honors have come to him from the leading medical and scientific societies of the world.

NEW BOOKS

NEW BOOKS.

The Soul of Abe Lincoln. By Bernie Babcock, author of The Soul of Ann Rutledge. Cloth, 12 mo. 328 pages. Published by J. B. Lippincott company, Philadelphia. Price $2.

Mrs. Babcock in her new book has produced another fascinating story and woven it around the life of Abraham Lincoln. It is written from a new angle and undoubtedly brings to light many new facts about the great American leader. It is impossible not to be captivated by Ann Leuin Laury, a southern daughter whose adventures run through the desperate years of the Civil war. Mrs. Babcock has done for her all that she did for Ann Rutledge. The story opens at the home of Judge Laury during a house-party there. This was following the engagement of Ann to the most promising of her suitors, who though a southerner later enlisted on the side of the north in the war. Finding her love stronger than all else Ann refused to break her engagement, and as the war progressed tragedy comes to the Laury household in the death of Ann's brother.

Her suitor has plenty of experience and even gets in close touch with Lincoln in the secret service, but his path does not cross that of Ann. She takes up nursing in an endeavor to find him and eventually gets to Washington where she, too, is brought face to face with the president and realizes how the south has misjudged the great man. Then follows the assassination and when it seems that her hope of meeting her lover is blasted they are reunited and the book is brought to a most fitting climax.

"So This Is Golf!" By Harry Leon Wilson. Board, 46 pages, published by Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York. Illustrated by M. L. Blumenthal. Price 75 cents.

This is a little volume that is sure to make its appeal to many others than the golfers. There is of course a chuckle for every veteran golfer, every duffer who ever swore he would quit the game, but didn't, every long suffering wife who has watched the destruction of her cherished art objects while husband practiced and those who watch though they do not play the game. It is virtually admitted that the spread of the golf bug has destroyed much land that might otherwise have been profitably employed for agricultural purposes. You've got to read it to grasp its contents.

Mingle streams. By Jane Abbett. Cloth, 12 mo. 320 pages. Published by J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. Price $1.75.

Mingle streams is a delightful love story laid about Apple Tree inn, a jolly retreat high up in the mountains. It is managed by two college girls and all sorts of people find their way to the inn including an injured young man who is suffering from loss of memory, "Hickey" and "Jill" each fear that the other will fall in love with John. There is a mystery about John that piques the curiosity. Phil Mowbray, one of Jill's admirers, happens on the scene and investigates. The outcome is totally unexpected. John, accused of being a bounder, is proven otherwise when his memory is restored. Happiness overruns the pages of this bright and sparkling tale.

Mrs. Abbott is perhaps best known as a writer of stories for girls but in this new book she has more fully established herself in the place already gained through "Happy Homes," as a writer of virile and entertaining fiction for adults.

Under a Thousand Eyes. By Florence Bingham Livingston. Illustrated by Maurice L. Bower. Cloth, 12 mo. 456 pages. Published by Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York. Price $2.

Under a Thousand Eyes is a story of a girl who went back home. The scene is laid in the town where a New York girl formerly lived and the story is a Main street tale of how the town took Heather Davenway and her New York ways from her and made her its own.

Main street has been vilified. Its faults, frequently exaggerated, have been exposed to ridicule. But there is another side to Main street, a normal, human, lovable side. Main street is still the backbone of the country. It has its drama, its romance. It has its tragic figures, its whimsical souls, its whole hearted, generous characters.

That is what is shown in an unforgetable manner in this new book by Florence Bingham Livingston, author of The Custard Cup. It is the other side of Main street that is seen by Heather Davenway after having spent eight years of her life in the great city of New York. It is a most fascinating story.

The Gist of Coue. By Genevieve V. Aran, Elisabeth and William E. Towne. Published by The Elisabeth Towne Co., Holyoke, Mass. Price 25 cents.

This is a pamphlet of 20 pages made up in three sections, one by each of the authors. The first deals with the auto suggestion as practiced by M. Coue at whose clinic at Nancy Miss Aram was a regular attendant for a year. She gives the gist of the marvelous method of self healing taught by the famous Frenchman. The other sections deal with the fundamentals of healing showing the relation between Coue's method and New Thought, and Will and Imagination respectively treated by the other authors.

Wives of Famous Men

EMILY SELLWOOD, WIFE OF ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

The love stories of most poets have been fraught with passion and romance, the stories of their married life have, as a rule, been tempestuous and unhappy. In the case of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, late poet laureate of England, the reverse was true. His courtship of Emily Sellwood was quiet and uneventful, their married life placid and happy as the era in which they lived.

Emily Sellwood and Alfred Tennyson had known and loved each other for many years before they were joined in matrimony. But the poet, like most of his confreres, past and present was rather badly off for funds. Poetry, then more so even than at the present time, was not the best way to material wealth. Any Tennyson, deeply if not violently in love with Emily, was not sufficiently romantic to attempt the love in a cottage arrangement tried so disastrously by many poets.

For a time the parents of Miss Sellwood succeeded in breaking off her relations with the poet, because of the poor state of his finances. However, she remained loyal to him in her secret heart, and waited patiently until his income was sufficient to take care of her.

Finally, in 1850, when Tennyson was 41 years of age what is known as his "Golden Year," set in. It occurred the publication of his poem, "In Memoriam," his appointment to the position of Poet Laureate, and in consequence, his marriage.

Thus was the patience of Emily rewarded. She had refused many offers of marriage during the years she was waiting for her Alfred, but in her case virtue was indeed its own reward. Her married life, although somewhat belated, was exceedingly happy and she was one of the most envied women in England.

Stories That Recall Others

Practice Makes Perfect.

A motor car driven by a very determined young woman had just knocked down a man, fortunately without injuring. She did not try to get away but stopped the car and faced him.

"I am sorry it happened," she said grudgingly. "You should take more care when you are walking. I am an experienced driver. I have been driving a car for seven years."

"Well," replied the victim, "You've got a lot to learn. I'm no novice myself, I've been walking for 57 years."

He "Shooed."

A little girl four years old attracted the attention of others in a street car, when she said, "Shoe, shoe, shoe."

Everyone looked in the direction of her foot and a man who was standing was almost covering her foot. He promptly removed his foot.

INCREASED IMPORTATION OF MANUFACTURING MATERIALS

The growing dependence of the manufacturers of the United States upon the foreign world for their raw material is evidenced by the latest figures of our foreign trade. The importation of "crude material for us in manufacturing" will approximate, according to the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York, a billion and a half dollars in the fiscal year which ends with the current month, against $909,000,000 in the fiscal year 1922, and $1,051,000,000 in the fiscal year 1921.

Raw material for manufacturing formed in the 9 months ending with March no less than 30% of the total merchandise entering the country as against 25% in the fiscal year 1922 and 29% in the fiscal year 1921. These figures relate exclusively to crude materials and do not include the group "manufactures for further use in manufacturing," which formed 16% of the imports of the 9 months ending with March as against 15¾% in 1922 and slightly less than 15% in 1921. Combining these two groups of crude material and manufactures for further use in manufacturing, it appears that material used in the manufacturing industries of the United States formed no less than 55% of the total merchandise entering the country in the 9 months ending with March 1923, against 50% in 1922. The total value of manufacturing material, crude or partly manufactured, drawn from abroad in the fiscal year which ends with the current month will exceed $2,000,000,000, the exact figures for the 9 months, for which details are now available being, crude material for use in manufacturing $1,070,631,000, and manufactures for further use in manufacturing $511,278,000.

The principal articles forming this enormous total of manufacturing material entering the country are raw silk, wool, cotton, fibres, india rubber, gums, hides and skins, furs, mineral oil, nickel ore, and copper, while the partly manufactured articles for further use in manufacturing include lumber, vegetable oils, nitrate of soda, wool and cotton yarn, pig tin, and diamonds cut but not set. There is also a limited quantity of iron ore of a class especially suited for mixing with the domestic ore. Tin ore of late has also formed a factor of considerable importance, coming in this form from our neighbor at the south, Bolivia which exports most of its tin in the form of ore, while other tin producing sections of the world smelt their ore and export it in the form of pigs and bars.

SEVERAL LIQUOR RAIDS MADE IN STONINGTON

Stonington, June 26.—There were three arrests made in Stonington borough Saturday night and the men were taken into custody by the officers for the illegal sale of liquor in various forms. The men in charge of the raiding were Constables Thomas O'Connell of Stonington, Harry Bricker of Pawcatuck and John Jeffrey of Mystic.

The first place visited was 10 Hancox street. The officers searched and found one bottle full and two bottles partially full with home brew and a sixty-two gallon cask full of a mash which was to be distilled into "white mule." The proprietor of the place, Joe Martin, was taken into custody and locked up in jail.

The second place visited was at the residence of John Szymanski, 24 Young street. The officers made a haul of 21 bottles of home brew beer, all on ice, and apparently awaiting the arrival of customers. This was taken away by the constables and Szymanski was placed under arrest and locked up.

The third call was at the home of William Schaeser, 19 North West street, and here the officers found several men, evidently customers. William Schaeser, Jr., was in charge and he was taken into custody and locked up. Here the officers found a half barrel of beer and in addition 18 bottles of the same, the latter being cold and ready to serve. The men were anxious to get out of the lock-up and Judge William Wilcox of the Stonington Town court was called. He came to Stonington and took bond in each case. The amount of the bonds was $500 in each case and the accused were cited to appear before a session of the town court in Stonington on this (Monday) morning. These cases with four more to come from Pawcatuck will mean the holding of a lengthy session.

ST. MARY'S MEMORIAL CHURCH

DAMAGE TO ST. MARY'S CHURCH TOWER ESTIMATED FROM $3,500 TO $5,000

Rev. William A. Keefe, rector of St. Mary's Memorial church, said Monday evening that an examination made during the day shows that between $3,500 and $5,000 damage was caused by the bolt of lightning that shattered one of the pinnacles on the 100 foot tower of the new memorial church during the thunder storm Sunday evening. Father Keefe had workmen make a thorough examination of the roof of the church and they discovered considerable damage that is not visible from the street.

Father Keefe said that a number of sections of the granite wall were displaced and that the gravel roofing on top of the tower is badly damaged. The brim stone was made in Roxbury by skilled workmen and it will be necessary to make a new model for the damaged stone. The cost of this work will be considerable as will the cost of raising stagings, etc.

The damage to the interior of the church is slight compared with the damage to the roof. However there will be considerable expense in erecting stagings and it is not certain whether any of the roof beams were shattered by the bolt. Father Keefe said that there is some insurance to be paid on the damage but he was unable to say just what the amount will be.

The pinnacle that was struck by lightning is the rearmost one shown in the accompanying picture.

SPRAGUE VOTES $6,000 TO BUILD NEW ROAD

(Special to the Bulletin)

Baltic, June 26.—At a special town meeting here tonight the Town of Sprague voted to appropriate $6,000 to build a new road from the Red House crossing on the state road from Baltic to Franklin to the Bonsha farm at the foot of Pautipaug hill. This vote was taken after a spirited discussion of the need of a new road in the Pautipaug Hill section of the town. The project was strongly supported by Representative Joseph W. Wellington who told of the need of such a road and of the saving in expense to the town over the old road. Senator William G. Park spoke in opposition to the new road.

At the outset of the meeting Senator Park moved to indefinitely postpone but the motion was lost by a small margin. Representative Wellington was the first speaker in favor of the new road and he told of the condition of the present narrow and sandy road and the expense to the town in keeping the present road in repair. Mr. Wellington said that the taxpayers in the Pautipaug section would furnish all the stone for the highway and were willing to pay an additional 5 mill tax should the town so vote.

Senator Park asked for a statement of the town's indebtedness to which Town Clerk Cote replied that it was no more than any town the size of Sprague. The meeting voted the appropriation and instructed the Board of selectmen to confer with the Longel Bros. road builders on the matter. The Longel Bros. gave the meeting an estimate of $7,000 for the job. The new road will have a five inch bottom of native stone with a top dressing. The travel path will be 12 feet wide with a two foot shoulder on each side.

MISSION IS OPENED AT FITCHVILLE CHURCH

Rev. Fr. Ledwith of the order of LaSalette Fathers of Hartford opened a week's mission in St. John's church, Fitchville, Monday morning with mass at 5.15 o'clock at which there was a large attendance. In the evening at 7.30 after instruction on the first and second commandments by Fr. Ledwith, Fr. Mooney, pastor of St. Andrew's church, Colchester, of which St. John's church is a mission, recited the rosary. After the rosary a very eloquent sermon on the text "What Doeth It Profit a Man of He Gains the Whole World and Suffers the Loss of His Soul?" was delivered by Father Ledwith. The services closed with the benediction of the blessed sacrament.

The large attendance in the evening was very gratifying to both Father Mooney and Father Ledwith who extend invitations to friends of the church to be present at the service in the morning and evening for the remainder of the week.

STARTS CAMPAIGN FOR SAFE FOURTH OF JULY

Chief Howard L. Stanton of the fire department has inaugurated a formal campaign for a safe and sane Fourth of July, pointing out that while the holiday is less dangerous than formerly, it still constitutes a menace to life and property.

"The principal life hazard due to the use of firecrackers, sparklers and other fireworks," said the chief, "affects the children and consequently their indulgence in such means of celebrating the day should be rigidly restricted or entirely prohibited. I have no desire to curtail the pleasures of the youngsters, but the situation calls for decided action. The safest way to stage a display pyrotechnics is to make the occasion a community affair and have the exhibition under the supervision of firemen equipped with extinguishing apparatus.

"The danger of firearms is obvious, but the so-called 'sparkler,' which has become notably popular in recent years, presents a serious hazard that is too seldom recognized. The plaything emits sparks that in themselves are not harmful, but the wire core supporting the sparkling element becomes white hot and in that condition will ignote inflammable materials. For this reason sparklers have caused many deaths, the victims usually being young girls wearing flimsy summer dresses. Therefore, prohibit the sparkler if you would protect your children's lives.

"Toy balloons using kerosene-soaked waste constitute another danger, since they may fall upon wooden shingle roofs and other inflammable surfaces and thus cause fire. They may in addition ignite forest and brush areas.

"The thing for the public to remember is that the Fourth of July is a patriotic occasion and that the best way for the people to prove their loyalty is to protect the resources of their country and the lives of their fellow citizens. A 'safe and sane Fourth,'" contluded the chief, "means one that is fireless."

Thought for the Day.

Some people get pleasure even out of disaster, if only they can say, "I told you so!"

Life is merely a game of chance—and fate seems to have stacked the cards against most of us.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT FINDS PRIZE PUBLIC NUISANCE

The state department of health is always willing to assist local health officers in any action that is necessary to eliminate a nuisance in any community. It is difficult to realize that a resident in any community would foster a condition such as was found during this past week in one of the towns in this state.

The material destroyed by burning included the following:

Seventeen barrels of decaying and fly breeding calves feet.

Nine putrid carcasses (horses, cows, pigs.)

One barrel decayed clams.

Eighteen one-ton truck loads of maggot-infested boxes, barrels and baskets in which meat market scrap had been collected.

Fifteen one-ton loads of miscellaneous putrifying bones and flesh, which had been scattered over the ground.

Twelve barrels of rancid grease.

Five barrels of decaying and maggot infested calves heads.

Two barrels decayed horses' hoofs.

Other deplorable features found at the premises and remedied were:

Ending of intestines by pigs discontinued.

Elimination of a tremendous breeding ground for flies and rats.

Minimizing of heretofore overpresent and far-carrying indescribably disgusting odors.

Raking and placing in sanitary condition of one acre of ground.

General clean-up buildings on the ground.

Placing owner under probation to maintain his property in a sanitary and inoffensive condition.

The above is a summary of work done last week in one place by the department with the co-operation of the local health officer to rid a Connecticut town of its greatest public nuisance. This nuisance was of such long standing and of such magnitude as to become distinctly prejudicial to the public health because of the tremendous breeding of flies and rats, and to cause general public discomfort because of the ever-present nauseating odors. It required the entire time of two men, one one-ton motor truck, one one-horse wagon steadily for three days to eliminate this rendering plant nuisance.

Following the ceremony the bridal party went to the basement of the George Smalac, owner of the George Smalac Company, manufacturers, 106 Pleasant St., Pawtucket, R. I., is still another prominent Rhode Island business man who has realized the powers of the Tanlac treatment. He says:

"When I began using Tanlac I had been sick with stomach trouble and rheumatism for three years and was seriously contemplating selling out my business, for there was quite a question in my mind if I would ever be any better. The year before I got Tanlac I had an operation which left me so weakened and used up I couldn't walk upstairs without stopping half way to rest.

"Sometimes after starting on Tanlac I was feeling so good I picked up two hods of coal and I found I could handle them with ease. I kept growing stronger every day. My appetite is perfect now and nothing I eat hurts me. I sleep fine, too, and feel well in every way. I am highly pleased with Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Chaucer was the first who made the love of nature a distinct element in our poetry. He was the first who, in spending the whole day musing alone on the daisy, set going that lonely delight in natural scenery which is so special a mark of our later poets.—Stopford Brooke.

DANIELSON

What upon first reports appeared to have all the elements of a tragedy happened Monday afternoon, into a farce comedy but not before state police and a physician had rushed up into the Attawaugan crossing section of the town to investigate what appeared to be a serious affair. It was reported over the telephone that a woman was lying, more or less covered with blood, a short distance from the road that leads from the upper crossing along the route to Putnam via White's crossing and the Putnam Country club. She was found as represented, but, it developed, was not the victim of an attack. She said she was Mrs. Jacob King and that she had been injured when she struck her face on a nail in a fence while chasing a woodchuck. Mrs. King, a woman of advanced years, lives in an old house that stands on the westerly side of the highway, a short distance above the crossing. A state officer who investigated the case obtained some interesting information of circumstances leading up to the affair.

A cloth bag containing approximately $138, the amount including two gold pieces, slipped out of the trousers' pocket of Joad Aguilar of Goodyear Monday afternoon while he was enroute from Dayville to Danielson on a trolley car reaching here at 2.20. he says, and though he felt to see if his money bag was safely tucked away as he stepped off the car near the town hall building—and discovered its loss—he had not recovered it two hours later, though a telephone message was sent south to have the car looked over upon its arrival at Central Village.

Aguilar said he took the bak out of his pocket to get change to pay car fares and believes he did not shove it back as securely in his pocket as is his customary practice. Loss of the money was a severe blow to Aguilar, who said that it represented all his loss, which will impose hardships on available money. He went over the his wife and family.

Favored by excellent weather, Chautauqua opened here Monday afternoon with promise of a week of splendid entertainment and most happy returns for all who are interested in the movement. As has been the custom for several years past, Chautauqua is located on the south playgrounds of the School street school. Monday's program included concerts by the CaranWelsh singers and life portrayals by Noah Beilhars. The Bisteddfod of Wales is the popular university of the people, the center of Welsh nationalism, and it is from this background that the Cavan singers come to America for an engagement that is unique in Chautauqua annals. Part of their five programs here on Monday were made up of strictly Welsh music.

Mr. Beilhars's contributions to Monday's entertainments was happily received. He is easily one of the greatest portrayers of characters in the country and out of his long experience and is incomparable skill develops an entertainment that never fails to impress and delight.

Chief John MacFarland has arrived at the decision that it is time to convince many ardent young people that the uses of firecrackers, pistols and explosives must be limited to the period of the Fourth after sunrise of that morning and that the celebration—if may so be called—cannot be allowed to string over a period of two weeks before the holiday. He said Monday afternoon that drastic action is to be taken against violaters of the law and that violations have become so numerous in Danielson as to be little less than a nuisance in some streets, where explosives have been set off hour after hour throughout the day for the past week. Complaints have been coming in, so the Chief will set out to abate the nuisance. All of which may not mean much to the children who are indulging themselves but should mean a great deal to parents who may have to pay fines in court because the children persist in disturbing the peace.

Officials of the Danielson Red and Gun club have been sending out announcements of a Fourth of July shoot to be held from 3.30 o'clock on the morning of the holiday right through the day. There are to be two 50-target shoots. The field is to be divided into four classes and the prizes to be awarded on the Rose system. High gun for 100 targets is to get a special award of $5. This shoot, it is expected, will bring together a large number of the club's members.

Selectman George Alvord of Dayville is lending a hand to boost that East Killingly celebration of the Fourth, particularly the parade feature. Selectman Alvord is endeavoring to interest motorists in different sections of the town to go to East Killingly with decorated cars and not only help make the parade big and spectacular, but also try to win one of the prizes offered for best decorated machines.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Marion, Ind.—"I was all run-down, nervous and beat over. I could hardly drag around, let alone do my work. I read some letters in the papers telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for others and I thought I would try it. Then a man told my husband about his wife and what good it had done her and he insisted on Sim to have me try it. I took one bottle and could see what it did for me in a week's time, and when I had taken three bottles I had gained both in strength and weight and was doing my own work. I took it before my last baby was born and it helped me so much. I surely am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who suffers from female allments for I know by experience what it has done. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, also the Liver Pills (and think them fine." —Mrs. [illegible], 50 E. Grant Street, Marion, Ind.

For nearly fifty years scientific and experienced physicians have prescribed and recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

PUTNAM

Jacob C. Keach, more than half a century a resident in this city and vicinity, fell dead Monday forenoon while hoeing his garden near his home in Farrows street. His death came as a great surprise to the people of the city, where he was very well known. Mr. Keach appeared to be as well as usual Monday morning when he took up his duties for the day, but it is believed that the intense heat taken with the fact that he has not been in the best of health for years might have had much to do with his sudden taking off. He died almost instantly, having fallen with the hoe in his hands.

Mr. Keach was 69 years of age and was born at East Putnam. In his early days he was engaged at farming, but afterwards came to this city and started a store, which he conducted for a number of years. Later he disposed of the store and became interested in real estate and at the time of his death was owner of a number of pieces of property in this city, six of his houses being in Farrows street.

He had been married half a century, his wife, who survives him, being Miss Angie Law before their marriage. He also leaves a son, Leon, and a daughter, Mrs. Ora Russell. His brothers are George A. Keach of North Ashford and Henry Keach of Malden, Mass. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Sedra Place of Providence. Horace Keach of Valley Falls is a half-brother and Mrs. Nancy Sprague of Worcester a half-sister.

Mr. Keach with Mrs. Keach and their daughter and daughter's children figured in an automobile accident at Danielson about a month ago, their car turning turtle when it went off the state highway, across the trolley track and down an embankment. All by great good luck escaped serious injury at that time.

There were three weddings at St. Mary's church Monday morning—a double wedding drawing many relatives and friends of the contracting parties to the seven o'clock service.

At this nuptial service Miss Pauline Grady became the bride of John H. Wood and her cousin, Miss Marion Renshaw, the bride of Zenon J. Robillard. These marriages were performed by Rev. James Grady, brother of Miss Grady, of St. Anthony's church, Hartford, he also being celebrant of the mass. The couples were unattended.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Wood will make their home in Norwich, where Mr. Wood is manager of a chain grocery store. Mrs. Wood has been employed at the Byrne company store here and her host of friends wish her and her husband every success and happiness in life.

Mr. and Mrs. Robillard will make their home in Putnam, where until very recently Mrs. Robillard has been engaged as a teacher at the Smith street school. They have received the congratulations of a host of their friends.

At 9 o'clock Miss Rosanna Demarais of this city and Eugene Delude of Woonsocket were united in marriage by Rev. W. Arthur Routhier, who also was celebranf of the nuptial mass. The bride's gown was of gray canton crepe. Relatives from Woonsocket, Pawtucket, Worcester and other cities came here for the wedding and reception that followed. After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Dulude will make their home in Woonsocket.

Monday found a considerable docket of business awaiting the attention of city court officials. Among those who appeared to answer to charges was Ernest Aubin of Attawaugan. He was charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and Judge Geissler assessed a fine of $110 and costs, a total of $134.04, which was paid for him. Aubin got into dimculty when his machine crashed into a fence near Burrill's corner, east of here. Others who were in for intoxication were Joseph Glenner of Attawaugan, fined $20 and costs, a total of $32.14, William Carson of Danielson who received a like fine and Arthur Cordier a jail sentence, which was suspended for one year, with the understanding that it will be enforced if he again appears in court.

Mill strikers who are still holding out held a meeting Monday morning at their hall here and went over the situation as it is toward the end of the seventh week of the difficulty. There was no material change in the situation, at least outwardly, Monday from conditions as they have been during the past week. Steady flow of money to keep the strike financed is being received here and the strikers are not suffering any hardships. A lunch room is being maintained for them at South Main street and a working force serves good and wholesome food.

Many a small boy and not a few who are no longer boys excepting they have never lost the thrill that goes with watching the unloading of a circus were on hand early this morning to witness the arrival of the Sparks show in Putnam. This circus made a name for itself in Putnam last year, so is awaited with more than ordinary interest.

A reminder that the glorious 4th is near at hand is the fact that a site has been temporarily taken over in the heart of the business section for the erection of a structure where fireworks will be offered for sale.

An automobile owned by Isadore Diamond and a car owned and operated by Everett G. Daniels collided this morning at the corner of Jefferson avenue and West Colt street. Both cars were damaged. It was ascertained this afternoon that the automobile that was wrecked at Quaker Hill Sunday evening when it crashed against a tree, hurling its four passengers to the ground and injuring Miss Blanche Besanit of Taftville, was owned and operated by John Maria of No. 367 Bank street. Maria could not account for the accident except that he lost control of the steering wheel. The condition of Miss Besanit who was removed to Lawrence-Memorial associated hospital suffering from a fractured knee cap and lacerations of the face and head, was reported this afternoon as being as comfortable as could be expected under the circumstances. At the state police barracks at Groton it was stated that the accident is being investigated, but because of the face that all of the passengers of the car were missing when an officer arrived on the scene, that the facts leading up to the cause of the accident have not been determined.

The number of bricklayers to quit work numbered four and a like number remained on the job. Contractor St. Germain's contract calls for the completion of the structure by Jan. 1st, 1924 and he anticipates being able to fulfill his contract and is seeking additional help to take the places of the strikers. The present wage schedule of the brick layers calls for a daily wage of $9, this wage being granted the men about three months ago, but the strikers believe that they are entitled to another increase at this time.

The strike of approximately 160 stevedores at the Central Vermont railroad pier because of the refusal of the railroad to grant the strikers an increase in wages of six cents an hour, Saturday, is still in effect, but Superintendent Edward Guthrie is endeavoring to secure local men to take the jobs of the strikers. NORWICH TOWN

The sad news of the death of Joseph Howard Hill, which occurred some time on Sunday, was received here that evening about 10 o'clock.

Mr. Hill, who was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hill of Clinton avenue, Norwich Town, was graduated the early part of this month from Connecticut Agricultural College, at Storrs, after a successful four years' governmental course, being transfered last November from the school at Farmingdale, L. I., where he had been located for more than three years.

Information received, although not of a definite nature, was to the effect that he had left the college Sunday morning to take a walk, and as he did not return in due time, a searching party started out to make investigation, and he was found about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, having supposedly died suddenly from heart failure. Mr. Hill took up a general course of study, at first specializing in poultry, and later landscape gardening.

He was born in the town of Preston, Feb. 3, 1893, being one of a very large family of children. Besides his parents he is survived by the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. John McNally, Miss Peter Duffie, Nettie, Josephine, Blanche, Dorothy, Warren, Earl, Irving, and William Hill, all of Norwich.

Mr. Hill was a young man of promise and the news of his untimely death was a shock to his family and friends. He was a member of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, and for a few years sang in the vested choir of this church. He was a hero of the World war, having received an honorable discharge August 26th, 1919, after a naval career which extended over many miles in foreign waters. Before entering the service Mr. Hill played clarionet in Tubbs' band. He was a member of Robert A. Fletcher Post, American Legion; the World War Veterans, in Farmingdale; and a member of Uncas Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Norwich.

Sunday morning at the First Congregational church, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey preached an excellent sermon from the text John 3:7, Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again.

During the service, Rev. Mr. Bailey read a letter from a former resident of Norwich Town, and a member of this church, Miss Margaret Ewing, asking for dismissal, which was granted by a vote taken by the members of the parish.

Miss Ewing, the daughter of a former pastor, Rev. George H. Ewing, is to unite with the First Congregational church of Sanford, Me.

Miss Margaret Chapin was the leader at the Young People's Christian Endeavor service at 6.30. The topic assigned to this meeting was How Can We Win Friends and Keep Them? Proverbs 27: 5, 6, 9, 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Yerrington of Pecks corner have as their guests for several days the former's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Yerrington, of East Northfield, Mass., who arrived on Monday.

The president of the Norwich Rural association, Grosvenor Ely, who also is chairman of the permanent walk committee, has sent out notification to other members of the committee, that word has been received from Mr. Lester that the school board will build a walk in front of the Norwich Town school on the green, probably this summer.

While attending the festivities in Norwich on Saturday, of the Norwich Society in New York, one of its members and a former Norwich T. ar young man, Edwin Sumner Willard, was a caller on several of his friends and former neighbors here.

In preparation for the scout field meet, to be held July 4th, on Chelsea Parade, the meeting Friday evening, of Troop No. 30, Boy Scouts of Norwich Town, was held in Lowthorpe Meadows, with the scoutmaster, Frederic H. Wyatt, in charge.

COMMISSIONER DONOHUE MAKES $1,000 AWARD IN COMPENSATION CLAIM

After a hearing on the claim of Mrs. Olgar Thoresa Pierson of 51 Fifth street for workmen's compensation for the death of her husband, Oscar Valentine Pierson, an employe of the United States Finishing Co. Commissioner J. J. Donohue has rendered his finding in which he makes an award of $1,000 in final settlement of the claim.

According to the evidence presented at the hearing Mr. Pierson gave the company notice in Dec., 1922, of having suffered hernia through lifting heavy objects in the course of his work. He considered having an operation but a physicians examination disclosed that he was in poor physical condition and on account of that he was advised against the operation. It was found that he had chronic cystitis. He had the operation for hernia in May and died eight days later.

In view of the circumstances and the physician's report it was found that 75 per cent. of the unfavorable result of the operation was due to Mr. Pierson's condition and 25 per cent. to the operation. Under these circumstances the claimant and the respondent concurred in the award of $1,000 made by Commissioner Donohue.

INSTITUTE WILL GIVE PLAYGROUND WORK LESSONS

With Miss Ruth Sherburne, field secretary of the Playground and Recreation association of America, as instructor, the playgrounds institute was opened at 9:30 Monday morning at the Y. M. C. A. building under the auspices of the municipal recreation commission. It will continue this week, with morning sessions, for the training of playground leaders for the Norwich playgrounds. Fifteen persons were enrolled on the first day.

Miss Sherburne's first lecture was on the Theory of Play. "While for centuries philosophers have looked upon play as advantageous to bodily growth and valuable as a means of education," she said, "it is only within comparatively recent times that scientists have attempted to search for an explanation of the phenomenon itself. The result of deep studies that such men as Froebel, Schiller, Herbert Spencer, Carl Groos, and G. Stanley Hall have made is overwhelming evidence that if animals and children did not play they would never develop either physically or mentally; in fact, without play there is reason to doubt the preservation of the species.

"Carl Groos, the great German scientist, in an exhaustive study of the play of animals and the play of men arrived at the conclusion that play is the result of an inborn impulse to make use of the various instincts, the purpose of which is the education of the young. Play is practice by the young of the serious pursuits that they must follow in after life. Through play most of the habits and reflexes that govern after life are formed. A familiar illustration of this truth is the kitten that snatches at the ball as the mother cat pounces upon the mouse, or the puppy that seises and worries up to rear as the grown dog struggles with its prey. Groos goes so far as to say that animals do not play because they are young, but that they are given youth in order that they may play.

To substantiate this theory, he calls attention to the fact that whereas the lower forms of animal life come into the world fully equipped at birth to care for themselves independently of any care by parents, the higher, more intelligent animals all have periods of immaturity, during which they are protected by the parents and exhibit strong tendencies for seemingly purposeless activity that is in imitation of the serious activity of the adult of the species. It is interesting and significant that the higher the stage of development the species has reached, the longer this period of immaturity, man, the highest animal having the longest period of youth.

"During this time, the young instinctively exercise in playful ways the growing powers by use of which their ancestors have survived. G. Stanley Hall calls attention to the fact that in play children pass through all the stages of social life that the race has experienced, i. e, the animal stage, when as a tiny child his play consists of purely physical activity acquiring form through experimentation and mimicry; the savage stage, when the elements of the chase are evident in his play, chasing and fleeing, hiding, dodging, throwing missiles, etc.; the nomadic stage when the youngster begins to show strong interest in animals and in growing things; the tribal life when about school age comes an interest in playing with the group, an interest that continues to develop, cultivating the quality of loyalty and devotion to the group or gang, until we have the period when interest centers in highly organized, definitely ordered team games where each player has a particular part to perform, a stage that closely approximates the intricate conditions of modern civilization."

"If during the period of youth, upon the call one of the great achieving instincts the child has an opportunity for expression through play, a habit is formed that persists through life and the individual's education has progressed. If there is no opportunity through play to satisfy one of these instincts, the instinct itself soon dies, no habit is formed and the individual's education is in that respect incomplete."

Among those enrolled on the first day were May Kelly, Patricia Cassidy, Katherine Farrell, Augusta Shershevsky, Mrs. G. R. Hodge, Eileen Hinchey, Dora Jenkins, Gussie Learned, Lillian Stetson, Rosie Grant, Susie Matasan, Susie Whikleasy, Mary Lynch and Helen G. Royce.

Besides those who expect to be engaged in playground work, the institute may be attended by any persons interested in the subject.

STATE'S MOTOR FATALITIES AVERAGE ONE A DAY

Newspaper headlines, such as may be seen in one day, are an index to the accident situation in Connecticut.

One death, ten injured pedestrians and fifty damaged automobiles constitute the average day's motor vehicle toll in Connecticut, according to the department of motor vehicles. Seventy fatal accidents have occurred so far this year in Connecticut with a total of seventy-seven victims. The death list for May alone numbered twenty-three. The first week of June saw an average of one death a day.

The Connecticut Department of Motor Vehicles is conducting a permanent summer safety campaign in an effort to better the general motor vehicle situation in the state and to reduce accidents.

LISBON GRADUATES ESSAY ON PUBLIC LIBRARIES

The following essay entitled Public Libraries was given by Lucy M. Dease of Occum at the graduation of the Lisbon schools held at Newent church, June 19th. Of the fifteen essays delivered this one was considered as of vast interest to the townspeople.

Public Libraries.

For some time the question of a library for the town of Lisbon has been discussed, especially in school circles. Many people who are opposed to the plan do not really know what a library is and the uses of one.

A library is a collection of books and periodicals used for study or reading but not for merchandise. Since the time of the early Romans libraries have been considered as important and essential to education.

A free public library is said to have been established at Athens about five hundred years before the birth of Christ. Many wealthy Romans and Roman emperors established such institutions. They obtained many of their books as spoils of war. Nine hundred and fifty years after there were twenty-eight public libraries at Rome, besides many private collections, the barbarian invasions all of these libraries were destroyed. Books at that time were very valuable because all of the printing had to be done by hand. Many of the famous collections of books originated in monasteries where the monks translated and copied them.

By the middle of the fifteenth century or after, the invention of the printing press libraries were in existence.

In the United States a public library is either owned or controlled by the public. Each institution has its separate board of trustees the main duties of this group are to care and to hold for the property. The book committee is to select books and authorize their purchase, the finance and house committee is to care for the building or buildings of the library.

The funds to maintain such an institution are partly fines, current gifts or state aid.

With some of Andrew Carnegie's gifts there have been founded nearly eight hundred public libraries in the United States. In Scotland, his birthplace, he has already founded over five hundred. The money he has thus spent being about $70,000,000.

There may be also a special grant from the state such as an allotment of $100 paid to every library both large or small, for the purchase of books approved by the proper authorities.

Prof. Goldwin Smith has recently pronounced against public support, saying that there is no more reason for providing free books, from the public purse than free food or clothing. Although in America the public has come to consider the library as an essential part of its system of public education, and the state should educate its citizens.

There are different kinds of libraries, namely: church, parish, town, school, circulating, college, social, open access, children's, traveling and public libraries.

Today there is a free library in almost every town. There are great libraries in the large universities, colleges, schools and clubs. In the United States there are over 6,000 libraries which have 1,000 or more volumes each.

The principal libraries of modern times are the National Library at Paris, which is the largest in the world, the British Museum Library in London and the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg. There are many other libraries but they are not as large as these. The spread of education has called into existence innumerable smaller collections of books. Naturally the widest provision for such collections is found in countries having the best educational systems, as the United States, France, Germany and Great Britain.

Probably no public activity has received larger gifts from individual benefactors than the library. Such gifts have made it possible to improve and increase the size of such institutions. Public aid has been cheerfully given.

There are few people who find it possible to provide a library in their home with as many books and periodicals as a public library. Therefore, every family ought to be willing to donate a small sum each year for such an institution in their town. It would then be possible for the public to have access to a variety of good clean reading material. Reading is an education in itself. It would be possible for the public to have books of fiction, travel, law, etc., besides maps, dictionaries and encyclopedias, when a library is started public gifts are the basis, then the states donate a fair amount, while the Carnegie fund amounts to about $200. It is possible to keep the books in some town building or room given for such use. We should not have books everywhere and nothing fit to read.

Every town should have a place for their boys or girls as well as adults to obtain the right kind of reading material, or to find references, and spend an hour in the reading room which would be clean, quiet and comfortable.

It is said that he is never alone who hath a good book.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

The most notable progress made on local buildings during the past few weeks is that on the new Palace theatre. The work is being rushed to completion and the exterior work is almost completed and the interior of the building is being lathed and will soon be ready for the plasterers. The electricians are installing the lighting arrangements both for the auditorium and the stage and also for the picture booth. An oil-burning heating system is being installed in the adjoining building which is controlled by the theatre corporation. This oil burning heating plant eliminates any possibility of difficulties because of a coal shortage. The organ for the theatre has been completed by the manufacturers and is ready for installation as soon as the construction work on the theatre has progressed to that stage. The chairs have also been shipped and will be installed at an early date.

The work on the Pasnik block is fast approaching the completion stage. The plaster work is practically completed and the building wired and the heating system installed. The building will be ready for occupation within the next few weeks.

Five building permits were issued the past week by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton, bringing the total for the month to well over thirty. The permits were as follows:

To John H. Haden to build a two-story frame house on Roosevelt Avenue. The building will be a square cottage house, 24x26 feet. The foundation will be of stone and concrete. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and shingles and the interior in hard wood and plaster.

To Christopher Dixon to erect a frame garage at 447 Central Avenue for A. Lecavera. The building will be 20x20 feet with a clapboard exterior and sealed interior.

To Lawrence Connell to erect a frame garage on Cedar street. The garage will have a cement and brick foundation and will be 12x18 feet.

To Stanley Rowjeski to add a veranda to the present house at 115 Hickory street. The veranda will be 6x28 feet.

To F. F. Sweenex to alter the present building in rear of Franklin street for J. H. and W. E. Wilson. The alteration will include the enlarging of the entrance and remolding the interior. Work has already been started.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week in Norwich there were 15 sales of real estate as compare to nine for the corresponding week in 1922. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $36,735 and $32,850.

In New London there were 17 sales of real estate as compare to 5 sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $58,531 and $19,965.

Work has been resumed on the frame dormitory which is being erected for Mrs. Donald Saxton on Oneco avenue, near the Connecticut College. There will be a two and a half story frame building, 32x49 feet, arranged for ten rooms. There will be steam heat and all improvements.

James H. Banno has awarded the contract for the erection of a two-story frame dwelling on Mamacus avenue. From private plans, the building will be 28x45 feet, with steam heat, hardwood floors and the usual conveniences. It will cost about $5,900.

The permit has been issued to J. A. and M. A. Koch for a frame bungalow and garage at 891 Bank street. The owners have awarded the contract. The house will be 26x32 feet, and will cost about $4,500. The garage, which will cost about $450, will be 21x31 feet. Work will be started at once.

The contract has been awarded for the erection of a frame dwelling for Mrs. Lillian Senior on Mamacus avenue. The plans call for a house 17x31 feet, to contain seven rooms. There will be hot water heat and all improvements. The estimated cost is about $6,000.

How American Women May Keep Faces Young

"The American smart woman ages early, far earlier than the English woman," says Christian Miller, F. C. I., famous English health expert. She adds that our climate "so exhilarates that you over-exert yourselves and grow old before you know it. That same exhilarating air dries the skin. The skin that lacks moisture grows pale and withered looking and soon forms wrinkles.

"The American complexion is best treated by applying pure mercolized wax, which causes the faded, lifeless cuticle to flake off in minute particles, a little each day, until the fresh, young skin beneath is wholly in evidence. Every druggist has mercolized wax; one ounce is sufficient. Spread on at night like cold cream, washing it off mornings.

By DAVID CORY

RESCUED BY BIG BROWN BEAR.

Hurry, Bobbie Redvest,
As fast as you can fly;
Our little bunny in that trap
Will pine away and die.
So bring a hammer and a saw,
And someone with a big strong paw.

Of course you remember what happened in the last story. But in case you don't, let me tell you. Little Jack Rabbit was caught in a box trap. He had hopped inside to nibble a carrot when all of a sudden quicker than a wink, the door had slammed to and there you are—and there was Little Jack Rabbit. And if Bobbie Redvest hadn't been near just at that time, goodness knows what would have become of that poor little rabbit.

Well that kind little bird flew away as fast as he could and pretty soon he came to the cave of the Big Brown Bear and wasn't it lucky he was at home? Yes, sir! He was sitting just outside his cave door on a bench smoking a corncob pipe. But on hearing what had happened to Little Jack Rabbit, he knocked the ashes out of that pipe, click, click, just like that and taking down his big axe which hung on a peg behind the door, he started off for the Sunny Meadow. Of course he couldn't run as fast as the little robin could fly but it wasn't long before he came to the box.

"Hello!" said the kind old bear, bending down and pitting his mouth close to the crack in the door. "Are you there?"

"I don't know whether I'm there or there," answered the poor little rabbit I'm going to knock a hole in the door with my axe." And he hit the door a dreadful hard whack, but it didn't break open.

"Oh, dear," cried the poor little bunny boy, "you almost knocked me off my feet."

"Never mind," again answered the kind old bear. "Put your paws over your ears and don't be afraid."

Then the great big bear swung his axe away up high in the air and brought it down with such a tremendous blow that the door broke all to smithereens, and one of the splinters hit an old grasshopper so hard that he limped for three days and two nights and had to pay his doctor's bill besides.

If didn't take the little rabbit long to hop out. let me tell you and he was so glad to be free again that he opened his knapsack and gave Bobbie Redvest and the Big Brown Bear each a lollypop.

"Hold your paws over your ears!"

"Be careful where you go
Or perhaps you'll stub your toe
Look before you hop,
Maybe you will want to stop," sang Bobbie Redvest from the tree-top.

TELEPHONE STRIKE MOST EFFECTIVE IN PROVIDENCE

The Various Exchanges in Providence Were Almost Completely Tied Up—Service Was Impaired in the Larger Cities of Massachusetts and Rhode Island—In Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont Only a Scattering of Operators Went Out—Picketing Was Carried Out in Front of the Exchanges, But There Was No Disorder.

Boston, June 26.—The strike of telephone operators which started this morning in five New England states severely impaired service in a few of the larger cities in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and in some smaller places but had little effect in a larger part of the territory covered by the New England Telephone and Telegraph company. In Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont only a scattering of operators went out and service remained virtually normal.

Called in an effort to enforce demands for increased wages and a seven-hour day, the strike was most effective in Providence, R. I., where the various exchanges were almost completely tied up; in some of the exchanges in Boston and the Metropolitan district and in the cities of Worcester, Springfield, Brockton, Lawrence, Salem and Pawtucket, R. I. In Boston the telephone company admitted that few operators reported for duty this morning in the large exchanges in the business district.

The first day of the strike passed without disorder. Picketing was carried out in front of the exchanges.

OPERATORS' UNIONS MAY AMALGAMATE

Boston, June 26.—Possible amalgamation of the two warring unions of telephone operators in greater Boston, one of which called a strike this morning while the other kept its members at work, was indicated tonight by strike leaders at the close of a meeting. It was stated unofficially that leaders of the two factions had reached an agreement but details were withheld.

BUZZI MURDER TRIAL TO GO TO JURY TODAY

New York, June 26.—A night session was ordered late today so that both sides could sum up in the trial of Mrs. Anna Buzzi, accused of murdering Frederick Schneider, Bronx contractor with whom she lived for eight years, and the case could go to the jury tomorrow morning.

The jurors this afternoon visited Classon Point, where the victim was shot in his automobile, stopping at the police station to inspect the death car.

A number of witnesses were heard before the jurors departed. Martin T. Henahan, formerly a detective, was called after Joseph Borton, assistant treasurer of Ringling Brothers circus, had testified that an agent of Mrs. Buzzi's had asked him to keep quiet about a telephonic conversation he had heard between Mrs. Buzzi and William Ture, her brother-in-law, the day before the crime.

Henahan denied that he had asked Boyton and Richard Smith, another "brave man, to "lay off" on the case, [illegible] the conversation, when according to Ture, Mrs. Buzzi asked him to get her a pistol. He also denied that he was trying to "pass the buck to Willie Ture" although he [illegible] going to Philadelphia with Mrs. Ture to see Boyton. Mrs. Ture previously had testified that her husband had several times threatened "to get" Schneider.

Schneider was killed about 5 p. m. Mrs. Buzzi claimed that she was in their apartment from the time she gave him tea until she learned of his death shortly after 6 p. m. Her alibi is that she could not have got from the scene of the murder to her apartment by six o'clock. Detective Charles Armstrong testified today he had made a trial trip for the prosecutor in 31 minutes.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS BROOKLYN EL ACCIDENT

New York, June 26.—Yesterday's elevated wreck in Brooklyn, in which seven persons were killed and 85 injured, several probably fatally, brought two important developments today.

1—District Attorney Dodd began presentation to the King's county grand jury of evidence as to the causes of the disaster and announced that he was going after "higher-ups" of the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit company on the theory that disregard of the essentials of safety caused the ancient two-car train to plunge from the elevated structure to the street forty feet below.

2—Mayor Hylan in a statement dividing blame for the disaster between the transit company and the state transit commission called on Governor Smith for a special session of the legislature at which "the recalcitrant traction-controlled republican legislature" would be forced to adopt the Walker-Donohue bill providing home rule in transit control, which was defeated at the last session. He promised to name a municipal transit commission that would compel speedy cure in the safety of transit company patrons.

President Menden of the newly reorganized B. M. T., issued a statement denying the charges of officials that rotten guard rails, which gave way when the train jumped the track, had caused the tragedy. He said the guard rails had held but that the train had toppled over and that the accident was unavoidable.

He also denied charges that someone had turned a switch to danger after the wreck to make it appear that the motorman had run past a danger signal and thus was responsible. The switch he said, was thrown by the train itself.

LIGHTNING BOLT FATAL TO COLCHESTER WOMAN

(Special to the Bulletin)

Colchester, June 26—Mrs. George M. Lester, 67, was struck by lightning and killed here late this afternoon while lying on a bed in her home. Mrs. Lester had taken two of her small children into her bed room in the south east corner of the house when the severe thunder storm swept over the village late today and was lying with them on the bed. A dog, the family pet, also took refuge under the bed in the room.

About 4.30 o'clock there was a terrific crash and Mr. Lester who was in another room, realized that the house had been struck rushed into the room where his wife was. Hege he found the bed afire and his wife in an unconscious state. He managed to extinguish the blazing bed clothes and turned to his wife but she was past help although a physician was called. The two children who had been lying on the bed beside their mother were uninjured and the dog under the bed was unhurt.

The right side of Mrs. Lester's body was badly burned and scorched by the lightning and from the blazing bed clothes and her own apparel. The lightning apparently came in through an open window without leaving a discernable mark on the building.

WARD CABLEGRAMS TO BE RELEASED FOR JURY

White Plains, N. Y., June 26.—Efforts of Attorney General Sherman to build up a criminal case against Walter S. Ward, confessed slayer of Clarence Peters, of Haverhill, Mass., were crowned today with a supreme court decision releasing for his inspection, and that of the extraordinary grand jury considering the case, a series of cablegrams that passed between Ward's brother and father relative to the blackmail plot which Ward said lay behind the killing.

Justice Wagner today authorized use of the cablegrams, despite a bitter fight by Ward's counsel, as well as by counsel for the Western Union and the Commercial Cable company, against their disclosure. Ward's counsel who had blocked inspection of the message during preliminary hearings which resulted in the calling of an extraordinary grand jury, by injunction proceedings, contended that the attorney general in subpoenaing the cable companies failed to produce the messages, was in contempt of court and violated the injunction order. The cable companies contended that since the messages had either been sent or received by Walter Ward, the slayer's brother, and George S. Ward, president of the Ward Baking company and their father.

The court held, however, that the injunction did not refer to the grand jury proceedings and ordered the messages turned over to the grand jury.

After hearing a half dozen witnesses the gand jury adjourned until tomorrow. Mr. Sherman announced he planned to present testimony of about 100 witnesses over a period of five or six weeks.

AN ALLIANCE AGAINST BUCKET SHOP BROKERS

New York, June 26.—District Attorney Banton and United States Attorney Hayward met today and formed an offensive alliance, designed to make things as unpleasant as possible for brokers operating bucket shops, or otherwise fleecing customers of Wall street.

At the end of the conference it was announced that the two officials had reached a working agreement whereby it charges against every suspected broker would be considered by the two offices and that the office having the strongest case would act. The federl prosecutor will go after brokers whose most glaring offense is using the mails to defraud, or violation of the bankruptcy laws, while the district attorney's force will handle bucketing and larceny cases.

A number of houses already are under investigation, it was said.

Other developments in the Wall street housecleaning, which has been accompanied in recent weeks by a series of failures, included the stepping down from office as president of the Consolidated Stock Exchange of William S. Silkworth, who resigned under fire for his alleged connection with several of the now bankrupt firms, and the opening of a court fight by Benjamin Alexander to upset his expulsion from the New York curb market, which was based on his alleged violation of trading rules. Silkworth was succeeded by Laurance Tweedy, first vice president.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, June 26.—Trapped by flames on an old gasoline tug boat on the Quinnipiac river two children were burned to death when the boat caught fire late today.

The dead children are Georgianna Turbert, 5, daughter of William Turbert and Willam Gerrick, 13, son of Mrs. Helena Gerrick, of this city.

Several other children who were playing on the boat when the fire broke out got off safely. Attempts were made by the other children to rescue the victims but the flames spread too rapidly.

When firemen arrived futile attempts were made by them to save the children. The body of the boy was seen lying in the hull, which was a roaring furnace. A hole was cut in the deck and water was played onto the boy's body. The body of the girl was not seen until the fire was extinguished.

The cause of the fire is unknown but it is thought that it was caused by a cigarette or match igniting the fumes in the hold of the boat. The boat which bears the name of "Avalynne" and owned by the H. C. Rowe Oyster Company of this city, was badly damaged. It was beached several years ago and has not been in commission since.

Claims That Morses Failed to Keep Pact

Government Counsel Maintains $600,000 Was Wrongfully Diverted to Groton Iron Works.

Washington, June 26.—Government counsel presented today to the jury at the Morse trial evidence designed to show that the Morses failed to keep their agreement with the Emergency Fleet corporation to use the proceeds from a $2,000,000 bond issue on their Alexandria, Va., shipyard to pay off the yard's debts and to complete the construction of ships building there for the government. In entering into this agreement the fleet corporation cancelled deeds aggregating $1,750,000 which it held on the Alexandria plant as security for loans.

Six hundred thousand dollars of the $2,000,000 in bonds was used as security for the debts of the Groton Iron Works early in 1920 at a time when the government claims that company was in financial difficulties. Later it went into the hands of a receiver. Delaware corporation was responsible for the debts of the Groton company but Justice Stafford excluded this line of cross-examination.

A total of $1,200,000 of the bonds was turned over to C. W. Morse and company in adjustment of what purported from the books of the several Morse companies to be a transfer of a debt in a like sum owing to the United States Transport company by the Virginia company. The transport company owed C. W. Morse and company a similar amount. The government disputes this claim of debts.

According to the books $200,000 of the bonds was used as security for cargo claims against the steamship Huron, a Morse-owned craft. Much of the remainder of the bonds was used as security for debts of the Virginia company to various creditors.

OKMULGEE COUNTY, OKLA., UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 26.—Governor J. C. Walton today placed Okmulgee county under martial law, declaring in his proclamation that a state of lawlessness and terror exists there. The action was unexpected.

Announcement of the issuance of the proclamation was made by Aldrich Balke, the governor's secretary, this afternoon.

The proclamation, he said, asserted that "a state of lawlessness and terror" exists in Okmulgee county as a result of the "neglect of the sheriff to enforce the law."

John Russell, democrat, is the sheriff.

Military control probably will be confined, for the present, at least, to the sheriff's office, the governor's secretary said, adding that all civil authority would be superseded.

Two Men Killed by Bolt of Lightning

One of the Victims Was Bera Savoy of the Vaudeville Team of Savoy and Brennan.

Long Beach, N. Y., June 26.—Bert Savoy of the vaudeville team of Savoy and Brennan, and Jack C. Grossman, both of New York, were struck and killed by a bolt of lightning late this afternoon. Two other men were injured by the same bolt.

The men were walking along the beach at the water's edge, watching the progress of an electric storm that did not reach Long Beach. Savoy and Grossman were walking together and the other men, R. V. Webb and John Healy also of New York, were behind them.

The bolt killed Savoy and Grossman instantly. Webb and Haley were knocked to the ground, severely shocked and slightly burned by the flash. They were revived a few minutes later by physicians.

Savoy was well known in the theatrical world as a female impersonator and was one of the star attractions of the Greenwich Village Follies. Grossman also was well known in the vaudeville world.

A number of other bathers on the beach were stunned by the flash.

Savoy's real name was Everett L. MacKenzie. He was 38 years old, born in Boston and had been on the stage for more than 18 years. He had teamed with Brennan about eight years.

Both Savoy and Brennan recently took out $60,000 life insurance, it was said, each naming the other his beneficiary.

VIOLENT ELECTRICAL AND HALE STORM IN BROOKLYN

New York, June 26.—One woman was killed, and several persons injured today when a violent wind, electrical and hail storm of only ten minutes duration swept over the Bushwick and East New York sections of Brooklyn.

Fifty of the finest specimens of trees in Prospect Park were felled, some of them more than a hundred years old, blocking motor traffic on the drives and resulting in the temporary closing of the park to all traffic.

The brief storm was the climax to a sizzling day fraught with tragedy. Mrs. Emily Elsworth, wife of a retired stock broker, died of heart failure superinduced by the heat, while she sought relief by lying in a bathtub in her Riverside Drive apartment.

Unbalanced by the heat, Mrs. Dora Katz, mother of three children, leaped from the roof of her apartment and was killed.

MERIDEN CHURCH TWICE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Meriden, June 26.—Refutation of the old saying, "Lightning never strikes in the same place twice" was made here early this evening when a bolt hit the same spot on the base of the St. Stanislaus church steeple during a storm on June 5th.

Workmen only several days ago completed repairs necessitated by the first bolt of lightning. A hole was made today in the brickwork near a window ledge, the damaged area being exactly the same as in the first instance.

The steeple of the Center Congregational church also was struck and slightly damaged. Several downtown streets were inundated by the heavy rainfall, the water on one street being reported two feet deep.

TAXATION THE PRESIDENT'S TOPIC IN SALT LAKE CITY

Declared the Federal Government is Endeavoring to Remove the Menace of Mounting Taxes—Gives Credit to Budget Bureau for Getting Government Expenditures Back to Something Like Normal—Was Given an Enthusiastic Reception in Every Town in Utah as He Motored Toward Salt Lake City.

Salt Lake, June 26.—(By the A. P.)—The Mormon tabernacle which seats 12,000 persons was jammed to the doors tonight to hear President Harding speak on taxation.

Thousands more were gathered outside on the tabernacle grounds to hear the address, the sixth prepared speech of Mr. Harding's western trip, by means of voice amplifying apparatus. The assembly hall nearby in the temple grounds likewise was filled.

Preceding the president's arrival, an organ recital was given and strangely considering this western city and the character of the building where the meeting was held loud applause was given such tunes as Maryland, My Maryland, and Marching Through Georgia."

The president and Mrs. Harding arrived at 8.20 o'clock and the audience cheered them and Governor Mabey for four minutes. Senator Smoot, arising to act as the presiding officer, was greeted with "Hurrah for Smoot" and loud cheers.

After having been greeted by a large proportion of the population of Ogden on his arrival there this morning and after having been accorded an enthusiastic reception in every town and through the country as he motored toward Salt Lake, Mr. Hardspeaking from the steps of the city hall at Bountiful a little town near this city, declared that this greatest joy, the finest compensation and the greatest inspiration which can come to the incumbent of the presidential office are found in getting away from the office at Washington and meeting people just as I am getting you."

"It is a joy to those in authority to know that there is so much happiness and so much confidence in the future of our country," he added. "I have had my own faith renewed today and I am grateful for the opportunity of greeting you as well as having you offer your greeting to us."

The welcome given the president and Mrs. Harding also, for at every stop during the motor trip of 40 miles from Ogden to Salt Lake City she was almost buried under flowers [illegible] non-partisan [illegible]

President Harding compared back tonight what the federal government has accomplished in decreasing taxes and the public debt and made a plea for action along similar lines by the states, municipalities and counties.

The executive said the federal government is "diligently seeking to prove itself a helpful example" in removing what he characterized as the menace of mounting taxes and growing public indebtedness, but added that this was not alone a federal problem, that the improved order must come into the units of government into which the federal government never intrudes."

Mr. Harding did not take up in his address any contemplated administration program for tax revision in the coming year. He did say, however, that the federal government was working under a program which "involves extinguishing a half billion of the (public) debt each year" and asserted that the payments which the British government will make under the British-American debt settlement "will correspondingly relieve the burden upon American taxpayers."

The president declared no other country in the world had been able to make such a record in public debt reduction as had the United States. Pointing to a reduction of more than one-half in federal taxes during the past two years as compared with the war load peak in 1920, he declared this was the record of business administration feels justified in referring with no small measure of satisfaction."

The British debt settlement, the executive went on, has been acclaimed all over the world as one of the most notable and successful fiscal accomplishments ever recorded." He added that aside from reducing the burden of American taxpayers, the settlement had been one of the most reassuring events since the armistice," coming as it did at a time of "wide uncertainty and misgiving throughout the world of business everywhere."

To the budget bureau Mr. Harding attributed much, of the credit for getting government expenditures back to something like normal. Under this plan, he declared, the administration has been able to "awaken a spirit of economy and efficiency in the public service."

"We have introduced business methods in government," he added, and instead of operating blindly and to suit individual departments which have never visualized the government as a whole, and felt no concern about the raising of funds, we are scrutinizing, justifying, coordinating, and not only halting mounting cost, but making long strides in reducing the cost of government activities.

"Perhaps the budget system would not accomplish so much for taxing and spending divisions smaller than the state, but a resolute commitment to strike at all extravagance and expend public funds as one would for himself is his personal and business affairs will accomplish wonders.

"Figures furnished to him by both the treasury and the census bureau the president stated, 'make it perfectly plain that whereas the cost of federal government is being steadily reduced, the cost of state and local governments is being just as steadily increased, year by year.'

"Take the costs of state government," he said, "I am informed that the revenues of the states in 1913 aggregated $300,000,000 and that in 19[illegible] they had increased to $[illegible],000,000; that is, they had increased 10[illegible] per cent, and every dollar of that increase had to come in some way or other from the public. The [illegible] of the cities in 1913 amounted to $[illegible],000 and in 19[illegible] to $1,[illegible],000, an increase of 15 per cent.

The total debt of this group of cities in 1913 was $2,901,000,000, which by 1921 had risen to $4,324,000,000—an increase of 49 per cent."

SLAYER OF CLEVELAND POLICEMAN CAPTURED

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—Cornered by 35 policemen and detectives in a Michigan averlee lumber yard where for several weeks he has been working as foreman of drivers, John L. Whitfield, wanted in Cleveland, Ohio for the murder of Patrolman Dennis Griffin, was captured tonight.

Whitfield was traced here from Madison, Wis., through Chicago Detective Lieutenant Charles Q. Nevel, of the Cleveland police.

Nevel and a squadron of police and detectives, heavily armed with revolvers and riot guns, surrounded the plant of the Ternes Coal and Lumber company late today.

When the men with riot guns had been placed about the yard, Nevel accosted Whitfield who was working through the yards. Whitfield was startled and made as though to dash toward a small office nearby.

Nevel poked a revolver against the fugitive's head and ordered him to hold up his hands. Whitfield was then handcuffed and taken to police headquarters.

Whitfield told officers he would waive extradition and "take his chances," in Cleveland courts.

The arrest of Whitfield ends a chase that had its beginning in a warrant charging Whitfield with the theft of some spark plugs. Patrolmen Griffin had arrested Whitfield on this warrant and had started with him in an automobile for his precinct station when Whitfield asked permission to be taken home to change his clothes. Griffin granted the request, having searched the prisoner.

At his home Whitfield went into a room to change clothing and it is believed he secreted a revolver in his pocket at that time. Captor and captive drove toward the police station.

When near their destination, according to the charges made against Whitfield he drew a revolver and shot the patrolman through the neck, killing him instantly.

Whitfield, according to the charges, then drove 28 miles into the country, stripped his victim of all clothing, dug a shallow grave, dumped the patrolman's body into it and then covered it with two feet of earth. The body was found several days later.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office
81 Church Street Telephone 1023

The city of Willimantic and surrounding territory were pitched into total darkness shortly after 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when the skies were completely obliterated by dense clouds which sent down a pouring rain. Automobiles traveled the city streets with their headlights turned on while the majority of automobilists pursued their machines and ran for shelter. The violent shower was accompanied by thunder and lightning and lasted about fifteen minutes. The electric lights went out a number of times for two or three minute periods but considering past experiences, they behaved admirably. No reports of serious damage have been heard but there is little doubt but that the lightning struck in several places.

Tuesday was the opening day of the Salvation Army's campaign for $7,000. The funds are to be used to complete and equip the new building on Walnut street and for the maintenance of the work for one year. The home service appeal committee, of which F. R. Hills is chairman, placed over the details of the campaign, which will include a canvass of the business and professional men, a house-to-house canvass, collections among the employes of the various industries of the city and a tag day. The campaign was made necessary through a large and unexpected extra cost with which the local corps met in erecting a new citadel on Walnut street. The committee which is backing the appeal comprises: P. S. Hills, chairman; H. W. Tinker, treasurer; M. E. Sullivan, secretary; J. F. Ahern, W. A. Costello, Mrs. William I. Crane, Mayor Charles A. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Will Give Play in Taftville.

The C. J. S. Society connected with Mrs. Crowdis' Sunday school class of the Taftville Congregational church, will give a little play, A Snap Shot in India, in the parlors of the church tonight at 8 o'clock.

Apollo Concert Company.

Art Wells and the Apollo Concert company are names synonymous in Chautauqua, for where you find Mr. Wells, you will invariably find the clever group of entertainers who make up this pioneer organization. The Apollos are to appear here on the Chautauqua program. Considerable attention and a capacity audience is predicted.

The Apollos occupy a place of preeminence among the popular musical companies of the platform. For some fifteen years Mr. Wells has headed this company and they have appeared in practically every state in the Union, in Canada and clear off in Australia and New Zealand with the greatest success.

There are several reasons for the tremendous popularity of the Apollos. Not the least is Art Wells, who is 250 pounds of mirth, music, and drollery. Then, too, there's Mrs. Wells, accompanist, saxophonist, and musical monologue artist. Then there's the "Apollophone," made for and played by these five artists in masterly fashion. The saxophone quartet, too, is a better feature this year than ever before, and some splendid, ensemble effects are obtained on these popular instruments. Another feature is the banjo work of Mr. Wells, and special attention should be called to his bassoon solos.

All in all, it's a remarkable program of first-class entertainment, given in a real professional manner, by real professional musicians.

Breed Theatre.

What is considered a gala event in the film history of Norwich is the premiere presentation of Catch My Smoke, latest photoplay featuring Tom Mix, the William Fox star, which comes to the Breed today and Thursday.

Under the direction of William Beaudine, who directs the popular Fox star for the first time, this photoplay is said to be replete with action from the first to the last reel. Ably assisted by an excellent cast including "Tony" the marvelous horse and flawless photography, Catch My Smoke tells the story of an effort made by Tom's enemies to defraud him out of his property upon his return from France and of the dynamic westerner's triumph over them. Not only does he thrill as by the display of horsemanship but in his dare-devil work he succeeds in dispelling his pursuer. This is one of the best photoplays in which the versatile Fox star has appeared and there can be no doubt that he gains additional laurels with each new photoplay. The management guarantees six reels of solid entertainment during the showing of this new picture play.

For the second feature Clara Kimball Young will be seen in The Woman of Bronze, and Movie Chats completes the bill.

Apt Description.

The children of the neighborhood like to congregate at Esther's home because her mother and father are interested in children's affairs and make it exceedingly pleasant for them. One day on her return from there Det remarked: "I like to play there because it isn't a mother and father house—it's a little girl's home."

Wesley's Great Work.

During 50 years John Wesley rode 250,000 miles and preached 40,000 sermons. "He rideth well whom the grace of God carrieth" said Thomas a Kempis, whose book was often in Wesley's saddlebags.

Quitter Never Wins.

NEW YORK COMMISSION FAILS TO HONOR JERSEY'S RULING AGAINST LEONARD

New York, June 26 (By the A. P.)—The first "overt act" of disagreement between New York and New Jersey boxing authorities occurred today when the state athletic commission refused to uphold the New Jersey boxing commission's suspension of Benny Leonard, lightweight king, for refusal to go through with a contract made last year to box Charley White of Chicago.

The commission announced after a hearing that it found nothing in the White-Leonard contract, made with Tex Rickard, to prevent either boxer from engaging in other contests, and thus cleared the way for the championship match scheduled at the Yankee stadium on July 23 between Leonard and Lew Tendler of Philadelphia.

Rickard had attempted to block the Tendler-Leonard bout, which was to be staged under the auspices of the newly organized Cromwell A. C., claiming that the White contract gave him prior claim to the champion's services. The commission held, however, that Rickard had made no attempt to set a date for a White-Leonard match since its postponement last October because of an injury to the champion's mouth.

Meanwhile the Cromwell A. C. announced that Leonard and Tendler each had posted forfeits of $10,000 to guarantee fulfillment of the contract for their 15-round decision match. Bitter feeling between these ring rivals, it was recalled, was aroused two years ago when Tendler claimed Leonard's forfeit of $5,000 after the champion had cancelled a match with the Philadelphian because of illness.

HARGRAVES' HOMER BEATS REDS IN 14TH INNING

Chicago, June 26.—Hargrave, Cincinnati catcher, who helped defeat the Cubs yesterday with a home run today cracked out another 4-bagger in the 14th inning, giving the Reds the final game of the series, 4 to 3. Third Baseman Pinelli was spiked on the ankle by Aldridge who slid into third base in the fifth inning and had to be carried off the field. He will be unable to play for some time, it was said, eight stitches being required in the wound. Score:

YALE IS BIG THREE BASEBALL CHAMPION

New York, June 26.—Yale captured the "Big Three" baseball championship of 1923 today at the Yankee stadium, defeating Princeton, 5 to 1, in the third and deciding game of their series. Both teams had previously beaten Harvard.

"Ducky" Pond, who has twirled the Blue to all of its four victories over the other members of the college triumvirate, and O'Hearn, Eli first sacker, who got four hits and a sacrifice fly in five trips to the plate, were the heroes of Yale's triumph. Pond held the heavy-hitting Tigers to four singles, and although wild, tightened in the pinches.

Sensational defensive work pulled Pond out of a hole in the eighth when Princeton filled the bases with none out on two passes and a hit; Cosgrove, Yale third sacker, cut off one run at the plate after making a brilliant stop, while Centerfielder Oed caught Smith's long drive and completed a double play at second. The Tigers lost a run when Jeffries failed to reach the plate before the double killing was completed.

O'Hearn's single drove in Yale's first two runs in the third and his sacrifice fly and Eddy's hit brought in the other Eli runs in the fifth. Except for this two innings, when his own wildness also contributed to the scoring, Carney pitched strongly for the losers. The score:

COLLEGE NET STARS FALL IN MATCHES

Philadelphia, June 26.—Two champions and a former title holder were eliminated today in the third round singles matches of the national intercollegiate tennis championships at the Merion Cricket club.

Lucien Williams of Yale, 1922 intercollegiate champion; Phil Meer of Leland Stanford, 1921 title holder, and Arnold W. Jones of Yale, national junior champion, met defeat, but not without hard struggles, three sets being required in each match to give their opponents the victory.

AMERICAN TENNIS STARS HAVE NO TROUBLE IN MATCHES AT WIMBLEDON

Wimbeldon, June 26 (By the A. P.).—The trio of American tennis stars who have come to Wimbeldon to battle for the championship of the world got through their first encounters with the foreign contestants this afternoon without the loss of a set. Vincent Richards created the best impression in his smooth, beautiful triumph over the Belgian champion, Jean Washer, whom many consider the best tennis player on the continent. The score was 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Richards played by far the brightest and liveliest game which the two days of the tournament have produced. Many observers expressed the belief that he would survive the meeting with Johnston in their approaching battle, which, however, depends upon both winning against other opponents tomorrow.

William M. Johnston, on the other hand, did not display his best in carrying out his easy assignment of defeating E. Higgs, a young player from Surrey, who is considered rather mediocre. The scoring in this series was 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

Francis T. Hunter, the third of the trio, had no easy time of it in his duel with the Spanish Davis cup player, Edward Flaquer, but when the slim Spaniard slipped ahead of him in both the first and second sets, the strong and sturdy American quickened his pace, added greater power to his strokes and rushed through to victory, at 7-5, 6-4, 6-1.

Their struggle kept them racing all over the court in the first two sets. There was first a back court battle, then a mid-court duel, and occasionally a spectacular exchange of hard and soft volleys close up to the net. In volleying Hunter had the better of it; he lacked the finesse of Richards, but his chops and drops had a decisive firmness that finished off Flaquer.

Strategically, too, Hunter seemed stronger, and certainly he was stronger physically, than the Spaniard. When the third set began Flaquer was weary and he won only one of the last nine games.

To come through the lower half to the finals, which either Richards or Johnston is expected to reach by way of the upper division, Hunter will probably have to meet another Spanish Davis cup player, Count de Gomera. His opponent tomorrow has not yet been determined.

GILLESPIE PITCHES GOOD GAME FOR BRIDGEPORT

Bridgeport, June 26.—Johnny Gillespie let Waterbury down with three hits today while Bridgeport collected a dozen off Etten and won from the Brasscos 5 to 1. It was Bridgeport's fourth straight win over Waterbury and Gillespie's second consecutive three hit victory over Bronkie's team. The Bridgeport right hander allowed Waterbury but three hits last Saturday. Score:

MANAGER TROLAND TAKES A SLAM AT O'LEARY

Manager Troland of the Taftville A. A. baseball team says that as yet he has heard nothing from Manager O'Leary of the Norwich team regarding a game between these two bitter rivals. The Taftville manager claims that man for man his team is equal in every respect to the Norwich team, provided Manager O'Leary does not go out and hire a number of Eastern leaguers as he has done in years previous. Troland also states that O'Leary will be unable to use Liberty, as the Taftville team has signed him for the season. In Manager Troland's opinion Mike Morin is every bit as good as Chippie Gaw and claims there is plenty of Taftville money to back up his judgment.

Taftville's Lineup.

Taftville's lineup for such a game would be: Belair c, Morin p, Cardie 1b, Jack Murphy 2b, Liberty ss, Dugas or F. Murphy 3b, Gaudette lf, Jarvis cf, Jim Murphy rf, and other locals ready to relieve at any time.

Threadmakers vs. Taftville.

The Willimantic Threadmakers will be the attraction at the Providence street grounds on Saturday afternoon. These two old and bitter rivals clash in the first game of a three-game series. The second game will be played at Willimantic on Sunday. Hamel or Mathewson will pitch Saturday, with Muldoon on the receiving end. Morin and Belair will do the honors for Taftville.

Not Surprised By Supreme Court Action

Former Governor Henry J. Allen, of Kansas, sponsor of the Industrial Court functioning in that State, who declares he was not surprised when the U. S. Supreme Court decided that the Industrial Tribunal had no right to regulate the wages paid by a packing company. The court was set up some time ago as a means of solving industrial unrest and preventing strikes with disastrous consequences. Former Governor Allen, who recently returned from Europe, states he expected adverse decision in the case because when the Industrial Court took the action in question it was placing that section of the law on thin ice. The Industrial Court held it had a right to order an institution to pay a wage, whether that wage represented profit or loss. This was done when there was no question of emergency. The whole Kansas law was written around the emergency point.

ANOTHER CRISIS SAVERTED BY SHELBY PROMOTERS

Shelby, Mont., June 26.—(By the A. P.)—Another crisis which threatened for a time to imperil the holding of the Dempsey-Gibbons world's heavyweight championship bout here July 4, was avoided today when an agreement was reached between the fight officials, Great Falls business men financially interested in the fight, and nine local lumber dealers and labor contractors who hold a mortgage of $265,000 against the arena, constructed for the battle.

Repayment of the money advanced by Great Falls bankers for the second $184,000 guaranteed Jack Dempsey, and reimbursement of local lumber dealers and contractors will be on a pro-rata basis, it was announced by George H. Stanton, Great Falls Banker, after a prolonged conference today.

Stanton also declared the raising of the third $150,000 of the champion's guarantee might be made in Great Falls tomorrow.

The lumbermen are said to have demanded a guarantee that the money they had invested would be a first charge upon the receipts for tickets to the bout. Under the agreement reached later, each will share equally in the proceeds, as the money is received in proportion to his claim.

NUGGET-JAIL HILL GAME POSTPONED; WET GROUNDS

The heavy thunder storm of Tuesday afternoon made it necessary to postpone the Nugget-Jail Hill game until a later date. Both teams were eager to clash, as a victory for either one would send them in striking distance for the pennant.

The game tonight will be a regular battle between the Professional Men and the Whirlwinds. The Whirlwinds lead the league but a victory for the Profs will tie up the first position. Should the Profs lose, the Whirlwinds will remain in undisputed possession of first place, while the Profs will drop back to third place and the Cornets will be in second place. The Whirlwinds will be weakened by the loss of "Red" Leseman, who this week took unto himself a bride. However, Joe Belair is to do the catching and Roy Fillmore will fill Red's place at short.

PUBLIC LINKS GOLF CALLED BECAUSE OF DARKNESS

Washington, June 26.—Playing the qualification round of the national public links tournament was ordered stopped late today on account of darkness by the officials of the United States Golf association. Fourteen players who failed to complete 36 holes during the day were instructed to play the remaining holes tomorrow morning.

Notwithstanding a six on the last hole, John Dawson of Chicago shot a score of 73 to lead the field in the first 18 holes of the qualification round today. Dawson was out in 34 and back in 39, being bunkered on the last hole and taking three putts. His score set a new competitive record for the course.

Beckett Will Fight Carpentier.

London, June 26.—The Exchange Telegraph's Southampton correspondent says Joe Beckett, the British heavyweight, has definitely decided to fight Georges Carpentier on July 26. Beckett does not think he will be entirely fit by that time, the correspondent adds, but is prepared to do his best.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

The creation of a Dominion wide racing commission is proposed for the control of the sport throughout Canada.

The first big race rowed over the famous Henley course was that between Oxford and Cambridge in the year 1829.

The Fulton team of the Kitty league has a valuable asset in Manager Dan Griner, whose pitching has resulted in several victories for his crew.

Mel Coogan, who now calls Brooklyn his home, has been matched for a 12-round contest with Young Jackel, the Toledo lightweight, to take place June 29 at Dayton, O.

A string of ten straight victories served to boost the St. Paul team in the American association column, but Kansas City still continues to lead the race by a good margin.

If the pitching and fielding of the Cleveland Indians were on a par with their heavy hitting, Speaker's tribe would soon lessen the distance between them and the Mackmen and Yankees.

With scarcely 200 points separating the first and last teams, the Three-I league has been staging one of the prettiest pennant races to be found anywhere on the minor circuits this season.

The runaway race made by the Okmulgee leaders has served to lessen interest among many Western association fans and it is not likely that a change will be made in the association circuit before the season is much older.

Bluing for Bee Stings.

Curiously enough, the same mail recently brought to the Companion two letters from subscribers who had been reading our remarks about bee stings and the circumstances in which they may even threaten life. Both our correspondents wrote to say that ordinary bluing such as is used in laundry work will give almost instant relief if it is painted over and round the place where the bee has delivered her thrust. The treatment is new to us, but it has been successfully employed by both our readers.—Youth's Companion.

Religion's Duty.

The two sentiments which most inspire men to good deeds are love and hope. Religion should give freer and more rational play to these two sentiments than the world has hitherto witnessed; and the love and hope will be thoroughly grounded in and on efficient, serviceable, visible, actual and concrete deeds of conduct.—Charles W. Eliot.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Back From Washington

We haven't heard about dear Uncle Lucky, the old gentleman rabbit for a long time. Perhaps you've been wondering what had become of him. Well, I'll tell you. He went to Washington to see Uncle Sam. The Bunnyville Boy Scout was an immense

"I've got something for you!"

big flag, so the kind old gentleman rabbit had polished up his old wedding stovepipe hat and wound his gold watch and chain and then he had bought his ticket.

Well, after about a week's visit with Uncle Sam and Aunt Columbia, he took the train back to his little house on the corner of Lettuce Avenue and Carrot street, Rabbitville.

You may be sure that Little Jack Rabbit was at the station with the Luckymobile to meet his dear old uncle and no money had the train stopped than the old gentleman rabbit hopped out of the parlor car Clover Top and in less than 600 short seconds he and Little Jack Rabbit were driving away as fast as a comet for the old gentleman's little white house.

"Well, I'm glad to get back," said Uncle Lucky. "I've got something for you but I'm not going to give it to you until you tell me you've been a good little rabbit while I've been away."

MAKING ERRONEOUS CLAIMS.

It is always a bad policy to criticise on the strength of a partial statement, or to pick out part of a sentence, without regard for what precedes or follows it, and charge someone with saying it. That is the error into which the League of Nations Non-Partisan association has fallen in taking to task President Harding concerning a statement which it tries to claim that he made at St. Louis when speaking on the permanent court of international justice.

According to the association it is charged that he said "The league of nations is as dead as slavery," and then launches forth in denunciation of such a claim.

Now there is no getting away from the fact that he said these words. But that was not all he said and he did not make that unrelated statement as might be gathered from the criticism. In that part of his speech where he was dealing with the manner in which this country has treated the question of the league President Harding said "The issue of the league of nations is as dead as slavery."

That is some different from what his critics painted out, and because of it their protest falls flatter than a pancake. The issue of the league of nations is not the league of nations. The issue has been before the people of this country and they have expressed themselves in no uncertainable terms. The election of 1920 settled that issue for this country and that is what the president pointed out.

It is probable that there are those who take a different view, and it is indicated that the protesting association's membership can be numbered among such but that isn't sufficient to counterbalance the overwhelming election figures when the league issue was before the country. If, however, the association thinks the league issue is alive that doesn't justify it in misquoting the president's address or trying to claim that he said something entirely different from his actual words.

SERVING MANKIND.

For a considerable period of years past of the Rockefeller fortune has been devoted to the fighting of disease throughout the world. It is one of the great efforts in behalf of suffering humanity that reaches into all countries, and some of the worst pestholes, that the underlying causes of the troubles may be overcome and disease conquered. Such work is being carried on with marked success and promises to be continued relentlessly till its whole object is accomplished.

A commendable extension of this work made possible by the gift of $160,000 just announced by John D. Rockefeller is that which will make possible the extension of the use of insulin in the treatment of diabetes. This wonderful discovery has already accomplished much in checking that disease. It has been tested to the point where there is no doubt about what it will do, but there is need of making it possible for a greater number to get the benefit of it by teaching physicians in general practice how to employ it and to increase the number of free ward patients.

That need will be met to a large degree by this new gift, distributed as it will be among 15 hospitals in this country and Canada. Heretofore diabetes has been subject to some relief through dieting and other treatment, but now hope is given to the sufferers through the use of insulin. There are cases that respond more readily than others but the discovery is one that deserves to be available to as many afflicted with the disease as possible and it is for the purpose of making it so that this new gift has been made.

The use of wealth in such a manner calls forth the highest commendation. Whatever is employed for the purpose of fighting disease is certainly being turned to the general benefit of mankind.

SPURIOUS ART.

The charges that art objects have been sold to American buyers as real when as a matter of fact they have been constructed around fragments or been completed have served to bring attention to a practice that may not have been generally known outside the inner circles. NEW YORK'S ELEVATED ACCIDENT.

New York is concerned just now, and justly so, with the accident that happened to the elevated train which permitted it to crash to the street causing the death of ten and injuries to many more.

It was a most distressing accident and must of necessity result in a thorough examination to not only determine the cause but to learn why such safeguards as were supposed to exist had failed.

Bad accidents have occurred before but new emphasis is placed by this affair upon the character of the guard rails and upon the manner that exists in wooden cars. Had the train been made up of steel cars there would have been no insurance against the cars going off the rails and into the street, but these would have been no danger from fire.

It remains to be determined whether the guard rails were rotten and whether the elevated structure as well as the cars were in proper condition to give that degree of protection to the patrons of the road and the users of the highway below that they had reason to expect.

Such affairs are fortunately few and far between, but that does not warrant any oversight in getting at the facts and responsibilities in this particular instance. It is well to know whether conditions are such that repetitions can be expected that there may be proper insistence upon the establishment of the necessary safeguards for the public. An investigation should show whether there was any negligence and what steps need to be taken to prevent any more of a like nature.

DECREASED LYNCHINGS.

For the first half of the year those who are particularly interested in the suppression of lynching are displaying much satisfaction over the fact that there has been a marked decrease in the number of lynchings thus far this year in comparison with the same period a year ago. This is based upon the figures which show but 11 lynchings this year where there were 33 last year.

In only one instance was the charge of attacking a white woman the cause for the mob violence, theft, accusing another of theft, being a striker and aiding a fugitive to escape being considered sufficient to take life.

Conditions vary from year to year and it seems a bit too soon to figure that because there has been a slump in lynchings for six months that it is going to continue. The second half of the year may more than make up for the indications of reform which have thus far been manifested. Nevertheless there are those who have been figuring the causes for the decrease and secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People attributes it to agitation for the anti-lynch law, the migration of the Negroes to the north and the desire to surround such labor with greater protection in order to keep it in the south.

There seems to be some plausibility in such reasons, but it will be desirable to experience a longer test before they are accepted. To bring about such a reform in such a short period of time is no small accomplishment. It is sincerely hoped that the decrease is going to be permanent and that respect for law and order will be established, but something more conclusive in the way of proof will have to be provided.

TWICE IN ONE DAY

"Anybody home in this house?" called the philosophical father cheerily, as he hung up his hat in the hall. Silence. He took the stairs two at a time. A crack of light showed under the playroom door—a little girl's voice, in subdued monologue, came from behind it. Another voice called weakly from the end of the hall. "That you, Pip?"

Their room was dark, and smelled of camphor. He bent solicitously over the bed. "Headache?"

"One of my worst. I spanked Pip."

With a sigh of mingled relief and vexation, the philosophical father sat down on the edge of the bed.

"Upon my word, Elinor—you need a spanking yourself. You take things so seriously. Can't you punish the children cheerfully when they're in wrong and forget about it?"

"Not very cheerfully—even when they're wrong. And, this time I was wrong and Pip was right."

"Right your grannY! The young scamp!"

"He was—but how was I to know? He's so terribly hard on his clothes!"

"All boys——"

"Yes, but he's more than usually careless. Yesterday I took him to town and bought him that new suit to wear when he went to spend Sunday with your father. He wasn't out of sight more than two minutes, while I bought a magazine in the station. And yet this morning, when I came to dress him, there was a hole as big as a dollar right in the seat of those new trousers—with a big sticky spot all around it."

"The little rascal! What—and where?"

"I couldn't imagine and he couldn't remember. He never can. It's been an awful week. I was tired and cross and in a hurry. Then Tilda took the trousers to clean them and discovered that it was chocolate, that he had sat on and melted and a mouse had done the rest. And Pip began to howl in earnest: 'My chocolate bar! I bought it in the station, and I was keeping it till after dinner, to be a good boy!' And I had spanked him! Oh, I was so ashamed!"

The philosophical father repressed a chuckle.

"How's Marianne?" he asked.

"Eating her supper in the playroom. I wish you'd go and look after her, Phil. She has a way of drinking her milk all at one gulp, and then turning the glass upside down that drives me frantic. She calls it 'swoggling.' It makes a solid lump in her stomach, I know—and a greasy ring on the tablecloth. She always has her milk in that straight, white glass mother gave her, and she says when she turns it upside down it looks full again. It's just the color of milk, you know."

"I'll see to her. And try to forget the other thing. Where's your sense of humor, Elinor?"

She waved him weakly away.

The first thing that caught his eye as he opened the playroom door was the smooth, white surface of a glass that had evidently been turned upside down—a straight little glass, milk white. Hushing Marianne's welcoming crow with uplifted finger, he walked swiftly to the table and turned the glass over with a jerk. Milk deluged the table, filling the plates. Milk flooded Marianna, soaking her blue bathrobe and pink pajamas. Milk spattered her father from his head to his feet. Tilda filled the glass quite level with the rim, and Marianne had not even sipped it. Her father's dilemma was not wasted on Marianne. Squealing with joy, she capered.

"Daddy spilled it!" she shrieked. "Daddy did it! He thought I swoggled, but I never! Tilda filled it full up, and daddy spilled it!"

He had had an unusually hard day. Elinor's headaches always troubled him. Noise of any kind he found extremely distasteful. He reached for Marianne.

"Phil! Wait!" called Elinor from the doorway. Her head was wrapped in a towel, but her voice broke with laughter. "Not two of us!" she begged. "Not the same day! Where's your sense of humor?"

A small, blue-clad figure broke from Philip's hold, pigtails flying, and caught the conscientious mother around the knees.

"Go back to bed!" said Philip. "You'll make your headache worse."

"It's better," answered Elinor, surprised herself to find that this was true. "It's really better. I believe you've cured it!"

"Oh, you women!" said the philosophical father.—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Can Work to Save Europe.

Mr. Editor: It was a pleasure to see the picture of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt in a recent edition of your paper for it is an inspiration to look into her strong face, which embodies the ideal womanhood. Since her return from abroad she has given a message to our women that is astounding. She relates that prominent men in Europe convinced her that the nations of the old world are looking to the women of America to rescue them from the depths of despair, for they are helpless in the face of the governments that have been set up. Those who have read The Decadence of Europe, by the former premier of Italy will realize to what depths of despair the thinking men of great experience have fallen; for he believes that Europe is drifting to the dark ages and states in this widely read book that "they are on the verge of moral and intellectual as well as financial bankruptcy." Mrs. Catt, knowing this while in Italy, asked Premier Nitti if he thought women could be of any assistance and what their function was in this crisis. He replied "that the women of the United States could actually bring about the stabilization and salvation of Europe, because they could make public opinion, that if they decided to help Europe they could make the men do it." It is very evident that European nations have great faith in American women. This being a fact, increases the responsibility of women which we cannot ignore. It is a fact that the women of Greece and Turkey have made an appeal to the American women to help them and if Premier Nitti should bring about a general appeal from all the great nations will our women be ready to be the torchbearers to these nations who are suffering from the darkness of the human heart? Have we sufficient light for the kind of social brotherhood they stand in need of, for the work and leadership, for duty and love? Mrs. Catt thinks we have. She says, "Women are our most effective organizers of public sentiment and public opinion. They are our ablest educators in this field, and they need not work alone. There are many men ready to help them if they will undertake the task." She has had the opportunity to know. In the book of books, the Bible, we have a marvelous example of what one woman could do and did do—saved Israel when this nation was in its death struggle, and there was not a man who had the courage or ability to do it. Deborah, and the land, had peace forty years. She was a judge and prophetess.

What women have done, women can do again.

Wives of Famous Men

Mary Willis Ambler, Wife of John Marshall

A delicate, high strung girl, hardly adequate to the rigors of a comparatively new and war-torn country, was Mary Willis Ambler, wife of John Marshall, first Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. Miss Ambler was the daughter of Jacqueline Ambler, treasurer of Virginia, and had been acquainted with Mr. Marshall for many years before their marriage, which occurred after Marshall's retirement from the army.

They settled in Richmond, and for 48 years their life together was one of love and joy. The union was perfect in every respect and the Chief Justice often said that his hours at home were the happiest of his whole life. From 1783 to 1831 they were companions as well as lovers, and Marshall's devotion to his delicate wife sheds a beautiful side light upon his character. Mrs. Marshall was exceedingly nervous, the slightest noise at times causing her terrific pain, and her husband devoted his life almost entirely to serving her and maintaining the calm and quiet so necessary to her well-being.

When in 1831 Mrs. Marshall succumbed to a fatal malady the blow was so severe as to occasion the illness of her husband, who never entirely recovered from his loss.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

George Gray Barnard, whose opinion has been asked by French artists in the controversy over the authenticity of some pieces of Gothic art sent to America from France, is a celebrated American sculptor and one of the worlds leading authorities on Gothic art. Born sixty years ago, in Bellefonte, Pa., Mr. Barnard spent his youth in Chicago and pursued his first studies in the school of the Art Institute in that city. Later he went to Paris for three years of study at the French national school of fine arts. Today he is known as one of the most virile, independently American and creative of the nation's artists. The most imposing array of his work now to be seen in the country is on the exterior of the State Capitol of Pennsylvania, at Harrisburg. Public and private collections of New York city also include many fine specimens of his work.

He had taken an unusual interest in a bright four year old boy of one of his neighbors, and this interest had elicited some amusing remarks by the youngster. The other day he drove into the neighbor's place and stopped near where the four year old was playing.

"You are," encouraged the elder good naturedly. "What kind of a car are you going to get?"

"A Rhode Island Red," replied the youngster.

INJUNCTION SUIT ON TRIAL IN NEW LONDON

Trial of the suit of Barnett Gordon and Simon Selman of New London against the P. Schwartz Co. New London grain dealers was started in the superior court at New London on Tuesday morning. It is a contest over ownership and right of way of Lane A in New London. The case was still on trial when court adjourned for the day.

Gordon and Selman conduct a grain business in Bank street on property they own east of Lane A, and the defendants conduct their grain business in the Armstrong and Perry building a short distance to the west of Lane A. The plaintiffs bring an injunction to restrain the defendants from erecting a fence across Lane A which they claim is a public highway. The city of New London leases the westerly part of Lane A and the easterly part of Lane A which runs from Hamilton street, across Bank street at Perkins corner, is a public highway. Gordon & Selman also ask $5,000 damages.

The defendant company claims that Lane A had not been in use as a highway and has been abandoned for 15 years and that its predecessors in title to the property involved to it all the right, title and interest to the land along the easterly line of the plaintiffs property, designated as Lane A.

$150 VERDICT FOR LISSON WOMAN IN $10,000 SUIT AGAINST CONSTABLE

In a decision handed down Tuesday by Judge George E. Hinman of the superior court in the $10,000 damages suit of Mary Smerchansky of Lisbon against Enoch Chesney and Merton Bugbee, grand juror and constable, respectively of the town of Lisbon, Judge Hinman awards $150 damages and costs. He finds that Constable Bugbee used unnecessary force in attempting the arrest of Mrs. Smerchansky at her home on March 23, 1922, but says that Mrs. Smerchansky and her husband greatly exaggerated circumstances and the results in their testimony.

In Joseph Smerchansky's suit for $5,000 damages for the loss of his wife's services as housekeeper for six weeks and for $500 paid for medical expenses because of her injuries, Judge Hinman finds for the defendants.

Mrs. Smerchansky and her husband claimed that the officer put handcuffs on her, dragged her over the grounds, fired a revolver and beat her in attempting to serve a mittimus on her.

In his memorandum of decision on the two cases, which were recently tried before him, Judge Hinman says:

Making all due allowances for the circumstances attending the attempted service of process, including such apprehension as may have arisen from the reputation of the plaintiffs with respect to similar occasions and the fact that the plaintiffs had sufficient knowledge of English to comprehend the legitimate nature of the officers' errand, it is found that the officer, defendant Bugbee, used more force than was necessary to overcome such obstruction and resistance to service of the mittimus as was manifested on the part of Mrs. Smerchansky. This conclusion rests mainly upon the admission of the defendants themselves. The plaintiffs, in their testimony, have incredibly exaggerated the occurrences as well as the resulting consequences. For such damage as resulted from such excessive use of force the defendant Bugbee is liable. The small contribution of defendant Chesney to the exercise of force was made in good faith at the command of the officer.

The foregoing conclusion renders unnecessary a determination of the effect of the failure of the officer to return the mittimus.

The hospital treatment of and operation upon Mrs. Smerchansky was not proximately rendered necessary by any act of the defendant, hence is not an element in her damages and her husband is not entitled to recover for the expense thereof.

Judgment in the case of Mary Smerchansky is that plaintiff recover of the defendant Bugbee $150 and her costs. In the case of Joseph Smerchansky, judgment for the defendants.

JUDGE DECIDES AMOUNT IN STONINGTON FORECLOSURE

Foreclosure on real estate on Hazlebor street in Stonington was granted by Judge George E. Hinman of the superior court in a decision handed down Tuesday in the suit of Walter J. Schmidt and Stanis Deery of New York against Hamilton E. and Blanch Reynolds of New York and others.

Judge Hinman says in his memorandum of decision:

"The disputed questions are: (1.) the amount loaned on the security of the assigned mortgage; (2.) the amount of payments on account of principal; and (3.) the date from which interest is to be computed.

"Not only the note but also the amount of the interest payment made July 20, 1918 indicate that the principal sum was $3,500 and not $4,000 as claimed by the plaintiffs.

The defendants have not established the $1,000 payment on account of principal and interest claimed to have been made in December 1918. If the check was given as claimed the fact could be shown by the books of the bank even if the paid check be lost.

Payment of interest to August 1, 1918 is established and interest from that date amounts to $647.33, making the total debt $2,047.

"The law day for defendants Reynolds may be the fourth Monday in November, 1923, succeeding days for subsequent incumbrances."

The mortgage was given Nov. 14, 1917. Ralph W. Levy of New York claims a mortgage for $1,051.74, the Cottrell Lumber Co., claims a $700 lien and Forsyth & Sons Co., claim an $80 lien.

In a suit in which Schmidt and Deary were plaintiffs and Hamilton Reynolds, defendant, brought on the common counts on a claim for $1,287.03 date Oct. 15, 1921, Judge Hinman rendered judgment for a balance of $3,208.58 with interest of $299.67 from March 21, 1921, total $2,803.35.

ROOF MOULDING PUNCTURES TOURING CAR TOP

A six foot strip of wooden moulding from the roof of the tower of the J. B. Martin Co., mill fell and first through the top of the touring car of Charles F. Whitney of 19 Hamlin street as he was driving past the mill on Franklin street just after 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, just missing Mr. Whitney's head but striking him heavily in the left thigh as he sat in the middle of the front seat. His leg was badly bruised. The piece of heavy rainsoaked wood remained standing at his left, with one end on the cushion and the other sticking out through the large hole that had been punctured in the top of the machine.

By good luck Mr. Whitney was sitting in the middle of the seat because of the rain instead of in the usual driver's position on the left side. The stick of wood came through the top directly over the driver's seat and would probably have struck him on the top of the head if he had been in his accustomed place.

Witnesses to the accident declared that as the strip of wood came off the tower it fell in a curve and shot like an arrow through the top of the automobile.

The church platform was decorated entirely in green, with an arch of laurel in the center. Pine laurel and oak boughs with ferns and palms were effectively arranged at the rear end and sides of the arch, and placed about the church. A large basket of pink peonies was on a table at one side. Before the ceremony, Charles Edward Prior, Jr., of Hartford sang several selections which included, A Bridal Measure, When to Her Lute Corinna Sings, A Rosebud, all by Clayton; I Love You More, by Dorothy Lee, and Where'er you Walk, by Handel. He was accompanied by F. S. Leonard, the church organist. As the notes of the last song died away, the wedding party entered the auditorium. The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played as the officiating clergyman, bridegroom and best man entered from the vestry door. The four ushers, Theodore A. Robinson, the bride's brother of Boston, Bradford Ricketts, the groom's brother, of Greeneville, Edward A. Faust, Jr., and Harold Faust of Jewett City, preceded the bridesmaids down the aisle. They were Misses Alice Ayer of Hartford who wore blue georgette; Edith Butts of Jewett City in yellow georgette; Ellen Faust of Jewett City and Ruth Ballou of Lisbon in pink georgette with silver slippers and hairbraids. Each bridesmaid carried a silver shepherd's staff decorated with peonies and spirea and variegated ribbons.

The maid of honor, Miss Helen Hull the bride's cousin of Jewett City, was attired in white silk lace with jade green brocade and silver hair ornament. She carried pink snapdragons.

She was followed by Norman Harvey, the little four-years old cousin of the bride from Holyoke, who wore a white suit. He carried a small silver basket done in white bows and rosebuds. Then came the bride escorted by her father. She was gowned in white satin crepe, and wore a veil of bridal illusion. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and swansonia. The best man was Kirk Ricketts, the groom's brother of Greeneville. The double ring service was used, the ceremony being performed by Rev. C. H. Ricketts, the father of the groom, assisted by Rev. ELECTRIC STORM IN ON ELECTRICAL MEN'S PICNIC

[illegible] eastern part of the state [illegible] the meeting Thursday. Union Power Company for the second annual field day of the Eastern Connecticut Power Company and affiliated companies, including the Thames Power Co., Pomeroy-Plainfield Gas and Electric Co. There were several hundred present at the outing, which was marred only by the arrival of an uninvited guest in the shape of a heavy electrical storm late in the afternoon, when the elements played havoc with the company lines in the eastern part of the state and precipitated scooting out the repair crews.

The field day events were preceded by a golf match at the Norwich Golf club in the morning between the golfers of the various companies for a cup that must be won three consecutive years to become a permanent possession. Billy Mitchell (a good name in the golfing world) turned in the low score of 43 for the nine holes. Ed Harris was second with 57 and Judge Whittlesey and R. W. Perkins fought it out for third position, the judge winning with a score of 60 while President Perkins was one stroke in the rear.

The feature event of the afternoon was a heated ball game between the E. C. P. team and a team from the affiliated companies in which the former team emerged victors by a score of 11 to 7. To add zest to the playing prizes were given for the longest hit, the most hits, most runs and the most strikeouts. Big Ed Harris, who profited by his playing experience in the Norwich Twilight league, won the first two prizes, while Maurice Flynn captured the second. The fourth prize was forced upon F. Howard Peckham, who struck out each time at bat without even so much as getting a foul strike. Jack Humphries and N. T. Moody composed the board of arbitration and J. A. French was scorer.

The first of the field events was the old timers' race, which was limited to boys of 60 years or over. This event was captured in perfect form by E. H. Larrabee, with R. W. Perkins a close but exhausted second.

The ladies competed in the hoop race with the result that honors were taken by Miss Dunne of Danielson and honorable mention went to Miss McCord of the local office.

In the 100 yard handicap race Ed Harris crossed the tape first but he was disqualified for getting the jump on the gun, and first place was awarded to Charles Brown and second to Cliff Cormier.

Miss Dodd and Miss Kingsley, both of the local office, shared the honors in the balloon race, and Mrs. Ramage was an easy winner in the spud race.

In the potato race for the ladies Gemmo of Danielson shared the honors with Cliff Cormier of the local company.

In the tug of war contest between the company teams the local office showed that they had the best pull, with the Danielson-Plainfield team second.

MacDougall captured the 100 yard championship dash, with Leahy second.

The Putnam four-man relay team captured the relay race in record time.

Cormier and Flynn won the three-legged race in spectacular fashion.

The last athletic event was the ladies' volleyball game, which was won by the combination team of the affiliated companies. A hang-up good supper, a musical program and dance completed a most wonderful day in the open.

The Uncas Power Co., winners of the stock sale contest with a 100 per cent. record, celebrated their victory by bringing Swahn's band to the festivities. The band was a very enjoyable addition to the day's enjoyment.

GIVES INSTRUCTIVE TALK ON CHILD'S PLAY PERIODS

The second session of the Recreation Institute that is being conducted under the auspices of the municipal recreation commission was held Tuesday morning at the Y. M. C. A. building with an enrollment of twenty-four young women, an increase of nine over the attendance of Monday. The lecture by Miss Ruth Sherburne of the Playground and Recreation Association of America was on Play Periods, a discussion of the physical and mental growth of the child from infancy to the age of six, and the resulting play interests. The subject will be continued in the lecture today (Wednesday) dealing with the periods in the child's life from seven years through adolescence.

In presenting the subject, Miss Sherburne said, "In order fully to understand play progression, the transition of interest from one type of play interest to another, it is necessary to have a pretty thorough knowledge of the anatomical and physiological as well as the psychological changes that take place as the child develops from infancy on. The growing body itself is an explanation of the fact of play, while his environment both physical and social pours in upon his senses a constant stream of stimulation, suggesting the particular act of the immediate present, the type of activity he indulges in is determined by the stage of development his growing body has reached.

"For convenience in making the study, various students have divided the life of the child into age periods, though they warn that we must not imagine that there is an abrupt change from one stage to another nor that there is any general law that applies without variation to the individual. Dr. George E. Johnson of Harvard, in his admirable work on the subject, Education Through Plays and Games, has made five groups; the first, ages 0-3; second, 4-6, third 7-9, fourth 10-11, fifth 13-on.

"In speaking of the marvelous physical and mental development during the first three years of the child's life, Dr. Johnson calls attention to the fact that at birth the brain fibres are incomplete, the nerve endings in the skin are not perfected, the different parts of the brain are not connected, and the striped muscles are very undeveloped. The child is without intelligence and without control over the muscles of the body. The first three years tremendous progress is made, however. They are spent in the development of his senses, in gaining control of fundamental movements, in acquiring speech, progress that is made through constant playful experimentation with movements and senses and through playful imitation of sights and sounds around him. It is all-important that he should have the right environment for this play.

"From the age of 4 to 6 there is a very rapid growth of both body and brain and it is a period of great physical activity—a period of perpetual motion during waking hours. Memory is strengthening so that the child has distinct pictures, but because reasoning and judgment are weak compared with sensory powers, the child has hosts of quaint notions and asks questions that convulse us. Imagination is highly developed and hence his play is largely imitative and dramatic. However, in this sort of play, the child is not just pretending, he is actually living the part he has assumed. It is during this period that he ceases to play with other children, but nevertheless the 5 year old is active, self-assertive and highly individualistic. He has no idea of co-operation, hence he has little interest in formal games. His interest centers in the activity itself and in the result. He likes the active play such as running, [illegible] digging, imitative or dramatic [illegible] as [illegible] policeman, [illegible] pioneer, [illegible] [illegible]

Gives Reasons for Decision.

Judge Hinman in his decision in the case of Mary Smerchansky vs. Enoch Chesney et al, gives the following reasons for his decision:

"The defendant Bugbee used more force than was necessary to overcome such obstruction and resistance to service of the mittimus as was manifested on the part of Mrs. Smerchansky. This conclusion rests mainly upon the admission of the defendants themselves. The plaintiffs, in their testimony, have incredibly exaggerated the occurrences as well as the resulting consequences. For such damage as resulted from such excessive use of force the defendant Bugbee is liable. The small contribution of defendant Chesney to the exercise of force was made in good faith at the command of the officer.

"The foregoing conclusion renders unnecessary a determination of the effect of the failure of the officer to return the mittimus.

"The hospital treatment of and operation upon Mrs. Smerchansky was not proximately rendered necessary by any act of the defendant, hence is not an element in her damages and her husband is not entitled to recover for the expense thereof.

"Judgment in the case of Mary Smerchansky is that plaintiff recover of the defendant Bugbee $150 and her costs. In the case of Joseph Smerchansky, judgment for the defendants."

Twenty-five children each carrying a bouquet of roses, and each representing one year of sacerdotal life, went forward and dropped their gifts into a huge basket which stood near Father Bellerose. Sustains Plea in Abatement.

A plea in abatement has been sustained by Judge George E. Hinman in a decision handed down Tuesday in the suit of Thomas M. Shields, administrator of the estate of Saxton Gordon, against the Carpenter Mfg. Co. of New London. The defendant's plea in abatement was on the ground that the writ was signed and issued by Thomas M. Shields, acting as justice of the peace, who is the same person described as the plaintiff, acting as administrator in said action, whereas said writ should have been signed and issued by a magistrate who was not a party to the action or pecuniarily or otherwise interested therein or in any judgment to be rendered therein.

The suit is a $10,000 damage suit for the death of Saxton Gordon, two years old, who was struck and fatally injured by a Carpenter Co. motor truck on May 8, 1920.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Such inattention as Danielson has received this season from Thunder & Lightning, Inc., was repaid with accrued interest Tuesday afternoon. There were times when more than those who admit they are timid got a thrill out of a spectacular electrical storm that broke out of a sky that had darkened in forbidding manner.

The roll of the thunder and the sharp flashing of lightning recalled to many of the ex-service men some of their tense moments overseas. The booming of the aerial artillery would have done credit to some of the "barrages" that were used over there. There were times when the crashing of the storm would have done credit to one's conception of a friendly talk between Bryan and Ford as to which was really running the show. In fact, it was an awe-inspiring phenomena.

Lightning struck in a number of places in the vicinity, but no fires resulted and no damage of very great importance was reported. Such rain as fell was badly needed, for in many places in and about Danielson grass was turning from a rich green to a faded brown and streams were lower than is usually the case at this time of year.

The storm brought some relief, too, from the heat of another day during which the mercury had persistently hung above the 90 mark.

Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 at his home on Broad street many friends of Clarence A. Potter, former treasurer of the Brooklyn Savings bank, gathered to attend his funeral services, conducted by Rev. Walter B. Williams, pastor of the Westfield Congregational church. During the service a quartet from Morias lodge, A. F. and A. M., sang Remember Now Thy Creator. The bearers were J. Arthur Atwood, Sidney W. Bard, George H. Call, Sherwood B. Potter, Irving W. Davis and F. E. Bitgood. Burial was in the South cemetery at Brooklyn. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements. Business was suspended in Danielson from 2.30 to 2.30 as a mark of respect to Mr. Potter.

At a regular meeting of the Danielson Trust company this week a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum was declared, payable to stockholders on July 2. Treasurer Clifford H. Starkweather reported that the trust company has enjoyed record deposits for the past six months, the new savings department, which pays 4 1-2 per cent. interest, showing a gain of $143,000 since Jan. 1. The trust company was organized in 1914 and does a general banking business, having checking, savings, trusts, foreign and safe deposit departments. J. Arthur Atwood is president of the bank; Frederick A. Jacobs, vice president; C. H. Starkweather, treasurer, and Harry E. Magoon, assistant treasurer.

Some wiseacre some time in the past made the remark that laws are made to be broken. This appears to be as true now as ever. While the painting of safety lanes on the pavements of busy streets of the borough does not necessarily constitute a law, they are at least a reminder that people who still use their feet to get about on have some rights as well as those who ride about in motor cars. The traffic lanes are supposed to be safety zones, wherein a person may cross a street without risking life or limb. They should be, and are intended to be, a warning to motorists to cross them at very reasonable rates of speed and to slow down and stop if necessary, if people are using them. It so happens that many motorists drive at them like a fullback engaged in a line plunge and expect that when they sound their horns anyone who happens to be walking will crawl under a car or anything else that affords protection. This is entirely the wrong idea, the police say, and, if necessary, they will demonstrate to those who are inclined not to respect the traffic lanes.

If Danielson does not respond to the oft-repeated invitation of the East Killingly committee on the observance of the Fourth to turn out in numbers and visit the highland section of the town on the great holiday, East Killingly is going to be disappointed. Up where the air is pure and the hospitality unbounded there is a call—almost a dare—for Danielson motorists to demonstrate whether they can decorate touring cars sufficiently well to win one of the many money prizes that is offered for the best decorated machines that will appear in the parade on the morning of the Fourth. East Killingly is willing to risk its own chances of winning against any and all others, but they want a big parade and can only have as large as they want by getting motorists from miles around to make miles long. They are a great band of celebrators at East Killingly and never do things by halves, so whether local entrants win a prize or not they will be assured of a fine time and of holiday hours well spent.

Announcement was made by the Danielson Trust company of prizes awarded in its baseball bank contest. About a month ago the institution put out 100 baseball banks—that is, a bank in the shape of a baseball. Two of the banks issued each contained a $5 gold piece. Louis Dube, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Dube, held one of these banks, while the other has not been returned. James A. Danielson, Jr., won first prize for having the largest deposit of any of the banks returned and second prize went to Russell E. Danielson. Earl J. LeClair, John W. Prentice and Elizabeth B. Prentice won prizes of $1 each.

The effects of the strike of telephone operators at city points in Rhode Island and Massachusetts was felt here Tuesday by some of those who attempted to get into communication with people in the areas mentioned. With greatly restricted forces cities like Providence were slow in getting calls through, a fact that should not be charged against the local force of operators.

To make it a real day for the telephone people a wicked electrical storm hit this territory in the late afternoon and played havoc with lines, all of which will be restored to service as rapidly as possible.

Numbers of Danielson people were at Putnam Tuesday to see the Sparks circus. Danielson does not appear in line for any circus attractions this year, as the bookings show most of the worth while outfits heading west for the remainder of the summer season.

Attention is being given by state highway department repair crews to fixing little seams in the concrete paving in North Main street.

Warden and Mrs. W. A. Burrows have gone to their cottage at Oakland Beach for the summer. Warden Burrows will return here week ends and whenever his presence is required to attend to borough matters.

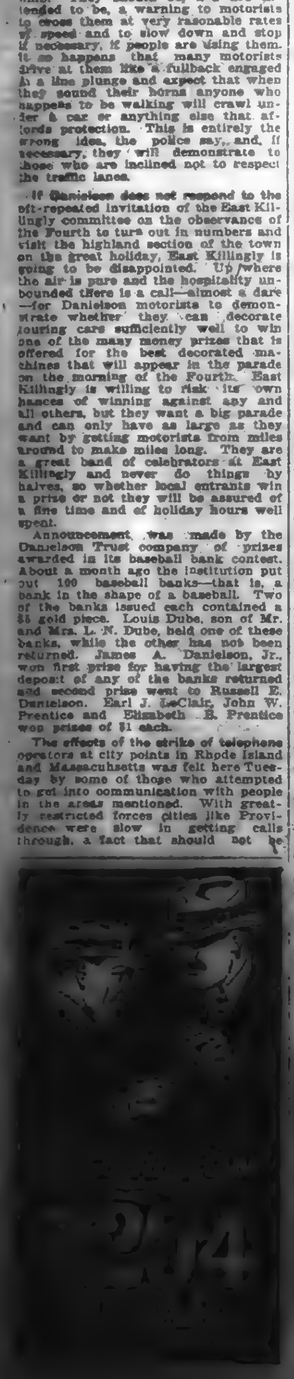
There were 20 prisoners at the county jail at Brooklyn Tuesday enough to keep up the farm work that is a feature of activities at the institution at this time of year.

Mr. and Mrs. John Greeley had as guests Sunday Mrs. Maria Coffey and Misses Annie and Lena Coffey, Mrs. Ellen Coffey, Dr. John Coffey and wife and baby, Olive Coffey, Mr. and Mrs. John Brenners, Mr. and Mrs. George Gearty, all of Providence, R. I.

Miss Sadie Prasey entertained her cousin, Ida Prasey, of Oakland Beach, Sunday.

Arthur B. Minton of New Rochelle, N. Y., was a visitor with friends in Danielson Tuesday.

There have been no sessions of the town court this week, an indication of peaceful preparation for the holiday.



PUTNAM

At noon Tuesday at the Congregational church in Thompson, Miss Mary Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Elliott, and Charles Van Brunt Cushman of Washington, D. C., were united in marriage in the presence of a large number of guests representative of many cities in New England and other parts of the country. It was the largest wedding of the season in this section of eastern Connecticut.

Rev. John N. Lewis, rector of St. John's church, Waterbury, was the officiating clergyman. Rev. Mr. Lewis is officially connected with Westover school, Middlebury, of which the bride and his sisters are graduates.

Miss Frances Elliott, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Harriet Roger of Boston, Miss Josephine Jenks of Providence, Miss A. E. Rosemund of Boston, Miss Molly Babcock and Miss Anna Stillman of New York, Miss Mary Bulkeley of Detroit, Miss Birch Warnes of New Haven, Miss Josephine Choate of Southboro, Mass., and Mrs. Geoffrey Smith of Philadelphia.

Mr. Cushman's ushers included Brooks Potter, Arthur Sharpe, Hollis Thayer, and Scott Blanchard of Boston, Thomas Nickerson, John Stewart, Ass Davis, John Lodge and Alexander White of New York and Courtland Hoppin of Pomfret.

Owing to the fact that there have been recent deaths in the uniting families the reception following the marriage was limited in atendance to members of he immediate families and the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Cushman will go abroad for their honeymoon, returning in the fall to live at Cambridge, Massa, where Mr. Cushman is a members of the class of 1925, Harvard university.

Mr. Cushman is a son of Dr. Allerton Cushman and a grandson of Mrs. Courtland Hoppin of Pomfret.

The combined annual meeting of the Woman's Board and the Guild of the Day Kimball hospital will be held Friday afternoon in the Putnam chamber of commerce rooms.

Though it was difficult at times Tuesday to separate the wail of a saxophone from the blare of the "steam fiddle" and disassociate the two from the trumping of the elephants, it may be said right here and now that Putnam enjoyed its circus day and all its attendant features.

The Sparks shows came to town for the day and though they were late in getting started with their parade, due to difficulty with getting onto a lot had been selected for them on Park street, the shows opened promptly on time and were of the high order that won this circus so much approval from public and press wherever it has exhibited.

For many hundreds of people circus day starts with the unloading of the train. Also for them the next feature is watching the crew set up the lot. This year the show was booked to exhibit at Nelson Clare's field, off Park street, but the first big wagon that tried to make the entrance mired so tightly with its eight ton load that 16 horses and a pair of 200 horse power elephants failed to move it—and right then and there it became apparent to the circus people that using that lot was out of the question and that a new location must be secured forhwith.

At this juncture Putnam lodge of Elks stepped into the breach and with the fine spirit and generosity so characteristic of the order wherever its lodges are to be found said in effect: "Come on, boys, here's our field just above, all rigged up with booths and everything for our big annual outdoor fair next week—but you can use it and welcome, and if necessary we'll help you set up your show." Mayor Chapdelaine, a member of Putnam lodge and J. A. Gagne, general chairman of the fair committee, O. K.'d this deal and there was a quick change of lots and everybody was happy.

The Sparks circus this year is expanded from what it was on its last appearance here a year ago. There are more wild animal acts, more horse acts, including some imported from abroad during the winter and an increased galaxy of acrobats, aerialists and other features that go to make the Sparks show about the top liner of its size—a 20-car show in the country.

Seated under the big top at the matinee were more than 75 children from the county home in the Sawyer district of this town—gleefully watching everything to be seen—guests of the Putnam Rotary club. Half a hundred more poor children of the the city saw the matinee as guests of the Putnam Patriot. This generosity in entertaining the children did not stop with buying circus tickets, but also included the essential peanuts, popcorn and red lemonade for the little people.

The circus got away from here early this morning bound for Woonsocket, where it shows today.

Some evening this week—the date had not been decided Tuesday afternoon—all of the general officers of the American Federation of Textile Operatives are coming to Putnam to address a mass meeting of strikers who have been away from their work at the mill of the Manhassat company seven weeks today. Oliver Christian who has been directing the strike here since his early days, said Tuesday afternoon that he expects all of the general officers to be in attendance and that their addresses will bring added courage to the strikers. There are no new features in the strike as it enters its eighth week today. The strikers continue to maintain their picket lines in accordance with the court agreement. They make a careful count of the number of operatives going in and out of the plant to work every day. The company guards that were on duty at the plant for nearly seven weeks have been withdrawn, but there has been no disturbance and none is anticipated.

The strikers are carrying out a policy of peaceful picketing and this will be maintained, assurance is given.

GALES FERRY

At morning worship Sunday in the Methodist Episcopal church of the village Rev. W. D. Woodward was assisted by Mrs. Leon Brown of Danielson, singer and speaker. Mrs. Brown sang during the service three numbers, accompanying with autoharp, namely, The Ninety and Nine. For Me He Prayed and It Must Be the Breaking of the Day. Rev.
